BALTIMORE

The Market.

There was visible improvement in trade last week and this, and with favorable weather it is hoped the improvement will be continuous. At any rate we are past the date which marks the season of inaction. The impulse of returning activity is felt in the markets, as well as in the stores, and a better feeling prevails all around. Last week one factor in the situation was the Hebrew New Year, which created considerable demand for decorations and cut flowers, many good grade flowers rather difficult to supply just at this season being called for.

Carnations are arriving in small lots, but are good, also large quantities of Golden Glow mums, which find ready sale. Ferns are in steady demand and several large department stores are handling them in large quantities.

The weather is changeable, but decidedly autumnal, and the nights cool. The evil genius of mildew hovers near, and if the low temperature continues, firing will have to be resorted to in the rose houses.

Various Notes.

Halliday Bros. cut some extra fine Golden Glow mums last week, of which they have a large house full.

J. Bolgiano & Son have contracted for 30,000 geranium plants to be delivered next spring and 14,000 scarlet sage.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club will attend the dahlia show at R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., White Marsh, September 28. Some extra fine novelties can be seen here, which will be a credit to any dahlia collection. Q.

CLINTON, MASS.

At the last annual fair of the Worcester East Agricultural Society, held in this city, there was the usual aquatic display from the Bayard Thayer gardens. E. V. R. Thayer's specialty of orchids was shown, though not in such profusion as in past years. J. E. Thayer's display included some remarkable geraniums grown in standard form. E. W. Breed showed lilies of the valley, celosia and a palm of especial beauty. F. P. Sawyer had a beautiful showing of foliage plants. Both florists showed designs. J. L. Moore, of Northboro, showed gladioli and dahlias and B. Hammond Tracy, of Wenham, gladioli in profusion. In the cut flower department E. W. Breed showed gloxinias, snapdragons and other flowers.

The Market.

Business is about the same as usual, not having increased to any great extent. At present it is far too warm to be comfortable, though we have had a night or two when firing was necessary, especially for roses.

Some good Bride, Bridesmaid and Ivory are being cut. Killarney and My Maryland are looking well. My Maryland is still short-stemmed, but has a fine color. Carnations are short-stemmed, but the blooms are good.

Various Notes.

Julius Niednagel & Sons are busy putting in their new 150 horse-power boiler and building a new office and salesroom.

Louis Fritsch has his new carnation house about finished and will soon have the carnations planted. He will heat the house by hot water.

Austin Wallace has several benches of sweet peas planted for winter blooming. His mums are growing nicely.

A visit to Henry Seymour found him busy on several large funeral designs. His carnations are short, but the flowers are extra good.

William Ryan, one of the employees of the Wm. Blackman Floral Co., disappeared September 4 and nothing has been heard of him since. He left no word and said nothing to anybody about leaving. He came here from St. Louis three or four years ago, as a contractor.

E. L. F.

DES MOINES, IA.

At the recent state fair there was a rather better display of retail cut flower work than in previous years, but competition was limited to the local florists. Liberal prizes were offered, three in each class, and there was much interest in the competition. John T. Temple, of Davenport, was the judge. The awards in the classes for made-up work were as follows:

Funeral design, Lozier's, first; Iowa Floral Co., second; William Trillow, third.
Table decoration, Lozier's, first; William Trillow, second; Lozier's, third.
Floral basket, Lozier's, first; Iowa Floral Co., second; William Trillow, third.

NEWPORT.

Arthur Griffin has resigned his position as gardener for Commodore Elbridge T. Gerry.

Mrs. Robert Goellet, who annually gives the Newport Horticultural Society something for premiums, has presented it with $100 for next year's shows. This will be divided into four prizes.

James Sharkey has resigned his position as gardener for Mrs. E. H. G. Slater.

Newport has a new North Pole dahlia. It is a handsome white flower and was christened by James Robertson, president of the Newport Horticultural Society. With this flower Mr. Robertson, who is gardener for Mrs. T. O. Richardson, won a medal at the New England dahlia show, at Boston, last week for the best seedling.

William J. Galvin, of this city, after next month will be the manager of Thomas Galvin's floral establishment at Back Bay, Boston. Mr. Galvin has been in the florists' business with his father, Thomas Galvin, in this city all his life.

The autumn exhibition of the Newport Horticultural Society, which opened September 18 at Masonic hall, was one of the most successful in the history of the organization. Not only was there a larger number of exhibits, but the introduction of new classes gave the show a greater variety and added new interest to the competition and to the show as a spectacle. It was quite a dahlia show and these handsome autumn flowers were shown in great variety of form and color. There was also a good showing of begonias, geraniums, roses, orchids, gladioli and other flowers. There were also good displays of ferns, flowering and decorative plants in groups and single plants, which occupied considerable space on the main floor. W. H. M.

HARTFORD, CONN.—The Connecticut Horticultural Society has issued a schedule of prizes to be offered at its dahlia show, in Unity hall, September 23 and 24, and at its chrysanthemum show, in Putnam Phalanx hall, November 4 and 5. The secretary of the society is George W. Smith, Melrose, Conn. At the last meeting of the society there was an exhibit of thirty-six varieties of asters grown by Peter Zuger, head gardener at Elizabeth park, and there were some hardy perennials shown by President J. F. Huss. T. P. Brown, of Windsor, exhibited eight beautiful varieties of tuberous begonias.

Greenhouse Heating.

It may be noted that most of the boiler explosions take place the first time the boiler is fired for the season. It is worth while to be sure everything is as it should be before you strike the match.

A FALLING CHIMNEY.

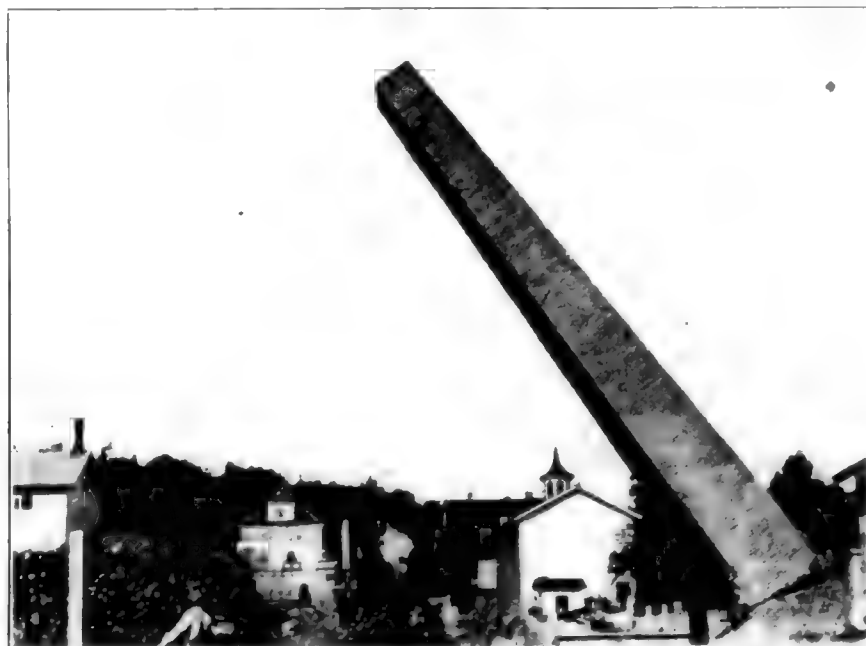

The Bell Floral Co., of Franklin, Pa., in combining two plant-growing establishments, had occasion to throw down a large brick smokestack at one of them, and the illustration shows how it looked when falling.

It was overthrown in much the same way as a tree is felled, the brick being picked out of the base on the side toward which it was desired that it should fall, while a jackscrew set on the opposite side, exerting some pressure, assisted in disturbing the chimney's equilibrium.

The chopping down of chimneys is a dangerous occupation, as they do not always fall in a compact body, as this one did, and it cannot be foretold in which direction the brick will fly.

THREE HOUSES.

We are building three connected houses, each 30x200, seven and a half feet high to the gutter and fifteen feet to the ridge, to be used for lettuce in winter and planted to cucumbers in April, with solid

As the weather is very changeable, we want plenty of valves, with which to regulate the amount of radiation. How many valves are needed and where should they be placed? Features of Improved Capitol Boilers

A knowledge of the features of Improved Capitol Boilers is important to the careful florist and greenhouse owner. Note the following points of the Improved Capitol when considering your heating needs.

Divided Sections—a positive guarantee for all winter service, because it allows for quick repair in a manner as no other boiler can do.

Thin, deep waterways, extending downward and outward over the fire—insure quick action and fuel economy, because these sections must absorb the heat.

Low water line—and corresponding low heights of flow openings on both steam and water boilers.

Large fire chamber and deep fire pot.

Rocking and dumping and locking grate.

Small, light weight units—permit Capitol Boilers to be installed where any boiler can be set; also where other boilers could not even be handled.

Did you ever see a fire pot more nearly perfect?

Note the thin, overhanging waterways,

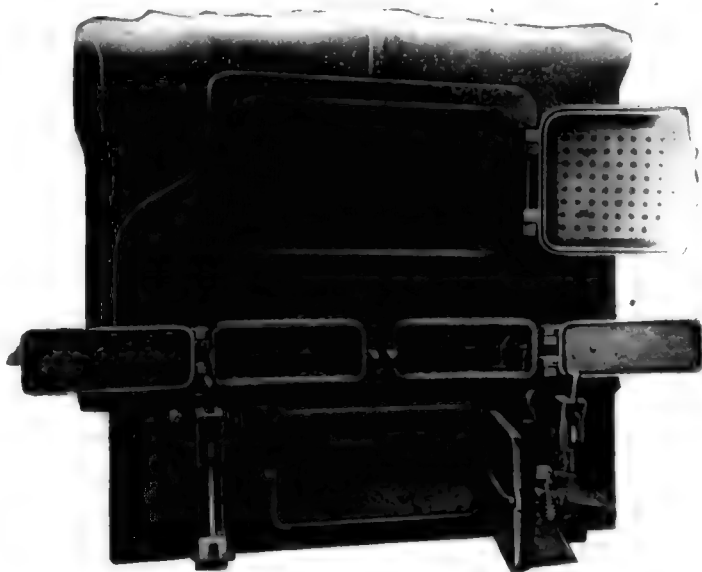

Depth of fire pot,

Large fire and clinker doors,

Roomy ash-pit, with ample sized door.

Two shakers, one for each half of the grate.

Grate bars rest in cored base. They cannot jump out of place.

We Sell Direct to the Florist

Despite some belief to the contrary, we sell direct to the florist and greenhouse owner vided with a 3-inch flow under the ridge and eighteen 1¼-inch returns. The returns may be arranged on the outside walls and upon the purlin supports, or distributed uniformly over the surface of the bench and about eighteen or twenty inches above it. In either case it will be well to place valves at each end of at least six runs of pipe in each house.

OIL FOR HEATING.

Which of the two is cheaper for obtaining steam heat in a greenhouse—clean lump coal at 12 cents per bushel or fuel oil at 7 cents per gallon, taking into consideration time and labor? I have one house, 20x75 feet, and am erecting another of the same area. I heat with a tubular, return flue boiler. Here, in southeastern Iowa, I can obtain either coal or oil at any time. O. S.

The actual cost of heat will be a little greater with the oil, but when cost of firing and the removal of ashes is considered, possibly the oil will prove more economical, but most of the oil plants have gone back to coal.

RADIATION.

Kindly let me know if two 2-inch flows and four 2-inch returns will heat a greenhouse 16x40 feet? Do you recommend four 2-inch or two 3-inch returns under each bench? The house is to grow general stock in Ontario. V. M.

To maintain a temperature of 50 degrees with a boiler temperature of 180 degrees the house 16x40 should have at least nine 2-inch pipes. One of these can be arranged to act as a flow, or riser, and eight as returns or radiators.

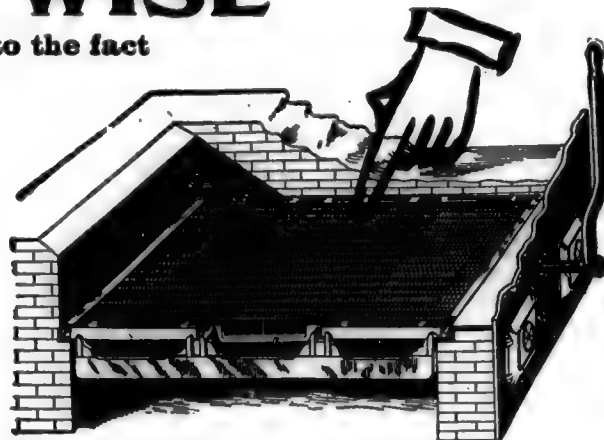

We regret we can give you no general rule for the use of pipes of various sizes. Each house must be piped according to the crops to be grown and the heat and size of pipe to be used.

ANOTHER BOILER LETS GO.

A boiler explosion in the greenhouse on the estate of Mrs. J. D. L. Layng, at Mt. Kisco, N. Y., September 13, severely injured Hugh Burch, a gardener, one of his legs being broken, and he was badly bruised about the body. He was taken to a New York hospital.

Boilers in Battery Save Fuel and Labor

With a Battery you don't have to fire the whole plant to get a little heat, as you do with one big boiler. With the boilers in battery you can fire as many on the system as you need, and you get just as much heat as you want—no more. A mighty big saving of fuel and labor. The Hitchings boilers are particularly adapted for this kind of heating.

flying colors for a large collection of splendid blooms. The cream consisted, among the newer varieties, of Ivernia, with a color described as crushed strawberry; Faunus, Mercury, Else, Country Girl; Amos Perry, a flaming scarlet; J. H. Jackson, black maroon, and Countess of Lonsdale. These were among the prize winners in the class for cactus. In the show class were Charles Lanier, Gold Medal; Victor, wine color; Papa Charmet, Jeannie Charmet, Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish and Yellow Colossal, the latter measuring nine inches across.

The prize winner for the largest single bloom entered for competition was Souv. de Gustave Doazon, a grand flower, measuring eight inches in diameter, exhibited by John Galvin, a popular member of the society and a veteran horticulturist.

N. Harold Cottam, the genial secretary and master of ceremonies, had an excellent display and keeps everyone each year on the qui vive as to what is coming next in the form of novelty in both plants and flowers.

Wm. E. Doxie exhibited a novelty in the form of a helianthus with thirty blooms on one stalk, perfect blooms, equally distributed around the stem, as on the hollyhock. Standing some ten feet tall, it was the center of attraction.

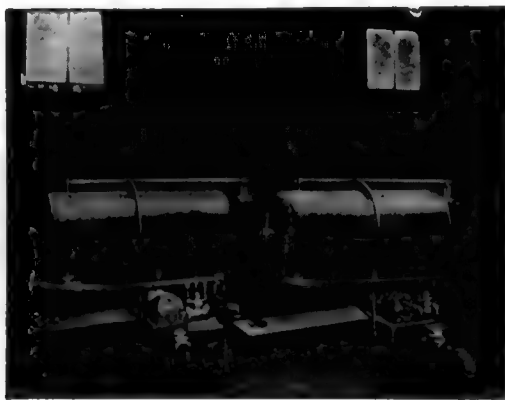

One of the most interesting and keenly contested classes was the display of herbaceous and wild flowers, a collection of the latter embracing more than fifty varieties, showing the great interest being taken in outdoor hardy flowers.

The collection of asters exhibited in competition for the prizes offered by the Yuess Gardens Co., Newburgh, brought out a choice lot of blooms that took Walter Mott, who judged the amateur class, some time to decide upon. The first prize was awarded to a vase of Violet King, each bloom measuring above four inches across, borne on very long stems.

A. Laub & Sons were an easy first on carnations, with Enchantress on stems two feet long.

The attendance was quite satisfactory, owing to fine weather and the interest taken by the wealthy residents, who lend their aid and by their presence make this the most popular flower show in the Hudson valley. It is really a forerunner of the big chrysanthemum show, held

CONNERSVILLE, IND.

Charles A. Rieman has just been granted a patent on a new plant support, which is said to be a great improvement on the support which Mr. Rieman has already sold extensively.

This support, like the other, is made of wire, but is radically different in construction. One size is adapted to use tomatoes. Two of the supports used together will serve for eight tomato hills. The two stems of each support are provided with wire rings about a foot in diameter for the support of the vines at proper distances above the ground.

The carnation support is of similar construction, though lighter. Mr. Rieman, whose whole life practically has been devoted to plant culture, is well qualified to judge what benefit such a device would be to growing plants, and he says he is confident its merits will be quickly recognized.

W. Wainwright is now at work on a machine for the making of the supports in both sizes and he is planning to manufacture the devices for the general trade.

The Market.

Business for the last week was only fair, there being some funeral work. There was quite a falling off in counter trade, owing to the warm weather. A number of department store openings gave the florists who do palm decorating all they could handle.

Flowers are not too plentiful. A fair supply of roses is to be had. Carnations are coming in in better quality and with longer stems. Asters and gladioli are becoming scarce. Quantities of good dahlias are being shipped in each day, with fair demand.

Various Notes.

John Rieman and family have been spending the summer in a cottage by the river north of Broad Ripple. Mr. Rieman's daughter, who has been ill for some time, has been benefited a great deal by the change.

Alfred Brandt missed a laurel tree from in front of his place the other day. A day or two later he found it in front of a flat a few squares north of his place. No one about the flat could explain how it got there.

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Wiegand returned this week from a three months' trip abroad. Mr. Wiegand visited many of the growers while away and reports them many years back of us in greenhouse construction. The florists in Germany use about four men to our one for the same work. He saw a number of fine stores, but, as a rule, they do not have as large store-rooms as here.

J. J. Karins, representing H. A. Dreer, was a visitor this week.

Hartje & Elder have been cutting some fine Golden Glow mums. This firm has been sending in some good carnations.

Alfred Pahud, Jr., has announced his intention of taking upon himself the responsibilities of a husband. The wedding will be next month. H. L. W.

When Writing Advertisers

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

Business was excellent last week. Funeral work has occasioned great demand, and entertainments have resulted in some big orders for the retailers. Firsts are scarce, but there is a fair supply of stock on the market. Sweet peas are gone. Asters are still good. Carnations are increasing in quantity and quality every day. Roses are good and about equal to the demand. Chrysanthemums are to be seen everywhere on the market, the price ranging from $2 to $4 per dozen.

Various Notes.

The contract for supplying the new Hotel Radisson with flowers and decorative plants does not seem to be let out to anyone as yet. Every florist had a chance to figure on it.

The L. S. Donaldson Co. obtained the decoration of the Auditorium for the banquet held there September 18 in honor of President Taft.

Henry Kusik & Co. will open a store on Fifth street, north of Hennepin avenue, October 1, for wholesale cut flowers. They expect to carry a large, complete stock. Situated, as they will be, in the center of the best express delivery, the facilities for doing a rapid business will be good. They will move their stock on Western avenue to the new store on Fifth street.

Miss Whitted finds business "all to the good," and considers her summer business highly satisfactory.

Wm. Desmond is steadily regaining his health, and is expected back to the store this month.

R. A. Latham says that business opened with a spurt. He finds stock good and is keeping quite busy. Wm. Topel had an accident while riding a motorcycle and was badly bruised, but he is back at the store as well as ever. An automobile turning a sharp corner ran into him, throwing him off the wheel, and he had a narrow escape from serious injury.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. is showing a fine crop of chrysanthemums, some of which will be in within the next ten days.

Edward Reid, of Philadelphia, stopped here on his way to his ranch in North Dakota. Other visitors were E. J. Fancourt, of Philadelphia, and C. S. Ford. M. E. M.

THIS CURVED EAVE RANGE JUST FINISHED

It is at Bridgehampton, L. I., and is one of those compact, all-around-practical plans, where the work room is at the rear and connected to the palm house by an eleven-foot propagating or fern house. With our method of combining the Curved Eave with our Sectional Iron Frame Construction, all the uncertainties and objections to other Curved Eaves have been entirely overcome. You can be absolutely certain of our Curved Eave House. The way things look now, it's undoubtedly going to be the house of the future.

If you intend building, we will gladly send you full particulars of this house, along with several photos taken from different view points.

HOT-BED SASH, With All Improvements at 50 Per Cent Below Retailers' Prices

Do not confuse Gordon-Van Tine Hot-Bed Sash with the ordinary "Hot-Bed Sash" sold by retail dealers. Our sash are not flimsy, poorly constructed affairs, with "open" joints to catch moisture and loosen or rot. They have blind-mortised, double-shouldered joints, fitted accurately and put together for keeps.

Hot-Bed Sash
Size 3x6 ft.
1 1/2 inch thick.
Glazed with 6-inch glass
Dealer's Price $3.50
Size 3x6, with 10-
inch glass, $1.75.

They are made of genuine Louisiana Red Cypress and are primed with pure linseed oil; glazed with best linseed oil, putty and plenty of points to hold glass firmly in spite of rough handling. We carry a big stock, for quick shipment, and we undersell everybody in our line. We also sell Frames and Sub-Frames, complete and ready to put together.

We Want the Name and Address of Every Florist

FLORIST.....

BASKETS AND RIBBONS.

Need of Care in Buying.

Inexperienced buyers of baskets and ribbons are apt to do some expensive experimenting and sometimes it takes years to dispose of undesirable material. To a certain extent you can sell what you push, but an article must have some intrinsic value to be anything of a taker. You can overcome some defects of form in a basket, or make them inconspicuous, but a completely awkward shape can not be transformed. A skilful selection of color may greatly improve a gaudy, shiny basket, but it can not change the leopard's spots. While it is true that you can sell what you push, you must have some liking for your wares and see their possibilities if you are to become enthusiastic over them.

If undecided as to style of baskets, buy cautiously of what the best decorators use in natural or neutral colors. Avoid decided or brilliant colors, such as deep pinks, greens or yellows. So many green baskets, contrary to what one might expect, are bold blue-green and will kill every bit of duller soft foliage which is placed near it. Then there is the opposite extreme of green, which is marked by the presence of too much yellow and which will not admit of purplish or red foliage and flowers.

The Better Baskets.

Prefer the dull gray or olive greens, inclining to the browns. Natural browns and creams found in willow, raffia and reeds are always reliable. Dull stains rather than bright dyes or varnished finishes are best. You will also be safe in buying neutral or dark brown stained willows. The natural, unfinished willow can be stained quickly to suit any color scheme.

Medium sized baskets of simple form are the most serviceable all-round stock. Handle baskets admit of more elaborate decoration. Either quite high or very low handles are the most artistic. These can be used for decorative, presentation, general or display purposes.

A basket is the most adaptable flower plant receptacle to be had. It is subject to the objections of neither a flat tray nor a set design. It is not thrown away as carelessly by the undertaker as sprays are, when they are piled several deep; neither can a basket be criticized as a set piece if it is properly filled. Every flower in it should stand out as a flower, and highly decorative effects can be obtained with a moderate amount of material. Therefore be liberal with basket stock, but if you want those of the highest possibilities buy the twigs, barks, willows and raffias in neutral and natural colors. Have plenty of leopards except of the decorated and painted breeds.

Fancy baskets are tempting to the buyer, but are not as salable articles as the medium sizes. Unless the decorative trade is well established, occasions for their use will be rare. Aside from table decorations their best uses are for displaying small flowers or ferns, for May baskets, window trimming, and for flower bearers at weddings.

Filling the Baskets.

Have pans for as many of the baskets as is practical, and their usefulness will be increased a hundred per cent. Many a time you have a few spare minutes when you can throw together a display basket if you can fill it with water without hunting up vases or jardinières to fit it. Baskets that are shown will sell. Have a few good ones for displaying flowers always filled, not indifferently, but with your best skill. Sometimes it may be all flowers needed to be pushed, and again, when flowers are scarce, a fern or two will fill out nicely.

For a hurry-up window decoration, fill

Best Width of Ribbon.

The most needed ribbon in a flower store is the wide and the narrow. Medium widths do not have much place, from No. 22 up and from No. 3 down, the better grade of satin, taffeta or moire ribbon in the greatest widths being used for larger bunches and higher-priced designs and baskets, the No. 3 and narrower for the showers and daintier clusters, while chiffon fills the bill for a tie for the average and cheaper bouquets. With a stock of ribbon from No. 5 to No. 16, which should be reduced, use it in French knots and clusters, and buy no more. Fancy flowered and painted ribbons are not in favor in the better class of flower stores. The purpose of ribbon is supposed to be to tie the flowers. It should be subordinate in color and attractiveness to the flowers themselves. Using this style of ribbon with flowers is a bit like putting flowers in a flower ornamented jar or vase. Any ribbon, chiffon or other tie which exceeds this use is out of place.

The Colors Most Needed.

The colors for which you will find the most use are white, cream, light pink, lavender, purple, yellow, green, red, and, rarely, blue. Black ribbon has no excuse for a place in a florist's ribbon case except as a society, school or lodge color in combination with some lighter color. While many ribbons are designated by a large lamp with a stock of medium length of stem. Behind one corner set a tall, slender vase of the same flowers, so that the vase holds the lid about straight up. Throw a spray of green or two so that it falls against the inside of the lid. Set a fern with long fronds close to the vase. Let the fern's fronds, long-stemmed flowers and sprays of green reach out each way as far as they will, and you have a group of interesting things, some one of which somebody will want.

flower names, the colors can scarcely be had as an exact match to the colors of the flowers with which they are to be used, owing to the differences in texture between the tissue of the flower and the fabric of the ribbon. In fact, a blend which is made by the combination of a flower and a lighter ribbon is better than a vain attempt to secure a perfect match. The glint of light on a flower of which painters despair defies a perfect match in color of flower and ribbon.

Dull stains or rather bright dyes or varnished finishes are best. You will also be safe buying neutral or dark brown stained woods. Medium sized baskets of simple form will be most serviceable all-round stock. The baskets admit of more elaborate decoration. Either quite high or very low and wide are the most artistic. These are used for decorative, presentation, or display purposes.

A basket is the most adaptable flower container next to the bud vase. It is subject to the objections of neither a flat surface nor a set design. It is not thrown away carelessly by the undertaker as vases are, when they are piled up, and neither can a basket be criticized as a set piece if it is properly filled.

A flower in it should stand out as a vase, and highly decorative effects can be obtained with a moderate amount of material. with American Beauty roses than is the American Beauty ribbon, for a Beauty slightly off color often resists all effort to harmonize with ribbons. In that case, if no red can be found, try a neutral green or a changeable red and green.

With large, heavy flowers, wide ribbon rather than narrow, and satin or other heavy ribbon rather than chiffon, is appropriate. Orchid ribbons are useful also for the soft, pastel colors in gladioli, asters and mums, while the moire autumn ribbons are the richest of all for yellow and red autumn flowers. Changeable green and gray taffetas are excellent for carnations.

A good share of the ribbon stock should be accorded to the somber greens. That does not mean the dark greens, but more of the medium and lighter greens in soft neutral colors. Blue is not often called for, but is a welcome touch to an all white spray or design for a child's funeral. A cluster of short bows of narrow blue ribbon with a few loops of white chiffon is childish-looking also.

The Chiffon.

In selecting chiffon stock steer clear of the much-figured creations called embroidered chiffons. Have most of them plain, a reasonable proportion of the dotted, and a few well selected pieces of the simple embroidered. These and the dotted are appropriate for pieces which contain fine foliage and flowers like gypsophila and stevia. The embroidered patterns should be used with one kind of flowers only, and may be used as a veil over a contrasting color in ribbon of the same width. This scheme also should be employed in a piece of one kind and color of flowers. Chiffon veiling will often reduce the strength and soften the brilliancy of a ribbon otherwise useless. A tint and shade of the same color are often valuable touches to a single colored piece; for example, use a brilliant light green with a dark olive. It will tone down the light and vivify the darker.

DESIGNS FOR A GOVERNOR.

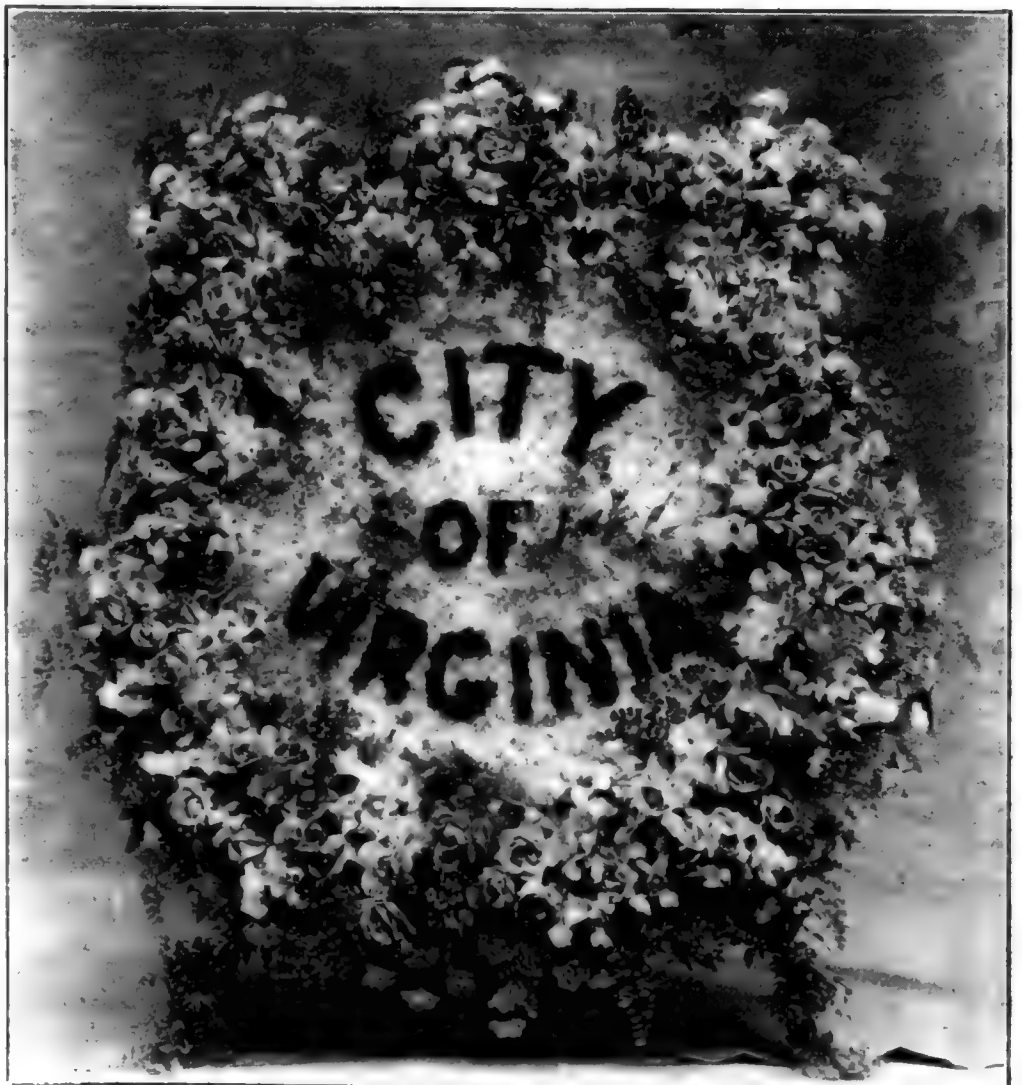

The death of a public man usually brings to the retail florists many orders for designs that are out of the ordinary, and such was the case at St. Paul last week, where the body of Governor Johnson lay in state in the Capitol. Mr. Johnson was one of the remarkable men of the times. Born in the humblest circumstances, while yet in young manhood he became governor of his state and he was considered by many as the leading candidate for the Democratic nomination for the presidency of the United States in 1912. It, therefore, was to be expected that his sudden death would bring a large number of orders for flowers.

The accompanying illustrations show two of the designs, supplied by Holm & Olson. One of these is a large plaque on an easel, the other a reproduction of the state seal. The plaque was well executed, the groundwork being of white asters and the border of Killarney roses and gladioli, with Adiantum Farleyense for green, but the seal was an exceptionally good piece of work. Magnolia foliage, which all the supply houses sell by the basket, represented a laurel wreath. The ground was of carnations, pink below and white above. The figures of the plowman and the Indian on horseback were worked out in red carnations. The little clumps of trees were of boxwood and asparagus. One of the best features of the work was the scroll at the top of the plain background, in which the state motto was inscribed. Of all the many excellent designs seen at the Statehouse, none showed more careful work than this one.

A FUNERAL DESIGN.

The pall shown in the accompanying illustration is of pure white flowers relieved by the purple of a few orchids. The aim in its arrangement is to avoid stiffness, so often seen. This covering is as soft and flexible as a blanket. Three thousand lilies of the valley were used with their own foliage underneath, and 2,000 white sweet peas, bordered with Asparagus Sprengeri. A few cattleyas relieved the whiteness. The price of this masterpiece was $500. It was arranged and executed by Charles Henry Fox.

NOTES FROM SCOTLAND.

The Royal Caledonian Horticultural Society has just celebrated its centenary in Edinburgh. The usual autumn show was styled the centenary show and four centenary cups were awarded to private gardeners for excellence in culture of fruit, flowers, plants and vegetables. At the dinner J. W. McHattie, Edinburgh city gardener, presided and the guests included Peter Barr, then still hale and hearty, but whose death followed in a few days and was recorded in the REVIEW of September 23; James Grieve, the veteran florist of Edinburgh, who has not missed a show during half of the society's existence, and other well-known members of the trade. D. W. Thomson, seed merchant, Edinburgh, traced the progress of the society from its inception in 1809 to the present date.

Scotland has lost one of its oldest, best known and most respected nurserymen in the death of John Forbes, of Halkirk. Of splendid physique, upright character and open countenance, he endeared himself by his sterling qualities to all with whom he came in contact. As a grower of phloxes, pentstemons, pansies, violas, carnations, etc., he was widely known and at the St. Louis Exposition of 1904 he was awarded a gold medal for phloxes, East Lothian stocks and other flowers.

France also is mourning over the grave of Victor Detriche, a well-known name in the nursery world. He died at Angers after a very brief illness.

EASTER LILIES.

I have a batch of Easter lilies that were potted the latter part of July and which were plunged in soil in a north coldframe and covered with four inches of straw. The sash was then replaced and they were shaded with boards. I now find that they have made growths of from one to six inches, the taller ones shooting up through the straw. Are the latter spoiled? If not, how should they be treated to hold them for Easter? I have removed them to the floor of a cool, light cellar to keep them from the present hot weather. This is my third year growing Easter lilies and I have had success before, but I started later and had to resort to hard forcing to get them in on time. I potted them early this season to allow for Easter coming earlier than last year, and the hot weather started them quickly, but they are well rooted.

E. S. H.

A cellar is rather a dark place for your lilies. It will make them spindling. Place them in a frame and shade the glass for a few days until the shoots have become green and firmer. They can be held in the frame until the middle of October. After that let them have a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees. You do not say whether you are growing Harrisii or longiflorum lilies. The former naturally come along much earlier than the longiflorums. Easter comes March 27. If you can count the buds on your plants during the first two weeks in February, your plants will be all right. Probably part of your plants may want some pushing or retarding. You can tell about Christmas how they will be.

THE NATURAL GROWER.

Many acres of glass have been constructed of late years and many improvements have sprung up in their construction and, as our trade is progressing so rapidly, the men who are placed in charge of these fast growing fields of glass must improve accordingly.

No man can learn to grow plants from reading books, nor can he expect to get his knowledge from watching others. He can get help and suggestions, of course, but the problems he must work out for himself. There is no such thing as luck in growing roses, carnations or any other plants, although it often looks that way. One grower succeeds because he has the necessary knowledge to see the little things and makes the most of them. Another fails because he does not see or feel this importance of the every-hour-occurring things which are necessary to make the plants grow and thrive.

It is not sufficient to understand how

The natural grower is the one in charge of acres of glass, in which almost every plant seems to spring into vigorous growth so long as his watchful eye is upon it and his hand is present to guide it into the various operations. Of course there are always some little things which will slip the eye of the grower in busy seasons, but those are exceptions. Therefore the natural, successful grower is born, not made, for it is not a question of mechanics, but one of inherited love for the plant line, which is the greatest gift of nature. With love for the work and an understanding of the needs of the plants in their various circumstances, success will in the end result.

HARD COAL SOOT.

Is hard coal soot suitable for plants, or do florists use only the soft coal soot?
C. E. G.

Soft coal soot is much richer in fertilizing properties than that procured from hard coal. The latter is, of course, not wholly valueless and is useful to spread on the land. Soft coal soot is largely used by florists, the best being imported.

NOTES FROM ENGLAND.

The dahlia season has been a disappointing one with English growers. It has been impossible to put up imposing displays at the shows and the competitive classes have not been well filled. The peony-flowered varieties continue to increase in popularity.

Viola cornuta purpurea, introduced by Gunn & Sons, Alton, Birmingham, England, is a distinct acquisition. It has brilliant, royal purple flowers, like large violets, and produces an abundance of flowers from early spring until late in the autumn. The plants are literally smothered with blooms all the time, and it is a valuable plant for bedding out.

The new montbreties introduced by R. Wallace & Co., Colchester, England, continue to grow in favor. The best are: Hereward, pale orange flowers, widely expanded and recurved, as in a Martagon lily; King Edmund, rich, golden-yellow flowers, fully three inches across; Lady Hamilton, erect stems studded with yellow flowers; Lord Nelson, deep orange-scarlet; Norvic, large yellow flowers, stained red; Prometheus, the finest of all, flowers four inches in diameter, deep orange with crimson ring round the eye, of free habit and robust.

DUTCH BULBS

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Boxing and Housing.

The majority of the Dutch bulbs are already to hand and the balance will soon be here. On the whole the quality of the bulbs is extra good. They are a few days later than usual in arriving and it behooves us to get such as are wanted for early forcing into the soil as speedily as possible. The whole question of the growing of these flower roots has been thrashed out so much each year that there is little now that can be said. These notes are primarily intended for the small growers, and of these there are constantly new additions. Boiled down, the important things to remember in indoor bulb culture are: Select a soil which is light and moderately rich; the manure must be old and such as will break up in one's hands readily. Sand and fine charcoal are useful additions. After the bulbs are placed in the soil they can be stood outdoors and covered with soil or ashes, or better still placed in a cool, dark cellar. The latter is much to be preferred, as the boxes and pots are more easily gotten at and cared for.

The soil must be watered thoroughly; one filling up is not usually sufficient. It is important that the soil shall never become dry, or indifferent results will follow. Where many failures result is from a too keen desire to force the bulbs. This must not be done until the flats or pots are full of roots and the growths two or three inches long. With tulips and narcissi, during the early winter months it is always best after housing them to keep them dark and moderately warm for a few days. This assists in giving length of stem. If placed directly in the light the stems will be short, even if the bulbs are in a brisk heat. Of course during February and March this is unnecessary. Avoid the use of chemical fertilizers in bulb compost. Soot, however, makes a useful addition to the soil. Put good drainage in all flats, pots or pans. After they have been well watered a layer of cinders, sand or some heavy material can be spread over them, but examine them occasionally and never let the soil approach dryness.

Hyacinths.

Hyacinths are not as popular as either tulips or narcissi commercially. Dutch growers are making great efforts to further popularize them, especially for bedding purposes, planting them thickly so that little earth will show. The call for first size hyacinths is here restricted to private gardeners. Realizable prices are insufficient, even for well grown spikes in pots, to leave any margin of profit. The second size bulbs are, however, forced quite a little. Of these a few useful varieties are: Gertrude, rose; Gigantea, shell pink; Baroness von Thuyll, white; La Grandesse, white; Queen of the Blues, light blue; King of the Blues, deep blue; Charles Dickens, light rose. What are called Dutch Romans or miniature bulbed Dutch hyacinths are inexpensive and popular in the trade. These can be planted thickly in flats like white French Romans, and are useful for cutting. The tops of hyacinth bulbs should just peep above the soil after watering.

There is a small call at some stores for hyacinths in glasses. The best quality bulbs should be used for these. The water should barely touch the bottom of the bulbs. One or two pieces of charcoal help to keep the water pure. The glasses should be placed in a dark closet in a cool room until sprouted a couple of inches. Then let them have a night temperature of 55 to 60 degrees until developed. It is necessary to add a little water to the glasses occasionally and change any which show any signs of stagnancy, as the roots will speedily rot in such.

Narcissi.

The French Trumpet Majors are already in the soil and rooting nicely. For early forcing these are useful, but they are not equal in size or quality to the Dutch varieties. Single Von Sion, usually sold as Trumpet Major, is a fine sort. Many growers grow the double Von Sions heavily. We could never see any great beauty in them, but they sell, which is a prime consideration. Of the golden trumpet varieties Golden Spur cannot be beaten. No grower who wants a lot of fine golden trumpets can go far wrong in planting this heavily. Henry Irving is another valuable sort. Emperor for late use can be grown to a moderate extent, but purchasers usually prefer Golden Spurs.

Among the bicolor Trumpet section, Princess is cheap and still heavily grown. The flower has not the substance of other forcing narcissi, but owing to its low price it remains popular in the American trade. Victoria is now so moderate in price that any grower can afford it. It cannot, however, be forced early, but is by long odds the finest bicolor Trumpet of moderate price. Empress, with its snow-white perianth and golden yellow trumpet, is a fine sort to grow. It is better in every way than the erratic Horsfieldii.

The short trumpet or chalice cup narcissi are each year gaining more favor. They are inexpensive and any country florist who caters to customers at all fastidious will find that these will sell even better than the long trumpet class. A few cheap and reliable sorts to grow are: Sir Watkin, the giant Welsh daffodil; Leedsii Mrs. Langtry, exquisite for cutting; Barri conspicuus; Figaro; Leedsii Minnie Hume; Incomparabilis Cynosure. Of course the ever popular poet's narcissus, N. poeticus, and its early form, N. poeticus ornatus, should be planted in quantity. None of the bigger and showier narcissi surpass them in beauty and popularity.

In planting narcissi, flats containing four or five inches of soil will give excellent results. The same size answers well for tulips. It is better to cover both bulbs entirely with soil and not leave the tops showing, as with hyacinths.

Tulips.

The most popular of all forcing tulips is Queen Victoria, better known as La Reine. The little Duc van Thol will come into flower rather earlier, but is too dwarf in stem to be popular. La Reine is of a delicate pink most of the season; later it comes pure white. A few other varieties which are inexpensive and good for forcing are: Belle Alliance, scarlet; Thomas Moore, apricot orange, popular color; Vermilion Brilliant, slightly higher priced than Belle Alliance, but a fine forcing variety; Proserpine, violet rose; Keizerskroon, one of the best tulips for either forcing or bedding; Yellow Prince, the best of its color for indoor culture; Rose Grisdelin, delicate pink. A couple of indispensable double varieties are: Couronne d'Or, Golden Crown, orange yellow, and Murillo, white shaded rose. There are many other tulips, some of which are good for late forcing, but for early work the foregoing moderate priced sorts still fill the center of the stage.

Miscellaneous Bulbs.

Ixias succeed best in pans and must not be covered with ashes, as in the case of many other bulbs. They grow well in a cool greenhouse. Rosea plena and craterioides major are the two most useful sorts.

Spanish iris are invaluable as cut flowers in spring. Flats, such as recommended for narcissi, will be all right for them. The bulbs can go quite thickly together. A few excellent varieties are: Thunderbolt, velvety bronze; Chrysolora, yellow; British Queen, pure white; Louise, delicate blue; Vesuvius, deep orange.

Gladiolus cardinalis or nanus like much the same treatment as Spanish iris. They sell in the markets when other flowers are a veritable glut. Peach blossom, delicate pink, is still one of the best; Salmon Queen, salmon pink; Blushing Bride, white flaked crimson; Mathilde, white, shaded delicate lavender; Sappho, delicate lavender, and Ackermanni, salmon orange, edged scarlet, are all good. The old G. Colvillei The Bride, should not be overlooked. Its constitution is less robust than varieties of the cardinalis section, but it is a useful early flowering variety.

Anemone fulgens, bright scarlet, A. coronaria The Bride and the St. Brigid, or Irish anemones in a variety of handsome shades like a cool house. Some growers plant them among their violets; others prefer to grow them in flats. They resent hard forcing, like abundant ventilation and in late winter are always popular.

Ranunculus succeeds under the same conditions as suggested for anemones. The turban varieties, with their big flowers in a great range of colors, are the best to grow. These are always good sellers at the better class stores.

Allium Neapolitanum is a useful florists' flower, much prized in Europe. The alliums are of the onion family and the pure white flowers of A. Neapolitanum are carried on long stems, making them valuable for cutting. They can be flowered in either pots or flats, treated in the same way as tulips and narcissi.

Some country florists find the several varieties of oxalis good sellers. They make admirable house plants, lasting in bloom practically the whole winter. The Bermuda buttercup, with clear yellow flowers, is the best sort. There are white pink and lavender forms of grandiflora, while Bowiei has crimson flowers. Eight bulbs will do for a 6-inch pot. All are excellent basket plants and are seen to better advantage grown in this way.

AN ENGINE IN FLOWERS.

One of the big events of the year at Toledo, O., is the King Wamba carnival, which took place this season August 23 to 28. The special feature of the carnival is a big parade, in which the business men and organizations of the town are represented by their best. The carnival this year brought to Mrs. E. Suder an unusual order, it being nothing other than the call for a floral locomotive to represent the Transportation Club of Toledo. The locomotive was required to be mounted on a wagon as a float for use in the parade. How well the Suder establishment executed the order is shown by the accompanying illustration. The design was eighteen feet long and so strongly constructed that two boys rode in the cab, representing the engine crew, as shown in the picture. The locomotive was made in the Wamba colors, which are red and yellow, the flowers used being principally gaillardias, golden rod and gladioli, with, of course, a large quantity of ferns and wild smilax. The work was done by A. A. Suder and his assistant, Thomas Glaser, and it was the largest design ever turned out at the Suder store. It made a big hit in the parade and so pleased the members of the Transportation Club, that at its next meeting it not only ordered the bill paid, but ordered "a vote of thanks for your very efficient work and great success in carrying out our idea of an engine in flowers, which we entered as a float in the industrial parade of King Wamba carnival," as they expressed it in writing to Mrs. Suder.

FROGS FOR FERTILIZER.

I am in a position where I can get large quantities of frogs' heads and bodies. Would they not make a good fertilizer if properly prepared? If so, will you please state how they should be prepared? G. L. E.

Animal matters, without any exception, are beneficial as fertilizers, for they all to properly water, mix soil, pot, etc. The man may do all these things according to the best of his ability and yet his plants will never grow and produce like those of the man who has the intuitive knowledge to realize the little needs and to make the cumulative effects of his knowledge felt just in the right way and at the right time.

The tops of hyacinth bulbs should just peep above the soil after watering.

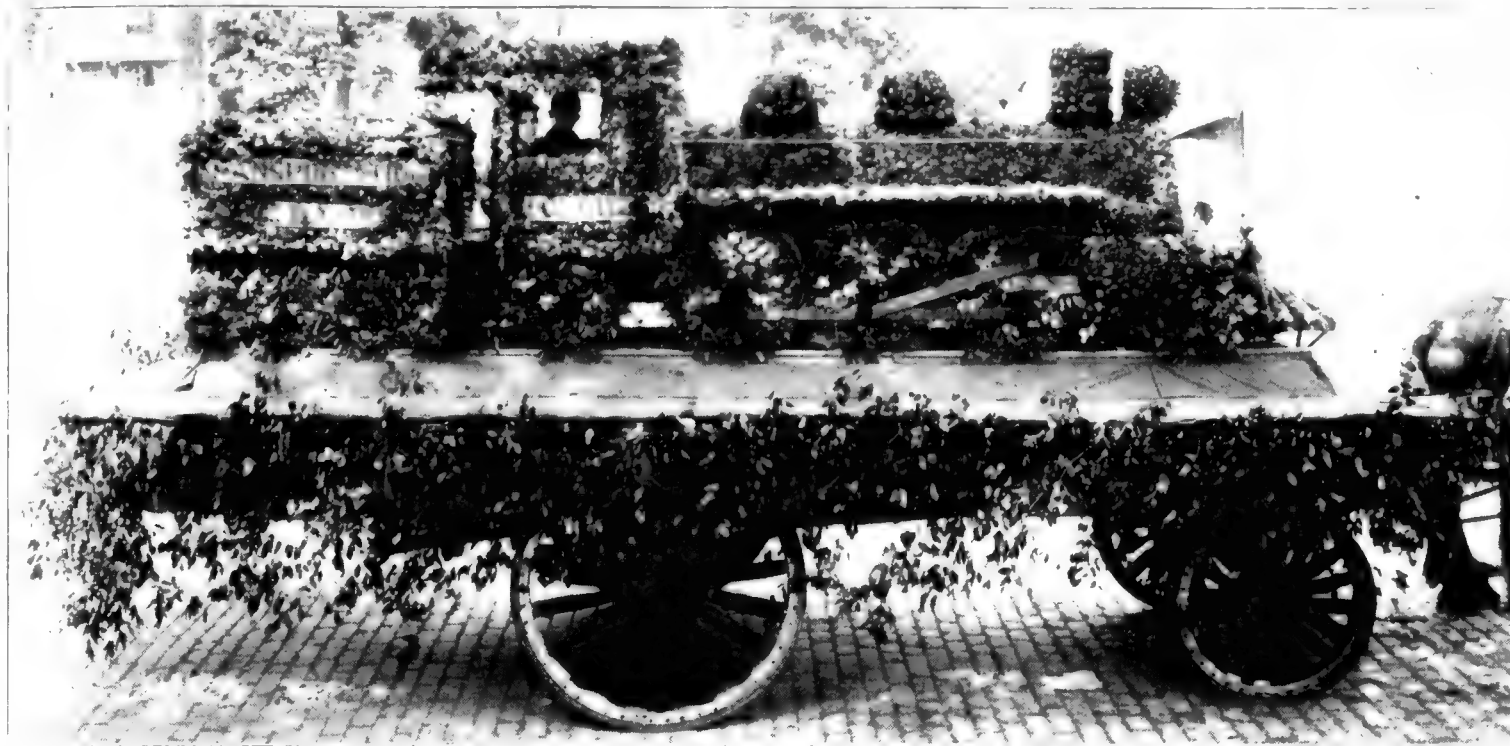

There is a small call at some stores for hyacinths in glasses. The best quality bulbs should be used for these. The water should barely touch the bottom of the bulbs. One or two pieces of charcoal help to keep the water pure. The glasses should be placed in a dark closet in a cool room until sprouted a couple of inches. Then let them have a night temperature of 55 to 60 degrees until developed. It is necessary to add a little water to the glasses occasionally and change any which show any signs of stagnancy, as the roots will speedily rot in such.

Narcissi.

The French Trumpet Majors already in the soil and rooting nicely. For early forcing these are useful, but they are not equal in size or quality to the Dutch varieties. Single Von Sion usually sold as Trumpet Major, is a first sort. Many growers grow the double Von Sions heavily. We could never see any great beauty in them, but they sell which is a prime consideration. Of the golden trumpet varieties Golden Spurs cannot be beaten. No grower who was a lot of fine golden trumpets can go wrong in planting this heavily. Her Irving is another valuable sort. Empress for late use can be grown to a moderate extent, but purchasers usually prefer Golden Spurs.

Among the bicolor Trumpet section Princess is cheap and still heavily grown. The flower has not the substance of other forcing narcissi, but owing to its low price it remains popular in the American trade. Victoria is now so moderate in price that any grower can afford it, cannot, however, be forced early, but by long odds the finest bicolor Trumpet of moderate price. Empress, with snow-white perianth and golden yellow ampet, is a fine sort to grow. It is better in every way than the erratic Horseshoe.

The short trumpet or chalice cup narcissi are each year gaining more favor. They are inexpensive and any country florist who caters to customers at all seasons will find that these will sell much better than the long trumpet class. A few cheap and reliable sorts to grow are: Sir Watkin, the giant Welsh daffodil; Leedsii Mrs. Langtry, exquisite for cutting; Barri conspicuus; Figaro; Leedsii Minnie Hume; Incomparabilis exposure. Of course the ever popular poet's narcissus, N. poeticus, and its early form, N. poeticus ornatus, should be planted in quantity. None of the bigger and showier narcissi surpass them in beauty and popularity.

In planting narcissi, flats containing four or five inches of soil will give excellent results. The same size answers well for tulips. It is better to cover both bulbs entirely with soil and not leave the tops showing, as with hyacinths.

Tulips.

The most popular of all forcing tulips is Queen Victoria, better known as La Reine. The little Duc van Thol will come into flower rather earlier, but is a dwarf in stem to be popular. La Reine is of a delicate pink most of the season; later it comes pure white. A few other varieties which are inexpensive and good for forcing are: Belle Alliance, violet; Thomas Moore, apricot orange, a popular color; Vermilion Brilliant, slightly higher priced than Belle Alliance, but a fine forcing variety; Proserpine, violet rose; Keizerskroon, one of the best tulips for either forcing or bedding; Yellow Prince, the best of its color for indoor culture; Rose Grisdelin, delicate pink. A couple of indispensable double varieties are: Couronne d'Or, Golden Crown, orange yellow, and Murillo, white shaded rose. There are many other tulips, some of which are good for late forcing, but for early work the foregoing moderate priced sorts still fill the center of the stage.

Miscellaneous Bulbs.

Ixias succeed best in pans and must not be covered with ashes, as in the case of many other bulbs. They grow well in a cool greenhouse. Rosea plena and craterioides major are the two most useful sorts.

Spanish iris are invaluable as cut flowers in spring. Flats, such as recommended for narcissi, will be all right for them. The bulbs can go quite thickly together. A few excellent varieties are: Thunderbolt, velvety bronze; Chrysolora, yellow; British Queen, pure white; Louise, delicate blue; Vesuvius, deep orange.

Gladiolus cardinalis or nanus like much the same treatment as Spanish iris. They sell in the markets when other flowers are a veritable glut. Peach blossom, delicate pink, is still one of the best; Salmon Queen, salmon pink; Blushing Bride, white flaked crimson; Mathilde, white, shaded delicate lavender; Sappho, delicate lavender, and Aekermanni, salmon orange, edged scarlet, are all good. The old G. Coivillei The Bride, should not be overlooked. Its constitution is less robust than varieties of the cardinalis section, but it is a useful early flowering variety.

Anemone fulgens, bright scarlet, A. coronaria The Bride and the St. Brigid, or Irish anemones in a variety of handsome shades like a cool house. Some growers plant them among their violets; others prefer to grow them in flats. They resent hard forcing, like abundant ventilation and in late winter are always popular.

Ranunculus succeeds under the same conditions as suggested for anemones. The turban varieties, with their big flowers in a great range of colors, are the best to grow. These are always good sellers at the better class stores.

Allium Neapolitanum is a useful florists' flower, much prized in Europe. The alliums are of the onion family and the pure white flowers of A. Neapolitanum are carried on long stems, making them valuable for cutting. They can be flowered in either pots or flats, treated in the same way as tulips and narcissi.

Some country florists find the several varieties of oxalis good sellers. They make admirable house plants, lasting in bloom practically the whole winter. The Bermuda buttercup, with clear yellow flowers, is the best sort. There are white pink and lavender forms of grandiflora, while Bowiei has crimson flowers. Eight bulbs will do for a 6-inch pot. All are excellent basket plants and are seen to better advantage grown in this way.

AN ENGINE IN FLOWERS.

One of the big events of the year at Toledo, O., is the King Wamba carnival, which took place this season August 23 to 28. The special feature of the carnival is a big parade, in which the business men and organizations of the town are represented by their best. The carnival this year brought to Mrs. E. Suder an unusual order, it being nothing other than the call for a floral locomotive to represent the Transportation Club of Toledo. The locomotive was required to be mounted on a wagon as a float for use in the parade. How well the Suder establishment executed the order is shown by the accompanying illustration. The design was eighteen feet long and so strongly constructed that two boys rode in the cab, representing the engine crew, as shown in the picture. The locomotive was made in the Wamba colors, which are red and yellow, the flowers used being principally gaillardias, golden rod and gladioli, with, of course, a large quantity of ferns and wild smilax. The work was done by A. A. Suder and his assistant, Thomas Glaser, and it was the largest design ever turned out at the Suder store. It made a big hit in the parade and so pleased the members of the Transportation Club, that at its next meeting it not only ordered the bill paid, but ordered "a vote of thanks for your very efficient work and great success in carrying out our idea of an engine in flowers, which we entered as a float in the industrial parade of King Wamba carnival," as they expressed it in writing to Mrs. Suder.

FROGS FOR FERTILIZER.

I am in a position where I can get large quantities of frogs' heads and bodies. Would they not make a good fertilizer if properly prepared? If so, will you please state how they should be prepared?

G. L. E.

Animal matters, without any exception, are beneficial as fertilizers, for they all yield, during putrefaction, gases and soluble substances that are taken up by the roots of plants. That this is the case affords no cause for wonder, because animal matters and vegetable matters are alike compounded of carbon, hydrogen, oxygen and nitrogen, with a small addition of saline matters.

The simplest method of preparing this material for fertilizing purposes would be to make a compost, using about twenty times the bulk of the material of good, rich loam and adding lime in the proportion of one peck to each cubic yard of compost. This should be turned over several times during decomposition.

COLD STORAGE LILIES.

Kindly give us cultural directions for cold storage giganteum lilies. Our giganteums have usually come fifty per cent blind and we want minute directions as to their culture and the length of time it takes to have them ready. What is the best size of bulbs to get and can they be used after forcing? B. F. C.

The sizes of longiflorums usually grown are 7 to 9. For early forcing with Harrisii 5 to 7 are frequently grown, or preferred to the larger size. The smaller bulbs appear to force more readily than the larger sizes. I have not used any giganteums from cold storage, but have not had the trouble you appear to have had with either Harrisii or multiflorums. Probably your bulbs have been kept too solidly frozen and the buds killed in the embryo shoots.

After potting cold storage lilies, stand them on the floor of a cellar or pit.

Soak with water and cover with straw, hay or some similar material. Water sparingly until the pots are full of roots. Remove to a frame when the tops are two or three inches high. Shade for a few days if the sun is hot, as the young growths are tender. Do not house until the pots are full of roots and the plants nicely started to grow. Give a night temperature of 60 to 65 degrees if you want to hurry them, but they will do 70 degrees cooler if not wanted in a hurry. Bulbs potted early in August will be all right for Christmas and those started during October will be right for Easter.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Among the Early Sorts.

The early varieties are turning in more rapidly now, Monrovia, Polly Rose, Rosiere, Pacific, and October Frost all being in evidence in the wholesale markets. Some growers who are late are making frantic efforts to push their flowers along by using heat in the houses, but the mum is a plant that will not be forced by artificial means. The time to figure for the early flowers is when the buds are being selected. A night temperature as high as 70 degrees will not bring the flowers out a day earlier than they will open in a natural temperature of 45 to 50 degrees, with abundance of air. The use of nitrate of soda or sulphate of ammonia will hasten to some extent the development of the flowers, but either will render the flowers too soft if long continued.

All the best flowers of Golden Glow are cut and little but the culls remain of this variety. It is early—no question about that, but as a money-maker it will not displace Monrovia with me. The latter is now, September 25, very fine, and with a better market in sight than we had two weeks ago, will turn in more money from a given space than did Golden Glow. One advantage with Golden Glow is that anyone can handle it easily if he does not start it too early and Monrovia needs more care to get it right, but even that advantage works against it from a financial point of view. Many florists throughout the country who sell their own flowers can make fine money out of Golden Glow, but the large wholesale houses will not have so many to handle another year, judging from the growers' talk generally.

Temperature.

The frosty nights are due now and one must pay some heed to the temperature in the houses. Do not close up the house in the late afternoon, just before the sun goes down, with the idea of bottling up enough sun heat to hold the house overnight. It is the poorest kind of economy. If the night looks like being frosty, reduce the air to an inch or so on the top. Then, if the temperature in the house goes down to 45 degrees, run a little steam through. This will keep the air dry and buoyant and prevent the moisture from settling down on the petals and causing damping.

Another cause of damping is sunlight and this must be looked out for. If one has not fed his flowers at all they will not need shading, but good quality stock will damp, and damp badly, unless shaded from the sun. As soon as the buds all show color nicely, it is the best policy to scatter a shading over the glass. The shade serves another good purpose, by holding back the flowers and giving them a chance to develop more slowly and naturally. The mum came originally from a country much cooler and moister than ours and where the sun in October has little power, while here we occasionally get days as hot as midsummer and the mum is out of its element entirely.

Flowers grown for exhibition, therefore, need to be shaded in order to bring them to their highest development, both as regards size and color.

Fumigating.

Be sure your plants are clean now, before they flower. Vain regrets in three or four weeks are of no avail. The time to get busy is now. The black fly and green fly will succumb to persistent fumigation. Remember, it is far better to fumigate several times with safety to the plants than to give them a strong dose and burn the foliage. Personally, I have never found anything cheaper or better than the prepared tobacco dust, for use now or at any other season of the year.

Look out for red spider also. This is much worse to handle than the fly, because it is under the leaves and fumigation does not hurt it. If the plants have been kept properly syringed during the summer, they should be perfectly clean now, but spider is often present when least suspected. So go over your plants carefully, because the spider weaves a web over the buds and spoils the flowers in an incredibly short space of time when the house is being kept dry. Many flowers are lost every year for lack of a careful watch just at this time.

VALKER'S GREENHOUSE.

Up in the wheat country, at Minot, D., George E. Valker is building a flourishing business. At first, trade came slowly for him, as it always does to those who are pioneers, but with increasing general prosperity in the region the florist is coming to be looked upon as a business man instead of a faddist. Of course Mr. Valker finds it necessary to do pretty nearly everything in the line, to meet the great variety of demands made upon the florist of a small city, so he sells potted plants, shrubbery, bulbs and even birds and goldfish in addition to cut flowers and designs. The accompanying illustration shows how neatly kept his greenhouse is, and what a variety of stock he carries. Mr. Valker himself stands in the picture.

MILWAUKEE'S NEW AUDITORIUM

With pride the people of Milwaukee can now point to their new Auditorium, which occupies the entire block bounded by Fifth, Sixth, Cedar and State streets. It is two stories high and has two wings, the west wing containing the main auditorium and the east wing or annex containing five small halls named respectively Juneau, Welker, Kilbourn, Layton and Plankinton. These names were chosen to perpetuate the memory of pioneers whose lives and deeds were linked with the progress of Milwaukee from the earliest times. The main hall, which is the center of attraction, is on the ground floor and covers an area of 180x330 feet, the arena proper being 100x225 feet. Around this arena, which has a seating capacity of 10,000 and is built much like the amphitheaters of olden times, are sixty-two boxes and behind and above these boxes are spacious balconies, all accessible from the street by inclined planes. The stage on the north end of this hall is sixty-eight feet wide, fifty feet deep and thirty-eight feet high. The whole structure is finished off in cement, with a stone floor, thus making it a strictly fire-proof building.

Tuesday, September 21, the dedication, which lasted the remainder of the week, was begun. There were speeches by the mayor and others, which was followed by a ball. Thursday night, September 23, was given over to the art of music and was a grand success. A large local orchestra, a chorus of 700 trained mixed voices and last, but not least, Mme. Schuman-Heink, the great contralto singer, rendered a number of selections. Every seat was taken and the large audience showed its approval by lengthy applause. Saturday afternoon, September 25, was set aside for the children, while in the evening they had what they called "All Nations' Night." This was also largely attended.

In the erection of this auditorium a long felt want and necessity has been completed and Milwaukee now has one of the best auditoriums in the country and it can justly be proud of it. The Milwaukee flower show will be held in the main hall November 11 to 14, and we trust that the American Carnation Society will convene there in 1911.

The new auditorium replaces the old Exposition building, which burned June 4, 1905, and in which the S. A. F. held its convention in 1903. E. O.

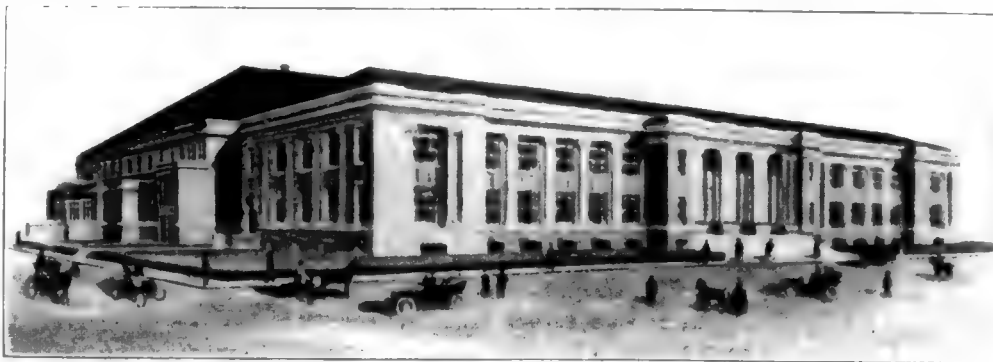

NARCISSUS FOR A SUCCESSION.

How should we plant the different varieties of the daffodil or narcissus family, so as to have a succession of the useful yellow flowers in flats in a greenhouse? B. F. C.

The various daffodils succeed well in boxes containing four to five inches of compost, that containing some well decayed manure and sand being suitable. When planting just cover the bulbs. In a box 30x12x5 you can get 100 bulbs of such sorts as Trumpet Major or Von Sion and sixty to seventy-five of such big-bulbed varieties as Emperor and Sir Watkin. After planting, the best place for the boxes is on a cellar floor where they can be kept tolerably dark. Cover the tops of the boxes with some sand or cinders to prevent the bulbs heaving up the soil.

French Trumpet Major is the earliest of the golden Trumpet forcing varieties. Started in August it will flower for Christmas. Following these come the Dutch single and double Von Sions, Golden Spur, Emperor and Victoria. The last named is the best of the bicolor Trumpet section. For a cheap variety princeps is still much grown. The flowers, however, lack the substance of the other sorts named. By bringing in a few boxes a week you can have a steady succession of daffodil flowers indoors from Christmas until Easter, 1910. Always see that the boxes are full of roots, well started into growth and never allowed to become dry. C. W.

TIME TO FLOWER VALLEY.

Will you kindly inform me how long it will take to bring cold storage valley pips in bloom? I would prefer to place the pips on the bench as soon as planted.
S. S. S.

Allow about four weeks in a minimum night temperature of 65 degrees to bring cold storage valley into flower. The pips should be placed in a case over heating pipes, a good bottom heat being essential, particularly from October to May. The case should be darkened by laying heavy paper over it, and more light and air can be admitted before the flowers begin to open. If you stand your pips directly on the bench, they will flower, but they will be shorter stemmed and take longer to come into flower. C. W.

COLD STORAGE VALLEY.

Kindly give us cultural directions for cold storage valley. We have had fair success with valley, but want you to tell us how long they will take to force without heat. Also tell us if we cannot make arrangements with some cold storage firm to keep them all the year for us, instead of buying from the middleman.
B. F. C.

There would seem to be no good reason why you cannot make arrangements with some cold storage firm to keep your pips. Unless, however, you are large growers, I would advise you to get cold storage supplies direct from a reliable dealer who makes a specialty of this work. You could have them sent weekly, fortnightly or monthly, as desired. This would really be better, for you would not then have to pay storage rent or worry about whether the pips had just the right temperature or whether they would start well when forced.

You ask how long valley kept in cold storage will take to force without heat. Much depends on the season of the year. For six months they will come along in from four to six weeks, while for the other half it would be hazardous to offer any suggestions without knowing the temperature you propose giving them. Valley comes into flower within a month in a pot in a warm house. In a structure held at 50 to 60 degrees, with no bottom heat, growth would be slow in winter. We would advise you to use bottom heat in winter at all events, keeping the pips darkened for three-fourths of the time. Plant them in clean sand. W. C.

ARAUCARIA SEEDS.

Kindly let me know if Araucaria excelsa raised from seeds is as good as if raised from cuttings. Where could I procure seeds? I have heard that some growers in Holland and Belgium import araucaria seeds from Norfolk Island. Could you refer me to a seedsman, either in America or abroad, where I could get the seeds?

L. M.

Seedling plants of Araucaria excelsa are not as good as those raised from cuttings or grafted plants, the seedlings being light and thin at the bottom and much less symmetrical than those grown from cuttings. Probably most of the seed of this pine is imported from Norfolk Island, and it is, or should be, shipped in the cone, for araucaria seed soon loses its vitality after being removed from the cone in which it has grown.

It is likely that you could get this seed by writing any of the big seed houses. If they have not got it they will get it for you.
W. H. T.

PROPAGATING FICUS.

We have two rubber plants in 10-inch pots, and several months ago we cut them off so there was only a stump about a foot high. They are now covered with small slips about two or three inches in length. Will you please tell us if we were to take them out of the pots and plant them in the ground properly for layering, would they root?

S. J. F.

The method proposed would not be a satisfactory one for the propagation of the ficus, and it would be better to wait until the shoots have made four or five leaves, and then to moss them up and root them on the plant. The operation of mossaing ficus shoots is done as follows:

Cut the shoot about half through with a sharp knife, keeping the cut open with a tiny chip of wood, for example, a bit of match-stick. Then bind a small handful of damp moss around the shoot so as to cover the cut thoroughly. Keep the moss moist, and the plant in a protected portion of the greenhouse. In a few weeks the roots should appear through the moss, at which time the shoot should be cut off and potted.
W. H. T.

SNAILS IN GREENHOUSES.

Is there any remedy for snails in the greenhouse? My place is infested with them and they are doing much damage to the young plants.
E. S. H.

Scatter air-slaked lime or fine salt under the benches. These will kill any snails which they touch. You can capture many by laying baits, such as lettuce and cabbage leaves or slices of potatoes, turnips and carrots, on benches where they are troublesome. Examine these once or twice a day and kill all snails you see. Any benches cleared of pot plants can be dusted with lime, or given a watering with salt and water. C. W.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Withered Foliage.

Plants lifted soon after a heavy rainfall quite often lose a portion of their lower foliage during reestablishment. At times, when plants are in the best condition for lifting and have been given careful attention, a considerable number may by reason of extreme weather conditions come through with a few withered leaves. These should by all means be removed, for if left on they prevent full circulation of air, furnish a lodging place for rust-mites and detract greatly from the appearance of the plants. We must admit that it is no desirable proposition to remove the dead foliage from several thousand plants, but, if taken in hand after a gentle spraying sufficient to render the leaves pliable, the operation loses much of its tediousness and liability of injuring the bark of the stem by peeling is greatly lessened.

Supports will soon need putting in place and it is obvious that the removal of dead leaves should be done beforehand, as also the application of bone meal, provided the adoption of the plan recently discussed in these notes has been considered advisable.

Method Not New.

This idea of withholding bone meal until plants have become established is not a new one, it having been advocated by experienced growers several years ago, and, while we did not adopt it at once, experiments were carried on each year, with the result that we would not at present care to return to the old method of mixing with the soil at bench-filling time.

A Necessary Precaution.

These experiments, however, proved the necessity of being careful to purchase a grade of bone carrying a good percentage of phosphoric acid in available form, otherwise the plants can derive but little benefit until the acid is made soluble by decomposition, which takes time. After having experimented with numerous brands, we have come to regard any carrying less than eighteen per cent available phosphoric acid as unprofitable to use at any price when following the plan in question.

Manner of Applying.

If the surface of the bench soil is loose by reason of quite recent cultivation, the bone may be applied clear at the rate of a 3-inch potful in each space between the rows across a 4-foot bench, but we prefer its mixture with the soil in the proportion of a 6-inch potful of bone to a bushel of soil, allowing three or four handfuls in the space mentioned above. In either case its application should be followed immediately by a light raking and a moderate watering.

It seems reasonable to suppose that on account of improper handling a large percentage of the available phosphoric acid in high grade bone is lost, also that much which is unavailable in low grade is for the same reason never assimilated by the plants for which it is intended; consequently, it is not surprising to hear the theory advanced that the use of this fertilizer is unnecessary.

GEORGE S. OSBORN.

A BEGINNER'S RESULTS.

J. W. Bruckart is a beginner in the business at Lititz, Pa. His start was made with the greenhouse shown in the accompanying illustration, 14x64, in which he grew more or less miscellaneous stock, but one bench was devoted to carnations, containing 500 plants of the Enchantress varieties. From these he cut in his first season 6,000 blooms, or an average of twelve blooms per plant, which was not so bad, considering that he had his stock in a general-purpose house. The 6,000 blooms brought locally $150, or an average of 2½ cents each. He was so encouraged by this result that this season he is adding another house 18x64 and has benched 1,700 carnation plants. The varieties are Enchantress in its different colors, white, pink and rose-pink, also Queen Louise, Winsor, Beacon and O. P. Bassett. He uses hot water for heating.

CARNATIONS IN CANADA.

The new varieties disseminated last winter are well represented at Dunlop's, of Toronto. Their growth and health were closely watched in the field, with a dry summer.

May Day made a fair growth; healthy; started off well in the house; recovery from shock of lifting, medium. Georgia was rather slow in growth in field and house; appears to lack vigor.

Carnation House of J. W. Bruckart.

Apple Blossom, good strong growth in field, doing well inside. Pink Delight, medium growth in field, but strong; starts off extra well in house, and in strong, rapid growth exceeds all other varieties, old or new.

Among the older varieties, Beacon and Victory show up well. Crimson Glow and Harlowarden run almost an even race, with the chances favoring the former. Afterglow seems to want more vigor to stand lifting from field to house.

All of the Enchantress varieties, White Perfection, Windsor and Bountiful do well here. In fact, in this part of Canada all carnations do well in the early and late season; what they will do in midwinter I cannot now say.

EDGAR MCCONNELL.

The endeavor should be to get as many roots as possible around the sides of the pots before they are forced. Roses potted and forced right away cannot be expected to give such results as those well established in the pots.

OWN-ROOT RICHMOND.

Does the Richmond rose do fairly well on its own roots? P. O.

Richmond does well on its own roots the first year, but much better the second year. Grafted stock, however, is more profitable. RIBES.

BEAUTIES FOR SUMMER.

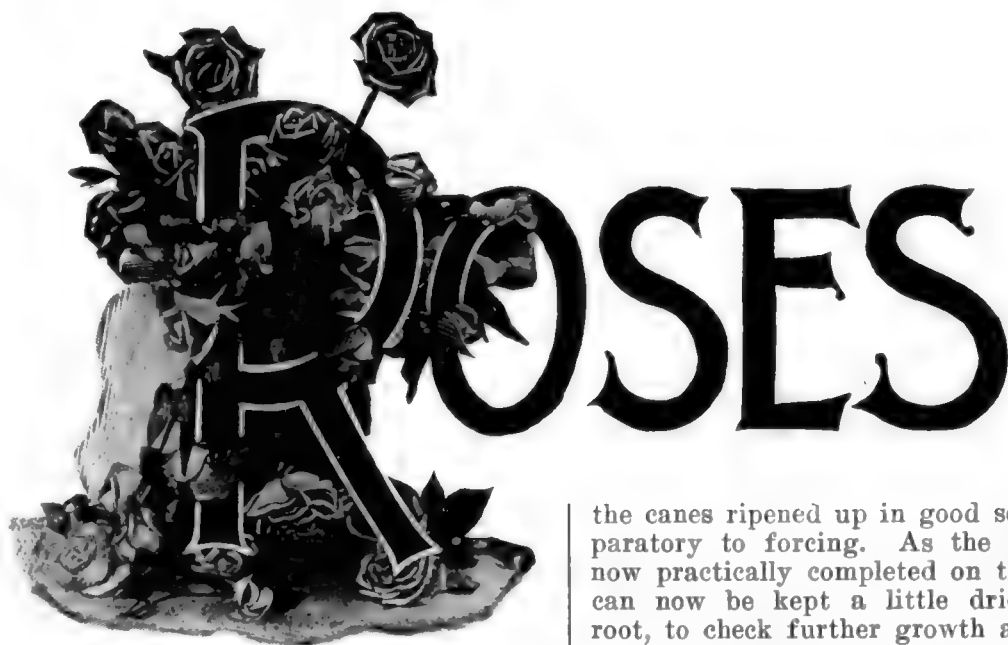

How many plants of American Beauty rose do I need in order to cut an average of two dozen flowers per day during the summer months? Also when should one propagate them in order to have strong plants in 3½-inch or 4-inch pots to bench in the latter part of March? They are for summer blooming only and are not to be carried over winter. P. O.

American Beauties, when they do extra well, produce from fifteen to eighteen blooms per plant during the season beginning October 1 to May 31. Many of us, however, are forced to be content with less than that number, and of course these are not all first-class blooms.

The best time to propagate Beauties, or, in fact, any other rose for indoor culture, is from December to March, as we then have better control of conditions. By beginning early in the propagating season, fine plants can be had by the middle of February, which will be ready to put into 3½-inch or 4-inch pots by March and should, if carefully treated, be ready to plant in three weeks from date of repotting. RIBES.

WESTPORT, CONN.—W. H. Burr is building an additional greenhouse.

DANVERS, MASS.—E. & C. Woodman have been renovating their greenhouses and giving them a fresh coat of paint.

RAMBLER ROSES.

The pot-grown ramblers—we mean those grown through the summer in pots—will pay for the extra work they have entailed upon the growers next season. With Easter as early as March 27, there is a big advantage with stock which is well rooted in pots and which can have the canes ripened up in good season preparatory to forcing. As the growth is now practically completed on these, they can now be kept a little drier at the root, to check further growth at the terminals and assist in maturing the wood.

A large majority of growers depend, however, upon fall potting as soon as the canes are sufficiently ripened to admit of lifting them. It will be the middle of October, in all probability, before these plants in the open ground are fit to dig, but if you are growing your own stock, you can manage the work a little earlier.

BASSETT'S DAHLIA FARM.

J. Murray Bassett has four dahlia farms in and about Hammonton, N. J., that are of especial interest to flower lovers at this season. Hammonton, as everyone knows or ought to know, is a growing town in the central part of southern New Jersey. One naturally adopts the standards of others better posted and when the railroad conductor called out "Hammonton and Atlantic City only," the words of a sporting Philadelphian who said there were only two cities in the world, Paris and Atlantic City, recurred vividly, suggesting the thought that Hammonton had been inadvertently overlooked.

Hammonton never appeared to better advantage than on the last Saturday afternoon in September. The air was clear and fresh, the trees bright green without a trace of autumn; the grass and, best of all, the dahlias, were in splendid condition after the rain of the previous day. The season has been a hard one on dahlias, the long-continued summer drought being most trying. Fancy, then, the pleasure experienced at the sight of the fields in splendid condition. The deep cultivating, followed at frequent intervals by further cultivation less and less deep as the plants grew, had evidently conserved moisture in a marked degree.

The features of especial interest in Mr. Bassett's place are three seedling dahlias, all in their second year and all of unusual promise. One is a scarlet believed to be superior to Lyndhurst, of like color, freer in bloom, stronger in growth, larger in flower, when compared to the older variety. Another is an orange yellow, a dahlia of the decorative type that should prove beautiful in combination with autumn foliage. The third is Mr. Bassett's especial pride. It is a decorative white, large and full, wonderfully free; this variety had an immense quantity of buds on long, stiff stems.

Delice was effective, the clear pink showing to advantage. Parcifal, too, was seen in good form. The novelty that attracts everyone, Mr. Bassett said, is Master Carl, an orange yellow variety, cactus type. This variety is exceptionally beautiful and seems assured of a bright future. Among the singles, Sensation, red white tipped, an introduction of L. K. Peacock, was striking. Big

Chief and Cardinal were also effective. There are a number of single seedlings of the Century type that, while fine, were no improvement, Mr. Bassett said, over existing varieties. Sylvia, Nymphaea, Perle d'Or and other good standard kinds are grown in quantity. Aurora, the name describing the color, a cactus variety, very showy, is a favorite of Mr. Bassett's, as also is its counterpart, Jack Rose.

Mr. Bassett completed a house last winter 14x40 for propagating dahlias. He also is experimenting with California privet grown as standards. PHIL.

IMPORT STOCK.

Ralph M. Ward & Co. have just received cable advices from Japan to the effect that the crop of bulbs of Lilium longiflorum giganteum is much shorter than was anticipated and that prices have advanced from thirty to forty per cent. Large sizes have turned out extremely scarce and full deliveries are not expected. Adolphe Goldenberg, of Ward & Co., is in Europe and reports a good crop of lily of the valley pips in the Hamburg producing center, with the prospect, also, that the stock will be of excellent quality. He found azaleas at Ghent to be short this year, and reports that some varieties cannot be delivered in full. He says prices will no doubt advance next season, for the Ghent district is closely sold out of growing stock.

Another of the large importers of Belgian plants states that he has learned from several sources in Belgium that "the cold, wet summer there has prevented azaleas making their usual growth, and for that reason plants will not be so liberal in size, or so well budded, as in former seasons. Deliveries now arriving bear out these statements. Palms are as scarce as ever, principally owing to the large demand from Germany, Russia, England and France. Azaleas are up in price and will be higher by next fall. Dresden growers have taken over 500,000 plants from Ghent more than usual this fall. Araucarias are plentiful."

LIFTING AND STORING CANNAS.

Please tell me when I should take up my cannas and how and where I should keep them over winter. C. H.

After the plants have been killed by frost, cut down the shoots to within six inches of the ground. On a dry, sunny day dig them up. Shake away a good portion of the soil, but allow some to adhere to the roots. Let the soil and roots be well dried before housing them. Pack them on shelves in a dry cellar or shed; one where potatoes or dahlias will keep will answer well for cannas. Be sure that no moisture reaches them, as this will cause the tubers to decay or start the plants into premature growth.

A greenhouse is hardly a suitable place to keep them in, unless you can give them a position free from drip and where they will not be wetted by the hose.

W. N. C.

FAILURE WITH ASPARAGUS.

I am having bad luck with Asparagus plumosus. I have a bed in the greenhouse on the ground. First the ground was spaded deeply and was well enriched with cow manure. Boards were nailed around the bed about fifteen inches high and it was then filled in with carnation soil. The soil was new, being left over after filling the benches for carnations. I have the rows one foot apart and eight inches between each plant. The bed is shaded and is watered every other day if it is at all dry on top. It sends up vines four or five feet high, but they then turn yellow and dry up, and the most of the foliage is a light green. I applied some manure water on some, but I think it made the plants look worse. What shall I do to make them a pretty dark green, and what is the cause of the new growths dying? J. G.

I am inclined to think that you have not proper drainage in your soil. The way your shoots turn would seem to indicate sour soil conditions or imperfect drainage, probably both. It is of no use trying to grow this asparagus, unless you give it thorough drainage composed of rocks or clinkers from the furnace. I would advise lifting your plants and giving plenty of coarse drainage, so that water will pass away freely. Then place eighteen to twenty-four inches of rich soil over it, composed of fibrous loam, rotted cow manure, partially decayed leaves and sharp sand. The compost should be rather coarse, for if properly made you ought not to replant for six or eight years.

Giving manure water will only aggravate the trouble with your plants. The roots are evidently in an unhealthy state and nothing short of proper drainage and replanting will remedy your trouble.

J. M. Bassett's Scarlet Seedling Dahlia.

W. C.

PONTIAC, ILL.—W. J. Miller & Son, at 416 East Payson street, are getting ready to erect three greenhouses, each 27x100, and a boiler-room, 20x81. They will grow roses, carnations and general stock, for the wholesale and retail trade. They expect to be able to fill the houses in January, 1910. They will build a salesroom and a propagating house next spring. The new range will be called the Payson Street Greenhouses.

OBITUARY.

B. Hasselbring.

Following an illness of but a few hours, B. Hasselbring, the widely known florist at Flint, Mich., died September 25. Heart trouble was the cause of death. Mrs. Hasselbring was at the time in Chicago, attending the funeral of a brother.

Bernhart Hasselbring was born in Germany in 1841. At the age of 18 he enlisted in the German army, according to the laws of that country, and after the expiration of his three years he enlisted for further service. He served under Bismarck in the German-Austrian war in 1866, and in 1870, at the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian war, he was commissioned a sergeant and served with distinction at the siege of Paris, the battle of Sedan and the notable engagement of Gravelot. After the latter battle the young sergeant was awarded the Iron Cross by the German government for personal heroism.

In 1872 he came to the United States, going directly to Saginaw. The young German found himself in a strange country without funds and without a knowledge of the language. He went to work for a florist in Saginaw and in 1874 was united in marriage with Miss Augusta Lang. Thirty-two years ago the couple removed to Flint, where Mr. Hasselbring rented the property upon which is now located the Hasselbring greenhouses. A few years later he purchased the property and at the time of his death was the owner of one of the largest greenhouse establishments in the state.

Mr. Hasselbring is survived, besides his widow, by four sons and one daughter. His oldest son, Dr. Henry Hasselbring, is an employee of the government in Washington, D. C., in the botanical department of the Department of Agriculture; Rinehart and Walter Hasselbring both reside in Flint, and Albert Hasselbring is in the copper mining business in northern Canada. Miss Margaret Hasselbring also resides in Flint.

The funeral was held Wednesday, September 29. There was a large attendance and many flowers.

James Dennis.

James Dennis, Jr., of East Providence, R. I., died September 16, of appendicitis, after undergoing an operation at the Rhode Island hospital. He was 73 years old. For several years he operated the range of greenhouses now owned by Mrs. Olsen, at the rear of 3124 Pawtucket avenue, East Providence. He leaves a widow and one daughter.

T. J. Maney.

Timothy J. Maney, a nurseryman of Geneva, N. Y., died at his home, in Spring street, September 21, after a three months' illness with dropsy. He leaves his wife, three sons, Michael, Daniel and Thomas Maney, and one daughter, Mrs. William Witt, all of Geneva.

THE executive committee of the American Rose Society will hold a meeting October 6, at 44 West Forty-fourth street, New York city, to take up the preliminary work for the exhibition to be held in the Museum of Natural History in March.

THE REVIEW will send the Book of Grafted Roses for 25 cents.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Z. D. Blackstone has had a surplus of dahlias and has sent boxes of them free to the sick, thereby gaining some good newspaper notices.

CAMDEN, N. Y.—Augustus Jackel will build a greenhouse addition to his present quarters at Twenty-ninth and Mitchell streets, the addition to be 20x30 feet.

NORTH EASTON, MASS.—The annual fair of Easton Grange No. 196, P. of H., was held September 21 to 23. The committee was headed by W. N. Craig.

FAIRHAVEN, MASS.—Peter Murray is building an addition to his greenhouses. He is also constructing a cold storage house, 25x50 feet, north of his potting house.

BATAVIA, ILL.—D. B. Hazen, after a two years' sojourn in Florida, has returned to Batavia, and is again in business. His many friends extended him a cordial welcome.

DOVER, N. H.—James M. Hayes has 20,000 fine pansies in the field. His other specialties are verbenas, lettuce, tomatoes and cabbage. For these he has a large local sale each year.

BILLINGS, MONT.—William Partington has begun the construction of what, it is expected, will eventually be a large range of greenhouses, at Twenty-ninth street and Sixth avenue north.

HINSDALE, MASS.—A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Harry Brague Monday, September 20. Mr. Brague is associated with his father, L. B. Brague, in the fern business.

RICHMOND, IND.—In the show windows of Fred H. Lemon & Co. is being exhibited a floral airship. It is the exact pattern of the Bumbaugh airship, which will make several flights in this city during the fall festival.

ANSONIA, CONN.—A. W. Davidson & Co. were the leading exhibitors at the show of the Intertown Dahlia Association, held September 18. There were from 8,000 to 10,000 blooms on exhibition. Other exhibitors were Palmer & Peters, E. Archer, Jas. B. Baylis, Frank T. Smith, F. H. Cooper.

WESTERLY, R. I.—George L. Stillman, the dahlia grower, exhibited about 300 varieties of dahlias at the Connecticut state fair at Hartford, taking first prize on his collection in competition with many exhibitors from all over the state. He also had an exhibit at the dahlia show of the New Haven County Horticultural Society, at New Haven, where his collection attracted much attention.

CANANDAIGUA, N. Y.—Edward Sick is building a new greenhouse at 350 Main street.

HAMILTON, O.—The Gray Flower & Seed Store, at 151 North Third street, is now open for business.

HOLDREGE, NEB.—The Davidson Floral Co. is building an addition, 39x100, to their greenhouses on East avenue.

WAPPINGERS FALLS, N. Y.—I. T. N. Harcourt is erecting a greenhouse, 25x150, on his Remsen avenue property.

PITTSFIELD, ILL.—Mrs. George Hansen is building a substantial addition to her greenhouses, in the south part of this city.

RACINE, WIS.—James P. Brudahl was run down by a bicyclist September 16 and severely injured. He is 75 years of age.

STREATOR, ILL.—Leslie Mason, in charge of the Rudolph Kline greenhouses, on the west side, is adding a new house, 28x160 feet.

ROCHESTER, N. H.—E. A. Corson is installing the system of water supply made by the Kewanee Water Supply Co., Kewanee, Ill.

ATHOL, MASS.—J. V. Twitchell has been awarded the contract to erect three greenhouses and service building for E. B. Hanson in South Royalston.

COLD SPRING, N. Y.—James Cunningham has added a house, 24x100, to his snug plant, built by Mitchell, for carnations in solid beds, with lots of drainage.

PAINESVILLE, O.—J. B. Knight has moved to Willoughby and has his newly purchased greenhouses well stocked. His partner, A. Wilson, on the Garfield farm, will soon follow.

GREENFIELD, MASS.—Charles P. MacDonald, who was an undertaker as well as a florist, has filed a petition in bankruptcy. He scheduled liabilities of $2,034 and assets of $1,020.

SKANEATELES, N. Y.—J. G. White, of the Lake View Greenhouses, is well satisfied with this year's business. He is getting ready to install a new boiler and build another house, 35x75.

THOMPSONVILLE, CONN.—The Brainard Floral & Nursery Co. had an excellent display of plants and flowers at the last annual exhibition of the Union Agricultural Society, at Broad Brook.

DALTON, MASS.—Fred G. Crane has just completed a large range of glass, consisting of palm, rose, carnation, grape and peach houses, etc., also a modern cottage for his gardener, J. R. Shield, who has had charge of the Crane estate for many years.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—Alfred T. Ostermann & Co., the retail florists, have found so much demand for hardy stock that they have just leased for three years eleven lots in the edge of town for nursery purposes. They will put themselves in a position to take care of any order for garden work, whether it calls for the use of soft stock or hardy material.

BASSETT'S DAHLIA FARM.

J. Murray Bassett has four dahlia farms in and about Hammonton, N. J., that are of especial interest to flower lovers at this season. Hammonton, as everyone knows or ought to know, is a growing town in the central part of southern New Jersey. One naturally adopts the standards of others better posted and when the railroad conductor called out "Hammonton and Atlantic City only," the words of a sporting Philadelphian who said there were only two cities in the world, Paris and Atlantic City, recurred vividly, suggesting the thought that Hammonton had been inadvertently overlooked.

Hammonton never appeared to better advantage than on the last Saturday afternoon in September. The air was clear and fresh, the trees bright green without a trace of autumn; the grass and, best of all, the dahlias, were in splendid condition after the rain of the previous day. The season has been a hard one on dahlias, the long-continued summer drought being most trying. Fancy, then, the pleasure experienced at the sight of the fields in splendid condition. The deep cultivating, followed at frequent intervals by further cultivation less and less deep as the plants grew, had evidently conserved moisture in a marked degree.

The features of especial interest in Mr. Bassett's place are three seedling dahlias, all in their second year and all of unusual promise. One is a scarlet believed to be superior to Lyndhurst, of like color, freer in bloom, stronger in growth, larger in flower, when compared to the older variety. Another is an orange yellow, a dahlia of the decorative type that should prove beautiful in combination with autumn foliage. The third is Mr. Bassett's especial pride. It is a decorative white, large and full, wonderfully free; this variety had an immense quantity of buds on long, stiff stems.

Delice was effective, the clear pink showing to advantage. Parcifal, too, was seen in good form. The novelty that attracts everyone, Mr. Bassett said, is Master Carl, an orange yellow variety, cactus type. This variety is exceptionally beautiful and seems assured of a bright future. Among the singles, Sensation, red white tipped, an introduction of L. K. Peacock, was striking. Big

Chief and Cardinal were also effective. There are a number of single seedlings of the Century type that, while fine, were no improvement, Mr. Bassett said, over existing varieties. Sylvia, Nymphaea, Perle d'Or and other good standard kinds are grown in quantity. Aurora, the name describing the color, a cactus variety, very showy, is a favorite of Mr. Bassett's, as also is its counterpart, Jack Rose.

Mr. Bassett completed a house last winter 14x40 for propagating dahlias. He also is experimenting with California privet grown as standards. PHIL.

IMPORT STOCK.

Ralph M. Ward & Co. have just received cable advices from Japan to the effect that the crop of bulbs of Lilium longiflorum giganteum is much shorter than was anticipated and that prices have advanced from thirty to forty per cent. Large sizes have turned out extremely scarce and full deliveries are not expected. Adolphe Goldenberg, of Ward & Co., is in Europe and reports a good crop of lily of the valley pips in the Hamburg producing center, with the prospect, also, that the stock will be of excellent quality. He found azaleas at Ghent to be short this year, and reports that some varieties cannot be delivered in full. He says prices will no doubt advance next season, for the Ghent district is closely sold out of growing stock.

Another of the large importers of Belgian plants states that he has learned from several sources in Belgium that "the cold, wet summer there has prevented azaleas making their usual growth, and for that reason plants will not be so liberal in size, or so well budded, as in former seasons. Deliveries now arriving bear out these statements. Palms are as scarce as ever, principally owing to the large demand from Germany, Russia, England and France. Azaleas are up in price and will be higher by next fall. Dresden growers have taken over 500,000 plants from Ghent more than usual this fall. Araucarias are plentiful."

LIFTING AND STORING CANNAS.

Please tell me when I should take up my cannas and how and where I should keep them over winter. C. H.

After the plants have been killed by frost, cut down the shoots to within six inches of the ground. On a dry, sunny day dig them up. Shake away a good portion of the soil, but allow some to adhere to the roots. Let the soil and roots be well dried before housing them. Pack them on shelves in a dry cellar or shed; one where potatoes or dahlias will keep will answer well for cannas. Be sure that no moisture reaches them, as this will cause the tubers to decay or start the plants into premature growth.

A greenhouse is hardly a suitable place to keep them in, unless you can give them a position free from drip and where they will not be wetted by the hose.

W. N. C.

FAILURE WITH ASPARAGUS.

I am having bad luck with Asparagus plumosus. I have a bed in the greenhouse on the ground. First the ground was spaded deeply and was well enriched with cow manure. Boards were nailed around the bed about fifteen inches high and it was then filled in with carnation soil. The soil was new, being left over after filling the benches for carnations. I have the rows one foot apart and eight inches between each plant. The bed is shaded and is watered every other day if it is at all dry on top. It sends up vines four or five feet high, but they then turn yellow and dry up, and the most of the foliage is a light green. I applied some manure water on some, but I think it made the plants look worse. What shall I do to make them a pretty dark green, and what is the cause of the new growths dying? J. C.

I am inclined to think that you have not proper drainage in your soil. The way your shoots turn would seem to indicate sour soil conditions or imperfect drainage, probably both. It is of no use trying to grow this asparagus, unless you give it thorough drainage composed of rocks or clinkers from the furnace. I would advise lifting your plants and giving plenty of coarse drainage, so that water will pass away freely. Then place eighteen to twenty-four inches of rich soil over it, composed of fibrous loam, rotted cow manure, partially decayed leaves and sharp sand. The compost should be rather coarse, for if properly made you ought not to replant for six or eight years.

Giving manure water will only aggravate the trouble with your plants. The roots are evidently in an unhealthy state.

J. M. Bassett's Scarlet Seedling Dahlia.

and nothing short of proper drainage at replanting will remedy your trouble.

W. C.

PONTIAC, ILL.—W. J. Miller & Son, at 416 East Payson street, are getting ready to erect three greenhouses, each 27x100, and a boiler-room, 20x81. They will grow roses, carnations and general stock, for the wholesale and retail trade. They expect to be able to fill the houses in January, 1910. They will build a salesroom and a propagating house next spring. The new range will be called the Payson Street Greenhouses.

OBITUARY.

B. Hasselbring.

Following an illness of but a few days, B. Hasselbring, the widely known florist at Flint, Mich., died September 29. Heart trouble was the cause of death. Hasselbring was at the time in Chicago attending the funeral of a brother. Bernhard Hasselbring was born in Germany in 1841. At the age of 18 he enlisted in the German army, according to the laws of that country, and after the expiration of his three years he enlisted for further service. He served under General Moltke in the German-Austrian war in 1866, and in 1870, at the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian war, he was commissioned a sergeant and served with distinction at the siege of Paris, the battle of Sedan and the notable engagement of Orléans. After the latter battle the young sergeant was awarded the Iron Cross by the German government for personal heroism. In 1872 he came to the United States, coming directly to Saginaw. The young man found himself in a strange country without funds and without a knowledge of the language. He went to work as a florist in Saginaw and in 1874 he was united in marriage with Miss Augusta Lang. Thirty-two years ago the couple removed to Flint, where Mr. Hasselbring rented the property upon which is now located the Hasselbring greenhouses. A few years later he purchased the property and at the time of his death was the owner of one of the largest greenhouse establishments in the state. Mr. Hasselbring is survived, besides his widow, by four sons and one daughter. His oldest son, Dr. Henry Hasselbring, is an employee of the government in Washington, D. C., in the botanical department of the Department of Agriculture; Rinehart and Walter Hasselbring both reside in Flint, and Albert Hasselbring is in the copper mining business in northern Canada. Miss Margaret Hasselbring also resides in Flint.

The funeral was held Wednesday, September 29. There was a large attendance and many flowers.

James Dennis.

James Dennis, Jr., of East Providence, R. I., died September 16, of appendicitis, after undergoing an operation at the Rhode Island hospital. He was 73 years old. For several years he operated the large range of greenhouses now owned by Mrs. Dennis, at the rear of 3124 Pawtucket avenue, East Providence. He leaves a widow and one daughter.

T. J. Maney.

Timothy J. Maney, a nurseryman of New York, N. Y., died at his home, in Irving street, September 21, after a few months' illness with dropsy. He leaves his wife, three sons, Michael, Daniel and Thomas Maney, and one daughter, Mrs. William Witt, all of New York.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society will hold a meeting October 6, at 44 West Forty-fourth street, New York city, to take up the preliminary work for the exhibition to be held in the Museum of Natural History March.

THE REVIEW will send the Book of Crafted Roses for 25 cents.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg, Pa.

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 18 to 19, 1910.

Results bring advertising.

THE REVIEW brings results.

LOOK out for frost. You are likely to lose your outdoor stock any night now.

THE reports are of great activity in all branches of the iron and steel trade, but the price of black pipe continues on about the lowest level.

SECRETARY A. F. J. BAUR, of the American Carnation Society, has sent out a circular announcing the early publication of the premium list of his organization and soliciting special premiums and advertisements.

It is unfortunate that dissensions should have occurred in the ranks of the New England Dahlia Society. There is enough to be done in carrying forward the work of any of the trade societies without dissipating strength in factional disputes.

HARRY A. BUNYARD, with Arthur T. Boddington, New York, states that for two years in succession they have sold one grower in Pennsylvania thirty-five pounds of their Christmas Snowbird sweet pea seed. Mr. Bunyard says the variety will flower within two months of sowing and has been known to flower within six weeks.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

M. J. Van Leeuwen advises that Berberis Thunbergii, var. Silver Beauty, originated in 1905 instead of 1908 as published, a mistake having been made by him in writing the date in his application.

W. N. RUDD, Sec'y.

September 24, 1909.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

Department of Registration.

Grimm & Gorley, St. Louis, Mo., register new carnation Vincent's Pink; parentage, Guardian Angel x Enchantress; color, Bridesmaid pink; size, three to three and one-half inches; compact and vigorous grower, with no surplus grass; five years' trial proven satisfactory.

A. F. J. BAUR, Sec'y.

THE GLASS MARKET.

There was another advance in the price of glass September 22, bringing the increase since early spring to approximately thirty per cent; but there is a doubt in the minds of some well informed men in the glass trade as to whether the latest advance will hold when it comes to applying it to the larger orders for greenhouse work. The latest price makes 16x18 double A figure around $2.80 per box, but it is thought a man who was in the market for any quantity could still get in under the old discounts, that would figure about $2.70. Not so long ago $2.60 was quoted at Chicago for the same article, and early in the year, $2.

The glass trade is extremely active at present—the Pittsburg Plate Glass Co. reports sales running twenty to twenty-five per cent ahead of the banner year of 1907—for general building is enjoying a boom. There is a fair amount of greenhouse business moving, principally small orders for repairs and for stock to be carried against a time of need.

DOLLARS FOR PENNIES.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time.

Please take our advertisement out of the Review; we are all sold out and have to keep sending the money back.—D. T. McCarthy & Sons, Lockport, N. Y., September 22, 1909.

The above letter was written after the advertisement had received one insertion only. The offer was of a definite number of surplus field-grown carnation plants, $80 worth. The REVIEW's charge for the advertisement was 60 cents. And yet some people still let surplus stock go to waste.

DON'T WAIT.

A subscriber has sent the REVIEW a marked copy of the local newspaper containing an obituary notice and also sends a postal card on which he wrote:

Probably you have heard of this, but I send it anyway; if everybody waited for the other fellow you would not get it at all.

The REVIEW appreciates the thoughtfulness of its readers in sending it not only important items, but those of minor importance as well. It has happened that because someone thought "Oh, well! They know all about this," and did not act on his first impulse to drop us a line, or send us a wire, we altogether missed an important piece of news. Don't sit back and wait because you think some other fellow has sent in the same piece of news. Important matters should be reported by wire if mail will not arrive Wednesday. Telegrams containing news matter only are accepted by the telegraph companies at a special rate, if marked "Collect press rate." The night rate is half the day rate.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The weather has been the dominating factor in the Chicago market for the last week or more. Early last week skies were bright and the sun was warm. The result was an increase in production that weakened the market. Then came dark days with the temperature some 10 degrees below the normal. Supplies shortened up all along the line and, while quoted prices saw little change except on carnations, the average improved materially; it became possible to clean up at fair figures, in marked contrast to the condition earlier in the week, when it was difficult to make a clearing even if the buyer named the price on the surplus. The present week opened with continued cool weather and production still is light, although growers say one or two warm days will bring in large cuts again.

Whenever production shortens up, demand increases. In a way, the same weather conditions which reduce cuts cause people to do those things which make for the use of flowers; also, when crops lighten in the Chicago market, they also are reduced all through its territory, with the result that those who have

Killarney

Push YOUR sales and order of us---WE'VE got the goods

Go out strong for business on Killarney---it's a great seller everywhere that it is shown. You can get a better price for it than for any other rose, make a better profit on each sale, and make more sales.

Appreciating the great demand there will be for Killarney this season, we have largely increased our supply of the highest grade stock. While we make a specialty of the finest, long, fancy flowers, we also have the commoner grades as well—we have put ourselves in position to fill every order for Killarney now and all winter—any quantity, any length of stem.

BEAUTIES

Everybody who buys Beauties knows our stock can be depended on as being the very best obtainable. And we want to emphasize the fact that we are in a position to supply Beauties at all times. You can get everything from us.

Mums! Mums!!

Our Mums are selling splendidly—perhaps the quality is a little better than buyers can find elsewhere—and we are shipping large lots of yellow and white. Supply is increasing every day, but so is the demand, so buyers are urged to give us as much notice as possible.

Carnations

Our Carnations are coming in freely and the quality improves noticeably day after day—stems are lengthening rapidly and a good proportion of the stock now can be called first-class. You'll know us as Carnation headquarters again this season—order some today.

Violets

Shipments of double violets have begun—the best stock we ever saw at this date. If you use Violets in quantity, get in touch with us now—you'll want to book a regular standing order for the season for these goods. We shall have enough this year to supply a lot of buyers.

Smilax Strings

We are cutting a big lot of Smilax—use it in your decorations, for Asparagus strings are on the scarce side.

some home supply are compelled to order a greater part of their needs from the wholesale center. For nearly a week now the market has had all the business that could be handled; indeed, it has been necessary to cut orders, especially on carnations.

The Beauties are of excellent quality, but the supply is light; there are not many long-stemmed Beauties, still fewer medium stems and less shorts; medium has the bulk of the demand. Prices have stiffened. All other roses were checked up by the cold weather and are only just getting under way again. White has been in special demand, but all orders have been filled with first-class roses unless the buyers waited until too late in the day before making their needs known. Killarney is in splendid form and Kaiserin also is fine. There has been considerable improvement in Richmond, which is now up to almost midwinter form. Maid and Bride also have improved, but are still behind the sorts that have led the market thus far this season.

The outdoor flowers are pretty well finished. There are not nearly so many asters as a week ago, and scarcely any are what could be called good. Any passable asters have brought good money this week. Gladioli are still coming in, but are extremely poor. They hardly are salable when other flowers are to be had, but have returned much better prices to the growers this week than at any other time in September. The odds and ends of outdoor stock even have found sale this week. Good dahlias have done well, but the supply has been limited.

The passing of the asters has turned a large demand toward the carnation and receipts have not increased in proportion. The result has been a sharp advance in values, for a good many orders had to be cut so that all buyers might get a part of their needs. Even the outdoor carnations have brought fine prices. The special demand was for white. On the indoor stock stems are gradually lengthening, but any length has been acceptable these last few days.

There has been a spurt also in the demand for chrysanthemums and, in response to the urging of the wholesalers, growers have been cutting stock before it really was ready. Yellow has been much more abundant than white. Advance orders for the former could be filled without much trouble, but orders for white have not all been supplied.

There are increased receipts of Hudson river violets, good, bad and indifferent, and they are selling excellently for so early in the season. Orchids are a little more abundant, but still short of the demand.

There is an abundant supply of valley, but the Easter lilies sell so fast the growers cannot wait for them to whiten.

There is an excellent demand for greens, especially smilax and asparagus strings, for the fall decorations are on. Smilax is fairly plentiful, but asparagus is not always obtainable, unless notice is given.

Flower Show Preparations.

There was a meeting of the executive committee of the Horticultural Society of Chicago and the flower show committee of the Chicago Florists' Club at the supper table at the Union restaurant, September 27, at which it was decided to hold the autumn exhibition the first week in November, opening as early as possible and running Sunday. No location has yet been determined upon, both the Art Institute and the Coliseum being available. A meeting of the executive committee was called for Wednesday evening, September 29, to consider the proposition of the Art Institute and take final action. A design for a poster was accepted.

Those present at the Union meeting were President Kelly and Secretary J.

H. Burdett, of the Horticultural Society; Secretary Carpenter, of the Art Institute; Secretary Frank Johnson, of the Florists' Club; Leonard Kill, P. J. Foley, E. F. Winterson, Walter Scott, George Asmus, J. C. Vaughan and M. Barker.

Wholesalers' Employees' Dance.

The employees of the wholesale florists have organized by the election of H. W. Rogers, of Weiland & Risch, as president, George F. Poehlmann, as vice-president, and J. C. Enders, as secretary and treasurer. The latter are both connected with Poehlmann Bros. Co.

The Wholesale Florists' Employees' Club will give its annual reception and ball at Columbia hall, 1527 North Clark street, Wednesday evening, October 27, with Fitzgerald's orchestra. This is the fourth time the wholesalers' employees have bidden their friends to a dance. The previous events have been great successes, each greater than the preceding, and it is expected that this year's affair will set another new record. The members of the organization are Otto Goerisch, Max Ringier, William Lorman, John Ziska, M. Fink, Charles Zapfe, Harry Manheim, Joe Strause, F. J. Krauss, F. S. Ayers and T. Matchen.

ously ill in the University hospital, where he underwent an operation September 27. Mr. Jones had been ill for several days, but was recovering nicely when, September 25, he overtaxed his strength and his condition rapidly became worse. Mrs. Jones, who is a sister of the Garland brothers at Des Plaines, is constantly at his side. His business interests are in the capable hands of Henry Van Gelder, who is one of the earnest young men in the market and who has been with Mr. Jones practically ever since he entered the wholesale field. T. J. Johnson, a colored man who has made quite a success of a flower store at 399 East Thirty-first street, died suddenly September 26, of pneumonia. He was on the market buying stock two days before his death. He was a hard worker and stood well with the wholesalers. A wife survives. There is difference of opinion among the growers as to the earliness of mums. Some say their stock will be in quite a little earlier than last year, while others deplore the fact, in view of the present excellent market, that their early varieties are not as far along as they were last season at this date. During the summer Peter Reinberg has erected a large modern storage shed for coal at his Robey street establishment and has secured a private sidetrack from the Northwestern railroad. The track is elevated at the shed so that coal can be dumped, instead of shoveled, from the cars either into the shed or into wagons. There is storage space for about forty cars. Carl Thomas, of the A. L. Randall Co., who has been spending the summer at his old home at West Springfield, Pa., returns this week to take up his winter duties. He is accompanied by a niece, who will attend the University of Chicago. F. F. Benthey says that Maid has hung back a little all season, but this week the decrease in the supply of roses has been such that Maid has come into its own again. E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., says business is best when flowers are poorest; he means that under conditions such as prevailed at the end of last week and the beginning of this one, buyers were so glad to get stock that they did not stop to criticize its quality or quibble over the price. A. L. Vaughan, of Vaughan & Sperry, spent September 25 at Grand Rapids, and is in Rhinebeck, N. Y., this week, looking over the violet situation. The baseball team of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, visited Hinsdale September 26 for a game with the greenhouse employees of Bassett & Washburn, winning 6 to 3. August and Adolph Poehlmann and their children accompanied the ball players and rooters. Mrs. August Poehlmann has been in a Chicago hospital for a fortnight, but is now restored nearly to perfect health. The bowlers will start their team contest September 30 at Bensinger's. bought the retail store of the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, the deal with the Schiller estate having fallen through.

Miss Corbett, who has charge of the books at Peter Reinberg's, has the sympathy of everyone who has heard of the death of her father last week.

Bassett & Washburn report they are getting from 4 cents to 5 cents for the O. P. Bassett carnation. They cannot supply the demand.

Peter Reinberg and John Schillo took a party of friends to Buffalo Grove in their automobiles September 29. Among those who went were Adam Zender, N. J. Wietor, John Muno, Henry Wietor, Leonard Kill and Ed Schillo.

Tim Beaver is no longer with J. L. Raske.

E. F. Winterson Co. received a car of Dutch bulbs last week and expects another this week. Buyers began to take hold the minute the samples were shown in the store.

E. C. Amling says he counts on a good violet season, the first receipts being of better quality than usual and the buyers more eager to take hold than they ordinarily are in September. The Chicago market has now become one of much importance to the Rhinebeck center of production.

Frank Hagen, of George Reinberg's city store force, has been on the sick list for a week.

Kyle & Foerster have their office and store-room partitions up and are rapidly getting the store into finished shape.

Hoerber Bros.' cut has increased largely since the opening day and they are now getting roses with fair length of stem.

The esteemed Tribune has just discovered that there is trouble over the conservatory at Garfield park and in its issue of September 27 devotes a column of the front page to exploiting the subject. Mr. Eckhart is quoted as blaming Jens Jensen for the conditions, and Mr. Jensen is quoted as saying the board knew all the time what was going on and that he gave warning against employing anyone other than an experienced greenhouse builder on so important a piece of work. Repairs have at length been begun.

INDIANAPOLIS.

Members of the State Florists' Association of Indiana will please take notice that the next meeting, to be held at the state house at 2:30 p. m., October 5, will be a very important one. There will be up for final adoption a premium list for the spring show; also a plan for financing and managing the show. There will also be a large exhibit of dahlias by E. T. Barnes, of Spencer, Ind. Mr. Barnes is perhaps the largest dahlia grower in this part of the country and his collection contains many fine seedlings of his own, as well as the finest varieties for cutting. This alone should well repay anyone for the trip. Of course this exhibit will be made only in case we do not have a sharp frost before that date. A. F. J. BAUR, Sec'y.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Kentucky State Fair closed September 18 with flying colors, being a record breaker in every particular. The weather was ideal and the attendance the largest in the fair's history. The floral display was by far the best ever held at our fair. Besides the good displays made by Kentucky florists for the prizes given, we are indebted to the Chicago florists who so kindly made exhibits that proved a great drawing card and were highly appreciated. Those making displays, not entries, were Bassett & Washburn, the A. L. Randall Co., E. H. Hunt, Peter Reinberg and the Poehlmann Bros. Co., all of Chicago. Fred Schulz, of Louisville, had a most excellent display, as also did the Kentucky Nursery Co.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

St. Paul florists have had a busy week. The funeral of our lamented Governor Johnson called for the most lavish display of flowers ever seen at such an occasion in this city. All the local florists had more or less, but Holm & Olson and May & Co. had the greater number. Among the more prominent were the following: The seal of Minnesota in colors, this being a round shield six feet in height, bordered with magnolia leaves and the figures in the seal worked out in carnations, asters, dahlias and immortelles; a standing cascade wreath, four feet high; a large panel of American Beauties, valley and orchids; another large panel from the Ely schools; large anvil of ivy leaves; large anchor; map of state; large shield from the city of Virginia; colossal broken column; many large wreaths, one six feet high, made of asters, garlanded with Golden Gate roses and valley and holding four dozen American Beauties; several large panels; large pillows; crescent and grip from the U. C. T.; a large number of bunches of American Beauties, also large sprays of white mums and many other beautiful bunches and designs.

These designs were sent from all points of the compass. Thomas Lawson sent an immense standing wreath. Governor Hughes sent a magnolia wreath, with a cluster of roses. Friends in the city sent hundreds of tokens. The proprietor of the Chinese restaurant, where the governor ate occasionally, sent a wreath. Every department at the state capital remembered its chief, while thousands of the common people shed bitter tears of grief as their tribute to the man they loved and revered.

The decorations for the Taft reception consisted of autumn leaves, cedar festooning and large bouquets of hydrangeas, while the centerpiece on the tables were hydrangeas, salvia and Clematis paniculata. The President's table was a round one surrounding an electric fountain, the fountain bordered by Golden Glow mums and salvia. This decoration was done by Holm & Olson and was repeated for the reception to the Japanese delegation of business men.

The Donaldson Co., Minneapolis, had the decorations for the Taft reception. The tables were lavishly trimmed with Richmond and Beauty roses.

The Market.

The last week can go down on record as one which was in every way satisfactory. All of the large department stores held their fall openings and it is needless to say that it kept the florists, who were fortunate enough to have the orders, on the jump, the main item in this case being green goods. The cool nights, but with no killing frost up to the time of this report, shortened up stock in such a manner the latter part of last week that it was a pleasure to see how quickly the incoming stock was disposed of. There was an especially brisk demand for carnations, with only a limited supply. The only thing which might have been branded as being plentiful was red roses.

Various Notes.

The Mueller & Schroeder Co., with its 35,000 square feet of glass, has been cutting an average of 1,000 carnations per day and all of a fine quality at that.

A. Groth, of North Milwaukee, is enlarging his glass area by another house 20x150. He intends to grow sweet peas and some pot plants in this house.

Walter M. Maas Co. is the name of a new retail firm which will throw open its doors October 1 at 128 Oneida street. While the location is not the best, still Mr. Maas, who has had years of good training in his line, with the assistance of Miss Sheriff, who makes a good sales-lady, will no doubt make things go.

Nie Zweifel, of North Milwaukee, has a house of carnations which have been grown under glass all summer and which are just coming into bloom. Everyone who has seen the stock thus far seems to think it is O. K.

The following members of the Florists' Club assisted the members of the Outdoor Art Association in judging the displays of the school children last week: August Kellner, Robert Zepnick, W. Hummel, Arthur Leidiger and Benjamin Gregory. It will take a few more days or this week to complete the task.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. and the C. C. Pollworth Co. say they had to refuse a good many orders last Friday and Saturday, September 24 and 25, owing to the scarcity of stock.

Philip Breitmeyer, the mayor of Detroit, attended the ball at the dedication of the new Auditorium, September 21.

The Value of a Reputation

Every trade has its leading firms. When a tag is attached to a box of goods, bearing the name of such a firm, it is a sort of a guarantee as to the correctness of the material, price, and everything pertaining to it.

To gain such a reputation is not an easy matter. We have been over twelve years establishing a name for ourselves, and we are name-building every day, but we are glad to say that today we enjoy the respect and confidence of the trade in general.

We certainly do not want to sacrifice what took us years to establish. When we say that we will serve you well, it is a promise backed up by our reputation. Our endeavor to always retain our good name will insure you of our best efforts to serve you.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The best judges of the cut flower market are wont to shake their heads wisely and say that conditions would improve were we to have a frost. Curiously enough, conditions have improved to a marked degree and we had no frost. The extraordinarily warm weather preceding the present week, September 23 to 29 inclusive, brought forward the crops of cut flowers rapidly. This was followed by cold, wet weather September 23, 24 and 27, that curtailed cuts. Besides, there was an improved demand, the most important Jewish feast of the year, September 25, being partly responsible for a clearing up of all kinds of flowers such as the market has not seen for a long time. Saturday, September 25, was the best September day ever experienced in the Rising Eastern Market.

Dahlias rule the day. The cool nights have improved the quality, with further aid of disbudding, and stock has been offered in quantity that has realized excellent prices. Carnations are becoming decidedly more plentiful. The wholesale houses that were receiving them by the hundreds ten days ago are now receiving them by the thousands, of improved quality. This is most timely, as some large sales in from 1,000 to 2,000 lots have cut down the tail-end of the aster supply so that, barring white, this flower will cease to be a factor with the close of September.

Roses are plentiful but, unfortunately, this does not apply to high grade stock, the hot weather above referred to making quality difficult to obtain. There is, however, some fine stock, particularly in Beauties, and the general average is improving.

Valley more nearly equals the demand. Gardenias are coming forward. Single violets are good for so early. White and yellow chrysanthemums can be had in limited quantity. Autumn foliage is in demand. Some fine adiantum is now offered.

The Question of Hours.

It has been the custom in the wholesale market for the various commission houses to remain open until 8 or 9 p. m. from October 1 to June 15 or thereabouts, closing at 6 p. m. during the dull months. This custom has been made necessary by the fact that many of the retailers keep the same hours, and was further emphasized by the special offers formerly made by the telephone companies to encourage long distance messages after 6 p. m.

Rumor has been rife for some time that at least one of our wholesale houses would break away from the old-time custom this season. This week rumor has taken a definite shape by an announcement from the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. that it will continue to close at 6 p. m. throughout the season, excepting when the needs of customers make longer hours necessary.

Samuel S. Pennock, president of the company, when seen by the representative of the most progressive florists' paper, said that he felt sure that this move would increase the efficiency of their force and result in direct benefit to their customers. Long hours are apt to impair the quality of work, Mr. Pennock thought, and by shortening the hours to coincide with those of the usual commercial day the best work may reasonably be expected all the time. When asked what effect this will have on the business usually transacted in the evening, Mr. Pennock said he believes that in most cases this business can as well be done before 6 o'clock; where that is impossible his house will gladly remain open to accommodate a customer. The long distance orders formerly received in the evening are nearly all received in the daytime now, since the abolition of the half rate evening telephone toll. The local stores rarely require stock in the evening that cannot be ordered earlier. Mr. Pennock said that the dinner time of the employees will be reduced to a half hour and that each salesman will concentrate all his energy into the shorter day.

Another Step Forward

Progressiveness in every successful business house means the ability to better serve their customers, better methods, better quality goods, better service, more courteous attention from the employees, in fact, everything for the betterment of the business.

Shorter hours, in other words, concentration of energy, have proved beneficial whenever tried by the prosperous firms of today.

After weighing the matter very carefully, we have decided to close at 6 p. m., believing we can better attain these results by eliminating long and enervating service and closing at this reasonable hour, thus enabling the energies of all concerned to be crisp and efficient at the busy time of the day, when most needed.

Open from 7 a. m. to 6 p. m.

Various Notes.

To the growers: Give one hour next week to going carefully over the wholesale commission houses and going over the various grades of the different varieties of flowers, comparing them with your own.

Among the visitors to the Rising Eastern Market recently were Miss Mooney and Miss Weir, trading as Mooney & Weir, The Little Flower Shop, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.; John A. Beck and Mrs. Beck, Milton, Pa.; C. D. Mills, Jacksonville, Fla.; W. A. Hammond, Richmond, Va.; Evenden Bros., Williamsport, Pa.; G. R. Clark, Scranton, Pa.; H. L. Sawyer, Jacksonville, Fla., and the genial George Carson Boyd, Wilmington, Del.

Charles Henry Fox was pleased with the interest manifested in his exhibit at Cincinnati. By the way, Mr. Fox decorated a cotton men's dinner with the genuine thing last week, some of which may be seen at the Sign of the Rose.

A man of about 60 years of age, giving his name as Stewart Brown, was arrested in the store of the Johnson Seed Co. for attempting to pass a worthless check. He was held for $1,500 bail in the City hall. It seems that this same man brought another check bearing, like the other, the endorsement of A. J.

R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md., have ordered two houses 35x250 each, for geraniums, from Lord & Burnham Co. This company's dahlia exhibition, held September 28, was attended by D. T. Connor, F. J. Michell, Israel Rosnosky and perhaps others from this city. PHIL.

DANVERS, MASS.—This city is in a fair way, says a local newspaper, to become noted for dahlia culture. For some years Robert A. Amend, of the Ferncroft Dahlia Gardens, has been growing them with notable success. Now Alonzo A. The Market.

There is little to add to last week's report of the cut flower market. As yet no unusual demand for flowers has developed, the Hudson-Fulton celebration absorbing all public interest. The jobbers in decorative greens, however, have reaped a harvest, thousands of yards of roping being used in all the large outdoor decorations. The Court of Honor alone absorbed hundreds of cases of wild smilax, and a complete privet hedge has been planted on both sides of the street from Fortieth to Forty-second streets. Festooning of heavy laurel roping is everywhere and triumphal wreaths of massive size are utilized in great abundance.

What this great influx of visitors and the public dinners and receptions of the next ten days will do for the business is problematical. Apart from these and the early weddings, there is nothing to lift the market. Many of the retail florists' stores on Fifth avenue will turn an honest penny in stands before their windows, where $10 seats will be at a premium.

Of good roses and carnations the shipments are light and perfect stock brings satisfactory prices, but of medium, short and inferior stock there is yet no end and for this about any offer that means a clean-up is accepted.

Beauties have the call this week. Great quantities are absorbed by the prima donnas and stars of the theatrical firmament nightly.

Orchids are coming fast and are in ways in demand. Dahlias were in the limelight last week and the exhibit of the show was superb. But it is hard to popularize this flower with the retailer and only a few of the best meet with any sale. This week will see the fall well of dahlias, asters and gladioli.

There seems to have been a frost Sunday night, September 26, and it is well come. The flood of outdoor flowers seemed endless; hydrangeas, asters, dahlias and gladioli came in day after day in rivers and passed out clouded and forlorn.

The chrysanthemum now begins to port its demand for recognition with the grand stock of the early varieties, especially Golden Glow and Monrovia. Violets will not wait. The usual result of impatience is evident; neither the market nor prices are satisfactory.

Various Notes.

There are large numbers of visiting florists among the Hudson-Fulton crowds, and many are visiting the supply houses and plantsmen buying stock.

It is reported that Wertheimer Bros. have taken a lease for a term of years on a prominent Broadway corner, to which they will remove about January 1, and which will give them more than double their present floor space.

James A. Hammond, at one time in the wholesale florists' business and lately manager for John S. Nicholas, on Forty-second street, is now with James McManus. Mr. Paterson, formerly with Charles Thorley, is now manager for Mr. Nicholas.

The grand plants at the dahlia exhibition referred to last week were from the Platt conservatories, Brooklyn, where Anthony Manda presides.

Charles H. Totty is sending in some grand mums to A. M. Henshaw and Joseph Fenrich, which bring tiptop prices.

Ambrose Cleary opens his auction season this week. A fine stock of plants, evergreens, privet and bulbs of every kind is on sale. The company does a big jobbing business.

The Fruit Auction Co. is receiving importations of large phoenix and other decorative palms. The field for this stock is great in New York, all the big hotels vying with each other in the extent of their palm and bay tree decorations.

At William Elliott & Sons the usual crowds assemble, for a large assortment may always be depended on. The outlet for auction goods is ever widening.

E. S. Miller, of Wading River; John Lewis Childs, of Floral Park, and Stumpp & Walter Co., of New York, were much in evidence at the Mineola fair last week and made grand exhibits, as did Henry A. Dreer, of Philadelphia. Harry Weston is a competent judge and many gardeners and seedsmen were visitors.

Adolph Goldenberg, of R. M. Ward & Co., is making an extensive trip in Europe.

T. Mellstrom, representing Sander & Son, of London, England, arrived September 20 on the Zealand for his American canvass.

Winfred Rolker, just back from Europe, reports the business outlook the best in their experience.

Julius Roehrs, Sr., and family are home again after a six months' absence in Europe. The head of the house has not looked better in years and has brought back also a fine German accent. He attended the great flower shows in Berlin and London and reports the marriage of Fritz Sander to the daughter of Mr. Watson, curator of Kew Gardens, where he left his son, Rudy Roehrs, for a year or two of European experience.

Will Rickards is growing in popularity as a manager of flower shows.

A. E. Wheeler, of W. E. Marshall & Co., has returned from his European trip.

Kessler Bros. have the evergreen roping order for the city at Fifty-ninth street in the Hudson celebration. This house makes a specialty of renting palms and has loaned large numbers this week to the retail florists for decorations.

At the establishment in Flatbush, where John Scott built up a large business, David McKenzie, the manager, reports a business far in advance of other years to date. A general assortment of plants is grown in the 60,000 square feet of glass, and Scottii ferns in all sizes and gardenias still remain the popular specialties.

H. Dreyer, of Elmhurst, has been busy this summer working up palms, ferns, araucarias, pandanus, cycas and lilies for the fall trade. He reports a big local demand already.

Herman Scholzel, of New Durham, N. J., the originator of the popular Scholzeli fern, says the demand for it is entirely satisfactory. He has eighteen houses filled with it, and with Bostons, Scottii, ficus, dracenas, aspidistras and kentias.

Frank Millang is in the city for the winter and waiting patiently for the coming of June and the return to his seven-acre summer home, nine miles out of Peekskill in Westchester county.

G. E. Bradshaw has opened a wholesale business at 55 West Twenty-sixth street, having a part of the big store of B. S. Slinn, Jr. In the same store are the firms of Clarence Slinn, whose specialty is carnations, and A. Saunter, the mignonette specialist, while Mr. Slinn himself will continue to stir the violet market daily.

Hitchings & Co. are building an ornamental range for J. Ogden Armour and a range of five houses with curved eaves for Mr. Mather, of Cleveland. Bowling Club, and J. A. Pettigrew, superintendent of parks there, came down Saturday, September 25, with their team to take the New Jersey Club into camp, a club where W. J. Elliott shines as the crack bowler on the green. The Bostonese returned to the Hub at night with their tail feathers dragging in the dust of defeat. John Crossley, the Newark florist, is a member of the club and is one who helped to defeat the city of beans and culture.

The referee in the bankruptcy case of Daniel J. Mackintosh has filed his final account and the matter will be closed at a meeting of the creditors called for October 5 at 67 Wall street.

Bowling.

The Astoria Bowling Club is an example to more ambitious and less practical clubs in and around New York. With a membership limited to twenty, almost the entire club is on hand every Tuesday evening. Monthly it has a ladies' night and banquet. The last week's Astoria scores were:

The Market.

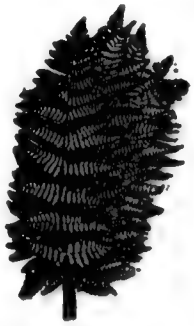

A little improvement is now noticeable in the market. Recent heavy rains have somewhat bedraggled the asters and the good flowers of those coming in are selling rather better. Gladioli still continue in oversupply, only the white varieties selling well. Another week will, however, almost finish these. Carnations are much more abundant, quite a number of growers sending them in. The bulk are short-stemmed and the supply exceeds the demand. Roses are doing a little better, although a great many poor, short-stemmed blooms are still to be seen. Richmond is coming better, while Killarney, White Killarney, Chatenay and Beauties are steadily improving.

Of chrysanthemums, Golden Glow and Marquis de Montmort are principally seen, with a few Mme. Bergmann. Violets are again on board, singles coming in small lots from a few growers. Some good white bouvardia is seen and sells fairly well. Lily of the valley, owing to more activity in the matrimonial market, is having a fairly good call. Dahlias, tuberose, cosmos and physostegia sell rather slowly. The supply of Lilium speciosum is much reduced and auratum are about over. A good number of longiflorums, however, are seen, ample for all demands. There is a good call for adiantum and Asparagus Sprenger and plumosus.

The Red Star liner, Manitou, from Antwerp, which landed in Boston last week, had among other cargo 2,976 packages or cases of bulbs or plants, mostly for Boston firms. The demand for bulbs this season for outdoor planting promises to pass all records.

John K. M. L. Farquhar arrived safely home from his extended European trip this week and was tendered a complimentary banquet at the Parker house, September 29. J. A. Pettigrew, W. J. Stewart and Duncan Finlayson had charge of the arrangements.

The average daily temperature for the late three summer months was 70.3, a little over the normal. The rainfall was 8.97 inches, about three inches below the average. Much of it came in heavy showers, widely scattered. The last few days have added somewhat to the precipitation, however.

A. G. Lake, at Wellesley Hills, is one of the local growers who still has faith in Fair Maid carnation. He has some thousands of it in fine shape. Other sorts grown are Enchantress and its rose and white sports, Fenn, White Perfection, Queen and Lawson. He has 18,000 plants benched altogether. Outdoors he grows 70,000 asters W. N. CRAIG.

some good business during Centennial week, which starts the first of next week. There are also quite a few large weddings booked for early in October by some of the west end florists.

Stock at the wholesale houses Monday, September 27, was light and the trade was having a hard time to get enough stock to fill orders. Last week Beauties were plentiful in all grades, as well as other roses, especially Bride and Maid. The quality is becoming better every day. Carnations are also looking better, but are not overplentiful at the present time. Lily of the valley is good and sells well. Asters are about over and mums are coming in. All outdoor stock is fast diminishing. Violets are too pale to sell at any fair price, but will soon be dividing floors of his building at 1122 Pine street. The first floor is used for the cut flower department, the second for supplies and the third for the manufacture of florists' wire work.

The first consignment of violets was received last week by the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. They were anything but fancy. This firm is also receiving consignments of Brides, Maids and Beauties from J. F. Wilcox, of Council Bluffs, Ia.

The Engelmann Botanical Club will resume its monthly meetings, beginning with October. The meetings, as usual, will be held in the rooms of the Central High School, on Grand avenue. These meetings are always interesting and visitors are always welcome.

Next week will be Centennial week and the general fall festivities will take place. It is estimated that 200,000 visitors will be in the city, and all in the trade should have a busy week and a general revival of business is looked for.

Henry Jennemann, of Webster Groves, has one of the largest collections of dahlias in the west and is cutting a superb lot of them for this market.

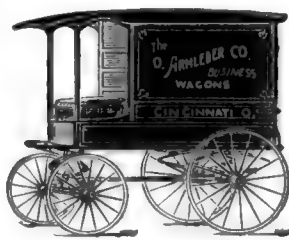

Mrs. M. M. Ayers has her fine show-house well filled with decorative plants of every description and reports business opening up well.

F. W. Brockman, chairman of the Horticultural Society's executive board, has accepted an invitation to be present at the meeting of the St. Louis Florists' Club, October 14, to give the members a talk on the coming flower show.

Plans for the fall flower show, to be given by the Horticultural Society, are well under way. The committees met in the Coliseum building Tuesday, September 21, to look over the floor space. The committee decided to place the floral display in charge of O. G. Koenig, the seed display in charge of H. M. Schisler, the fruit display in charge of Charles Gerber. H. C. Irish will have charge of Mr. Shaw's garden display and Phil Scanlan will have charge of the park department display. J. J. B.

OSKALOOSA, IA.—As already reported in the REVIEW, Theodore A. Greeve has been making preparations for an enlargement of his business. Having purchased an acre of ground on North Ninth street, at the entrance to Forest cemetery, he is erecting thereon two Moninger greenhouses and a seven-room residence. Mr. Greeve has been located on North Seventh street, but, needing more room and a more convenient location, has obtained this one on a paved street. He grows all kinds of vegetable plants, both for wholesale and retail market. He will do a general bedding plant business and make a specialty of this kind of plants, but will also grow cut flowers.

RHINEBECK, N. Y.

The air is full of the odor of the violet; one gets a sniff of it long before reaching the source. At the time of the visit of your correspondent, two of the hustling commission men from New York city were making the rounds, and they were not the first. There will be lots of blooms. Every grower, almost without exception, has stock in fine shape. The first 1,000 blooms were shipped to the big city a few days ago, just to remind buyers, as it were, that the main body of this modest little flower would soon be invading the stores.

There are half a hundred establishments that will supply the demand this season.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

There was a general expression of satisfaction among the florists here last week concerning the improvement in business. There was no boom or rush, but just a good, healthy increase. There was a good number of funerals, from which the orders were well distributed, and several weddings assisted in helping out the situation. From now on there will be plenty of business. The millinery and department store openings are about due and these, with the social functions, will contribute materially.

All the growers report encouraging prospects for the coming season, and some good stock in roses, carnations, chrysanthemums and violets is looked for. Asters are beginning to show a decline, but, while they have been unusually popular this fall, the demand is weakening and the appearance of other blooms is welcomed.

Club Meeting.

The first meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island since the summer vacation was held on the evening of September 20, with a good attendance. President Macnair was unavoidably absent. Secretary William E. Chappell read an interesting and instructive paper on the history of the club, dealing especially with the early days of the organization and its entertainment of the convention of the S. A. F. in the early nineties, with brief character sketches of some of those who were active in the arrangements.

One name was added to the membership list. The entertainment committee reported that it was the intention to introduce something of a social character at each meeting during the winter, and the lecture and paper committee had an interesting report to offer.

Various Notes.

H. L. De Blois, 80 Broadway, Newport, is taking many orders for winter and spring flowering bulbs.

James Dennis, Jr., of East Providence, was buried September 19. He died at the Rhode Island hospital September 16 from appendicitis, after an operation of a few days previous. He was in his seventy-third year and leaves a widow and one daughter. For several years he operated the range of greenhouses now known as Mrs. Olsen's Brookside Greenhouses, at the rear of 3124 Pawtucket avenue, East Providence.

C. W. Morey, Woonsocket Hill Nurseries, is booking numerous orders for shrubs, trees and vines.

Peter Byrnes, of Wickford, furnished the decorations for the Haviland-Allen wedding, at East Greenwich, September 25.

George L. Stillman, of Westerly, has just returned from New York, where he had an exhibit of dahlias at the American Institute, at which he was awarded first on best twenty-five blooms of dahlias, first on best collection of cactus, first on best collection of single dahlias, first on twenty-five blooms of yellow cactus shown in one vase, a special on fifty blossoms in one collection and a special on a growing plant of Dahlia viridiflora, the green dahlia. He was also awarded first on a collection of dahlias and second on a collection of cut flowers at the Vermont state fair, at White River Junction.

Fred B. Luther, of this city, has presented a float and fixtures to the Pawtucket Motor Boat Club, for a landing place.

W. G. Postings, gardener for Winthrop Chandler at the latter's estate on the Cliffs, at Newport, left September 22 to supervise improvements on Mr. Chandler's estate at Genesee, N. Y.

Former Councilman Frederick Littlefield began September 20 the duties of assistant superintendent of parks, with headquarters at Roger Williams park. His time will practically be given to the management of affairs, while the superintendent will devote his energy to improving the city's recreation places.

At the funeral of Frank C. Viall, clerk at the Rhode Island state prison, September 21, the display of floral pieces was unusually large, the forty odd pieces being well distributed.

O'Connor furnished the flowers and decorations for the Swan-Brown wedding, September 22.

Albin J. Johnson has begun the erection of two greenhouses at the corner of Broad street and Shaw avenue, 25x100 and 18x34, and an office building 14x18 feet.

HENRY A. DREER, Philadelphia, has been awarded the contract for the season's bulbs for the parks at Albany,
N. Y.

THE Dutch bulbs appear to be of extra good quality this year, in spite of the bad weather a good part of the season they were in the ground.

THE French bulbs are about all in; the last boat brought only 136 cases, 87 for R. M. Ward & Co. and 39 for a custom house broker and forwarder.

E. J. DEAL, of W. W. Johnson & Son, Ltd., Boston, England, sailed from New York September 29 after a most satisfactory tour among seedsmen as far west as Denver. He was in Dallas and Minneapolis, as well.

It is reported that a dozen of the leading wholesale seed firms in England have an agreement to the effect that they will not sell at prices lower than may be mutually agreed upon, and that they will not begin selling before an agreed date, which latter is considered an important feature.

THE Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, has advised that heavy frost that visited all the northwestern part of Michigan about September 10 materially damaged beans in the territory struck. There has been damaging frost all through the bean growing sections of Wisconsin, as well as one or two heavy hail storms.

JOHN BODGER and Mrs. Bodger, of Gardena, Cal., were in Chicago this week en route home from a summer in Europe. They visited some of the largest greenhouse establishments, the leading nursery and the L. A. Budlong onion set farm, where a five-gang gasoline motor plow was seen in operation and the venerable L. A. Budlong was found in the enjoyment of splendid health.

BURPEE'S CALIFORNIA PLANS.

W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, have bought a farm of forty acres three

When the seed trade heard last June that W. Atlee Burpee, David Burpee, his son, and Howard W. Earl, his business manager, all were in California at the same time, just on the eve of the departure of the two former for Europe, there was some speculation as to what unusual circumstances necessitated the presence of so many representatives of the firm so far from home at that time.
The fact was, they were looking over

Mr. Burpee found the following telegram from Mr. Earl:

Have purchased Lompoc ranch. Lonsdale delighted. Suggest calling it Floradale.

In speaking of the matter next day
Mr. Burpee said:

"It is no new idea on the part of Burpee & Co. to think of establishing a seed ranch and experimental grounds in some fertile part of California. While their contract crops in California have been subjected to personal inspection each year in early summer and fall, yet they have realized that to more fully attain their standard of quality in seeds it would be advantageous to have constantly a man on the ground."

Mr. Burpee feels that his firm is to be congratulated on securing the services of so skilled a horticulturist as Mr. Lonsdale to take charge of the work. He is widely known, both personally and by reputation. For many years in business for himself as a plantsman, for the last five or six years he has been in charge of the grounds of Girard College at Philadelphia. While not a seedsman, there are few better posted plantsmen in the country. Mr. Lonsdale was secretary of the S. A. F. in 1889 and president in 1895. He was for several years secretary of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, and he recently served a term as president of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia. He has for years been connected with the farmers' institute, the traveling lecture work by which the State Agricultural College seeks to teach modern methods to the farmers of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Earl and Mr. Lonsdale now are on their way home from Lompoc and expect to arrive in Philadelphia by September 29.

STEELE-BRIGGS REMOVAL.

The expansion of business of the Steele-Briggs Seed Co., Toronto, has necessitated the removal of the company's main retail store from the quarters which it occupied for so many years on King street east to a newer and much larger building on the other side of that thoroughfare, 137-139 King street. The company delayed the change for a long time, as the old house was almost a landmark of East King street, but, having decided upon a removal, the company has constructed what is one of the most modern retail seed stores in the country. The capacity for business has been increased at least one-third, with all facilities for the rapid handling of orders. There are four floors and a specially designed basement, where the heavier goods are carried. The premises are devoted entirely to the company's retail business, the wholesale establishment remaining on Front street.

been in charge of the firm's retail business and also of the greenhouses in the east end, remains at the helm.

DUTY ON CELERY SEED.

It is interesting to note that the first rumpus over the application of the new specific rates of duty on seeds has arisen outside the seed trade—it is between the customs department and the spice trade.

Celery seed has advanced at least fifty per cent in price during the last few days as a result of a decision of the Board of General Appraisers to levy a duty of 10 cents a pound on the imported article. September 20 it sold for 8 cents a pound, whereas by the end of the week the market was quoted around 12 cents. The price will be even higher in the opinion of importers.

The decision of the appraisers to make celery seed dutiable evidently surprised the trade, for it is the general opinion that the article should be free. It was free under the Dingley law, and most importers believe that the new tariff also meant to make it free. One large importing firm that has been assessed the 10 cents a pound duty states that it will contest the case to the end, and that it expects to win, but not within a year and a half at least.

There is no mention of celery seed in the new tariff. The appraisers, therefore, take the ground that it is dutiable at 10 cents a pound under the clause in paragraph 266 reading, "Seeds of all kinds not specially provided for in this section, 10 cents per pound."

Importers, on the other hand, believe it comes under paragraph 559 of the free list, which reads, in part:

Drugs, such as barks, beans, berries, balsams, buds, bulbs, bulbous roots, excrescences, fruits, flowers, dried fibers, dried insects, grains, gums, gum resin, herbs, leaves, lichens, mosses, nuts, nutgalls, roots, stems, spices, vegetables, seeds (aromatic, not gar-

Precedent appears to favor the contention of the importers, for, as before mentioned, celery seed was on the free list under the Dingley bill. Moreover, under the McKinley act a group of importers made a test case as to whether celery, anise and coriander seeds came under the heading "non-germinating seeds," and consequently on the free list. They were successful, securing the entry of these seeds without duty.

Protesting importers are convinced they will be successful in the end, but in the meantime the trade will be considerably unsettled. This condition will be further aggravated, because the question has arisen at a time when spot supplies, according to authorities, are light.

Boddington's Gigantic Cyclamen

The seed of Cyclamen is often sown too early in the year, from the middle of August to the end of October is the best time. The seedlings should be grown on at the flowering stage without any check whatever. When grown cool, the results are most satisfactory. Boddington's Gigantic Cyclamen are unequalled for size and quality of bloom. A magnificent strain of Cyclamen with flowers of extraordinary size and substance.

Gigantic White Butterfly.
Pure white; immense flowers.

Gigantic Snowflake. The largest of all white Cyclamen.

Gigantic Cherry-red. Most brilliant and effective.

Gigantic Rose. Immense flowers of a pleasing shade of light rose.

Gigantic Pink. Exquisite shade of soft pink.

Gigantic Crimson. Most striking color; under artificial light appears to be almost luminous.

Gigantic Crimson and White. A magnificent flower of the largest type.

Gigantic Syringa Blue (new). A charming color.

Gigantic Lilac. A very pleasing color, lighting up well at night.

Any of the above varieties, trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.00; 1000, $7.50.

Collection of the above nine selected varieties, one pkt. of each, for $4.00.

Gigantic Mixed. A mixture of all the above varieties in proper proportion. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, 75c; 1000 seeds, $6.00.

PRINCESS MAY. A very pretty type of Cyclamen. Color, pink, with suffused blotches of crimson at base of petals. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.25.

SALMON QUEEN. Undoubtedly one of the most distinct and beautiful salmon colors found in Cyclamen. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.50.

Cyclamen Persicum giganteum Salmon splendens. The finest salmon-pink variety. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.75.

Now You Are Talking of Placing That Order of..... Fall Bulbs

WHY not send it to a concern which buys the best imported stock regardless of cost? Our Bulbs come from a grower who has furnished us good stock year after year. Not a single complaint was made to us about the quality of our regular wholesale stock last year.

Isn't That Worth Considering?

MOREOVER YOU WANT TO SAVE MONEY

The new Tariff Bill established lower duties on nearly all kinds of Bulbs. We have so adjusted prices as to give you the benefit of every cent of the decrease.

Isn't That an Advantage Worth Taking?

ENGLISH SWEET PEA SEED.

The last hopes of the sweet pea seed growers in England for even an average crop are dying, I might say, are quite dead. It was hoped that in September the position lost in preceding months through bad weather would be retrieved, but cold and wet has prevailed until now, and short crops are inevitable. Novelty, which several growers intended to introduce, will be held back on account of the shortage. BEE.

COMMERCE IN SEEDS.

According to the statisticians of the U. S. Treasury Department, the exports of seeds in July of this year were scarcely more than ten per cent of what they were in 1908. The figures are:

1909	58,158

On the other hand, the imports of seeds in July, 1909, were practically double those of July, 1908. The figures are:

1908	$333,937

IMPORTS.

The imports of seed through the port of New York for the week ending September 18 were as follows:

GERMAN GRASS SEED.

Although the harvest is late this year, the big German grass seed exporters have issued their usual September crop reports. Several of these houses issue reports printed in English, because of their many customers in England and the United States. These reports indicate that the same conditions which have operated against satisfactory crops of garden and flower seeds, have prevailed in the German grass seed districts. The report by Conrad Appel, Darmstadt, covers the grass seed crops of the world, from which it appears that New Zealand has given a rather better crop on the items grown there than is the case in most other countries. In France and Austria the crops are middling at best and of the German situation Mr. Appel says:

"The cool weather in May and even in June last, changing with heavy rainfalls, which are rather abnormal at this time of the year, showed a marked influence on the yielding of the new crop in all centers of production. Nevertheless, it must be admitted that the few sunny days during the month of June did some good to the growth of the different sorts." On most varieties he has to report smaller quantities than last year, and generally higher prices. Red clover reports also as a short crop and a stiff market.

Gustav Schott, of Aschaffenburg, prefixes his report with the following sentences: "The unusual long and harsh winter, with little covering or snow, had a bad effect on the seed meadows generally. Springtime set in late and with its cold temperature and also want of moisture, lasting for months, vegetation was kept backwards and meadows looked poor. During the time of flowering incessant rains set in, continuing over a period of almost eight weeks and right until harvesting. Needless to say, crops suffered in all sections. The crop, on the whole, represents the smallest on record and the parole will be a high priced season."

A. Le Coq & Co., Darmstadt, date their report September 14. It covers the world's grass seed situation. American crops of Agrostis stolonifera are reported good. New Zealand is said to have a light crop of Dactylis glomerata, while America seems to have a fair crop, and there is a satisfactory crop in Europe. Festuca elatior is said to be a larger crop than last year, but prices are higher; F. ovina tenuifolia is not over one-fifth of a crop. F. rubra is a larger crop than a year ago. England reports good crops of loliums, but the market opened high. Continuing, the report says:

"This year's scarcity of fodder has caused the cutting of many acres of red clover and lucerne and consequently a much smaller acreage was left for seed saving. France and Italy also report a crop below the average. Nothing definite can be said yet, and it is well to wait until some more reliable reports are to hand. The crop of yellow trefoil was smaller than for years past and extravagant prices have been paid. Prices for alsike will be lower on account of good reports from Canada. White clover yielded only a small crop and the especially better qualities will be higher in price. Crimson clover was harvested in small quantities only and the stocks are cleared at fancy prices."

LOUISVILLE, KY.—The Sunlight Double-Glass Sash Co. has now been in business only three years, but has grown not only steadily, but rapidly, for it is said the business is now eighteen times what it was the first year. The firm manufactures a sash for hotbeds or coldframes that is made with two layers of glass, enclosing a dead air space.

PACIFIC COAST.

CLOVERDALE, CAL.—P. Matsuzaur, formerly with Domoto Bros., at Fruitvale, is now gardener for Mrs. Prescott at this place.

WALLA WALLA, WASH.—Articles of incorporation of the Walla Walla Floral Co. have been filed by James Wait, F. E. Mojonnier and H. H. Curr. The authorized capital stock is $50,000. It is the intention to conduct a first-class place.

SOIL FOR NURSERY STOCK.

The selecting of proper soil for the growing of ornamental trees by the nurseryman is one of the important steps in the business. Stock that has to be handled in a balled state must of necessity be lined out on ground that has sufficient stiffness to hold together well when the time arrives for transplanting. Naturally sandy or gravelly soil, even if it has a good quantity of adobe in it, is not suitable, although the stock may succeed well and everything else may appear to be satisfactory.

Again, soil that is too stiff and heavy and will not admit of considerable cultivating on the surface during the spring and summer, is not the best for this class of stock. It will be found that in the dry California climate, when it is not practicable to work heavy soil, it has a tendency to pack hard and dry on the surface. In this case the roots show a great tendency to burrow deeply after moisture and only a few long stringers are found, with almost an entire absence of fibers and surface-feeding rootlets. This makes it doubly hard to transplant with any degree of safety, and many a batch of healthy evergreens has been sacrificed because of this reason.

Generally speaking, however, it is preferable to grow all such stock on soil that is rather stiff than otherwise, and if cultivation is given during the dry season there is little or no danger in handling trees at any time.

With deciduous stock it seems to make little difference whether it is grown on sandy or heavy soil. If the soil is naturally composed of material that contains a fair amount of richness and does not dry out too much in the summer, ideal roots are had where there is an excess of sand. If, on the other hand, the soil is poor on the surface and the grower resorts to irrigating to get a large growth, the roots will burrow far below the surface and the same lack of fibers will be a great drawback to the stock when dug. Poor sandy soil that is unirrigated gives a better collection of roots, but a smaller and less vigorous top.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business conditions are somewhat improved. The cool weather and equinoctial rains are diminishing the outdoor stock, also driving the summer resorters home, therefore increasing the demand. Grand opera week had a tendency to enliven business; the Jewish new year also was an occasion calling for flowers, but the individual sales were small. The profits were computed on the volume.

show are in session this week. Considerable entertaining is in evidence, which of course is a source of revenue for the florist.

Asters are still to be had in good quality, but their end is in sight. The Crego varieties predominate. Carnations are more plentiful, but are too short-stemmed to move readily. Roses are equal to the demand and realize good prices. Bride and Maid are coming in slowly and are rather poor in quality. Golden Glow and October Frost mums are to be had in limited quantities, and are up to the standard. Dahlias are becoming more plentiful, but are short-lived and of little value. Sweet peas are scarce and show the ravages of the season. The first violets of the season were on display this week. The violet growers in this section are looking forward to a good season from the present condition of the plants.

Orders for field grown rose bushes are being booked rapidly for late delivery. From all appearances the popularity of the rose is on the increase. Portland is known as the Rose City and is well worthy of the name.

Various Notes.

J. B. Pilkington reports that the advance nursery orders to date exceed entire seasons of former years, which verifies the reports of the increasing fruit growing industry.

Martin & Forbes are remodeling their store, putting in a double window in place of the large one, and tiling the floor and putting in several mirrors.

secure plant stock and supplies and reported business as normal. He also stated that they seldom have a call for funeral work, as the death rate in his section is small.

R. M. Greig, of Anaconda, Mont. stopped over in this city to discuss the fruit raising industry. He has spent about a month investigating different localities and was much enthused over the data gathered and prospective returns from such an investment.

C. Halkier, of the Northwestern Floral Co., of Tacoma, was also a visitor, securing plant and nursery stock. He says business has substantially increased over former years.

Eugene Dailedouze, of Flatbush, N. Y., was interested in our city and the surrounding country. He made a detailed inspection of the principal stores and ranges and commented on the progress and up-to-date methods of the florists here.

T. M. Hamilton, of Salem, Ore., came to Portland on a short visit, making inquiries for carnation stock for the insane asylum greenhouses.

A. Axtell has bought out the business of Eugene Zimmer, in Vancouver, Wash., where Mr. Axtell will enlarge and conduct a general retail business.

E. R. C.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The flower situation in the local market is still strained. It will be two weeks at least before there will be a sufficiency of first-class cut material to supply the daily demand. While the cut of carnations is daily getting heavier, there is yet no showing being made by the many rose growers, and fancy or even first quality stock is not seen in any of the stores. Violets, owing to the sudden change in the weather from an excess of heat to quite the reverse, are rather plentiful and the dealers are selling them at 75 cents per dozen bunches, wholesale. They are not yet as good as they will be, but in a couple of weeks, if the weather remains cool, we may expect an ample supply of them.

Sweet peas are practically over for the season. A few short-stemmed ones are seen, but they are only suitable for funeral work. The best of the gladioli are gathered and, now that their time is about finished, it is safe to say that they have proven to be one of the best money-makers of the entire lot of outside flowers. Dahlias, while not in as good demand, have moved fairly well, especially during the last few weeks, when outside stock has been so scarce. Coreopsis, gailardias, stocks and other hardy material move well and are of better quality at present than at any time this season. Amaryllis are out of market again and all the varieties of Japanese lilies are getting in short supply, although the demand continues good. They cost the stores from $1 to $2 per dozen.

Mums seem to be rather backward this season and, the aster crop now being finished, there is a break in the available supply of hardy stock that is not being well filled. Some good mums that are grown under glass are offered, but they do not fill in for cheap stock.

Business is fair, with every indication of a large increase in the near future.

Various Notes.

Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia, is in town, at the Hotel Stewart.

The Julius Roehrs Co., of Rutherford, N. J., has brought suit for $1,000 for orchid plants sold and delivered to Mrs. B. Coryel, of Fair Oaks, Cal.

G. Symacopulos, of Oakland, has recovered from a severe attack of pneumonia, for which he spent several weeks in a local hospital.

The Fitchburg Floral Co., located on nineteenth and San Pablo avenue, Oakland, has gone out of business.

C. C. Morse & Co., of San Francisco; Gill, of West Berkeley, and J. Seulerger, of Oakland, were among the exhibitors of plants at the California State Exposition, in Idora park, Oakland, last week.

All the local dealers have received their supplies of European bulbs. There is said to be a fair demand for them. G.

Vegetable Forcing.

SECRETARY S. W. SEVERANCE has issued the yearbook of the Greenhouse Vegetable Growers' and Market Gardeners' Association of America, forty-eight pages, containing a record of the proceedings of the first annual convention of the organization at Cleveland, October 30 and 31, 1908.

FORCING ASPARAGUS.

I have one house, 12x50, two-thirds span, running east and west, which I use as a propagating house. The north bench I raised to a height of four and one-half feet and made a solid bed under it. I want to use it for forcing asparagus. Can I do this? If so, when should the roots be lifted? I have a lot of two-year-old plants in the field. I use hot water and the pipes on this side are on the wall. I am located in Tennessee. J. F. C.

Your proposed place for a forcing bed for asparagus is all right, as I understand it to be a solid bed underneath a raised bench.

The sides of the bed should be about a foot high, with about two or three inches of good, soft soil in the bottom. Set the old, transplanted root clumps on this soft soil, packing them very closely —because with it a boy can do as much as two men can do in a whole day with the hose—and do it better.

The system is equally valuable outdoors, and for many other crops besides vegetables—wherever you need water.

together, but working fine soil in between them thoroughly before placing each row. After the bed is filled, soak it thoroughly and fill up where it settles, also putting soil over the top where the crowns stick up above the surface.

Your roots are not old enough. Use only fine, old clumps, or they will not pay. Perhaps you can buy an old bed, five or six years old. Do not use beds that are less than three years old, and only the best plants then. Leave them in the field until late in the fall. In your warmer latitude, perhaps you can dig them from the field any time in winter you may want to force them, but in Illinois we have to dig them before the ground freezes much and store them in sheds or cold cellars until wanted.

As much soil is left on the clumps as will usually cling to them, but they are packed tightly together, as they make no root growth in the forcing bed. Give them a cool temperature for a few days. Then, when some sign of growth appears, run the temperature up to about 65 degrees at night; 55 or 60 degrees will do, but the growth will be a little slower. Liberal waterings are necessary. They will not yield a great while; therefore more plants should be available, to replant the bed as soon as spent. H. G.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEBYMEN.
Officers for 1909-10: Pres., F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; Vice-Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Sec'y., Geo. O. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-fifth annual meeting, Denver, June, 1910.

M. C. SILVER has settled in Brodhead, Wis., in the nursery business.

WILLIAM H. BACUS, a nurseryman of Nebo, Mo., has raised a new grape, which he has named Belle of Pike.

VICTOR DETRICHE, of Angers, France, known to nurserymen the world over, died September 7, aged 54 years.

It is reported that a large nursery will be started soon at Athens, Ga., by T. W. Dennington, formerly of Lavonia, Ga.

It is reported that C. S. Harrison, York, Neb., has made an offer of $10,000 to a Colorado college provided the college raises an equal amount elsewhere.

HARRY J. LAMKE, who has been in charge of the Cold Brook greenhouses, at Lenox, Mass., has bought the Percy Reynolds farm of 100 acres at Richmond, Mass., and will start a nursery.

THE Stark Bros. Nurseries & Orchards Co. has brought suit against the Utah Lake, Land, Water & Power Co., of Provo, Utah, to collect $579.09, alleged to be due for nursery plants delivered to the defendant company.

WILLIAM A. PETERSON, proprietor of Peterson Nursery, Chicago, is more than pleased with the way the peony business is developing this season. Early orders were not as numerous or as heavy as in some preceding years, but now that planting time has arrived the response from the retail catalogue is turning out to be excellent. According to Mr. Peterson, the demand for small lots of the best varieties for home planting is greater than it ever has been before and the retail sales are well ahead of last year.

THE government is now carrying on investigative work at regular forest experiment stations similar to the agricultural experiment stations in the different states. The first forest experiment station created in this country was the Coconino Experiment Station, at Flagstaff, Arizona, established last summer. Investigations covering many phases of forestry in the southwest have already been undertaken at this station. The second forest experiment station has been established this year on Pike's Peak, Colorado.

SPIRAEA THUNBERGII.

Will Spiraea Thunbergii stand to be closely pruned in low hedge form from one to two feet tall? G. H. P.

Spiraea Thunbergii will stand shearing and can be used as a dwarf hedge plant. The necessary trimming will, however, remove all the flowering wood. If you want a closer hedge, Berberis Thunbergii will be preferable. It stands close trimming, although much of its beauty is thereby removed. Spiraea Anthony Waterer makes a neat little hedge for bordering walks. Deutzia gracilis and D. Lemoinei each make neat, compact hedges, while Ligustrum Iboia and L. Regelianum are hardy and thoroughly reliable. C. W.

The Market.

Trade conditions changed little during last week. Asters are much to the bad and getting poorer every day. Roses and carnations are much improved. Cosmos is now arriving in quantity and sells well at the price.

Various Notes.

Miss Grace Newland, proprietor of Newland & Co., is in New York city to spend a few days.

William Legg has erected a new house, 18x50, to increase his space for bedding plants.

The regular weekly roll of the Florists' Club bowlers took place September 27 and was well attended. New faces appeared and the old standbys made it an enjoyable evening. The boys, being a little better acquainted with the alleys, rolled some excellent scores. The florists' team is also entered in one of the city tournaments and is now tied for first place. R. A. S.

MIAMI, FLA.

Mrs. S. E. Warner, of the Miami Floral Co., is spending several weeks with her parents at Palm Beach, the most noted of Florida's famous winter resorts, where is located the Hotel Royal Poinciana, said to be the largest hotel in the world.

J. W. Warner, manager of the Miami Floral Co., with his children, has just returned from an outing of several weeks, spent at his boyhood home, at Atlanta, Ga., where he has extensive interests and many friends.

J. H. Payne, president of the Jacksonville Floral Co., recently paid his first visit to the lower east coast section and was highly pleased with what he saw, especially in the way of tropical floriculture as grown at Miami. It was a revelation to him. Conditions in Florida this fall are better than before in years and the outlook for a grand season's business could not be brighter.

The Market.

Business here is fair. Flowers are quite plentiful. Asters are still the main stock. Not many carnations are to be seen as yet; what few come in retail at 35 cents per dozen. Asters retail at 35 cents and 50 cents per dozen. Sweet peas are all gone. Some fine gladioli are to be seen in the store windows; they retail at $1 per dozen. Outdoor flowers are now plentiful. Dahlias are looking fine; some handsome flowers are being cut. Roses retail at from $1.50 per dozen upward.

We have had no frosts so far, and everything outdoors is looking fine now, after having one or two copious rains.

Carnation plants are about all housed. They are fairly good plants.

Funeral work is good.

Various Notes.

J. H. Cleary had a nice window of gladioli last week. He also had a nice assortment of asters.

Wm. P. Peirce's window was attractively decorated with palms and ferns last week. He is showing some nice asters and roses at his store on Union street.

Among the visitors last week was L. D. Bryant, of A. H. Hews & Co. Mr. Bryant reports a heavy call all over the country for carnation plants.

W. L.

CLINTON, MASS.

The display of flowers and plants in the horticulture department of the Clinton fair September 14 to 18 was of great beauty. The gardens and greenhouses of the J. E. Thayer, Nathaniel Thayer, E. V. R. Thayer and Bayard Thayer farms, and E. W. Breed's and F. P. Sawyer's florists' gardens yielded of their beauty in profusion. There was the usual aquatic display from the Bayard Thayer gardens. E. V. R. Thayer's specialty, orchids, were shown, though not in such profusion as in some other years. J. E. Thayer's display included some remarkable geraniums grown in standard form. E. W. Breed showed lilies of the valley, celosia and a palm of especial beauty. F. P. Sawyer had a beautiful showing of foliage plants. Both florists showed designs. J. L. Moore, of Northboro, showed gladioli and dahlias, and B. Hammond Tracy, of Wenham, gladioli in profusion. In the cut flower department E. W. Breed showed gloxinias, snapdragon and other flowers. F. P. Sawyer had a special stand devoted exclusively to a fine floral display.

PORT ARTHUR, TEX.—Mr. Crawford, a florist and nurseryman from Michigan, has purchased two lots on Fifth and Galveston streets, with a frontage of 100 feet by 140 feet deep, and will erect an office and greenhouses. He expects to be ready for business this fall. Later he will purchase acreage property for a nursery.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The general tone of business is better than for a long time. The demand along all lines shows improvement and the feeling among the trade in general is better. There were several decorations last week, with a fair amount of funeral work, and, as the fall prospects are good, all that was necessary to put the trade in a good humor was a few busy days.

Asters are getting scarcer every day and what are coming in are poor. Gladioli are not so plentiful and lilies clean up every day. Roses are as fine as one could wish and carnations as good as one can expect.

The last two days of the week there was scarcely enough good stock to go around.

Various Notes.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. is receiving some fine roses and valley, which find ready sale.

The McCallum Co. is busy moving its store-room to the second floor of the building they have been occupying.

The Pittsburgh Florists' Exchange is receiving quantities of gladioli and Beauties. This company is receiving estimates on cold storage refrigeration.

J. F. Zimmerman has the sympathy of his many friends in the loss of his father, who died September 24. Mr. Zimmerman, Sr., was one of the old residents and was in his eighty-second year.

E. C. Ludwig and family are at Atlantic City.

T. P. Langhans, secretary of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., Ltd., is visiting violet growers along the Hudson river.

Harry Streiff has taken a position as chief decorator with Charles Erhardt, of Pittsburgh and Cleveland.

Joseph Haube, of Charleroi, made up a 6-foot column with a solid machine wheel, the largest combination funeral design seen here for a long time. It was made for the employees of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., for the funeral of Mr. Hartupee.

William Cromack, of Irwin, has returned from his summer visit to England, his old home.

Visitors: Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hausen, New York city; Charles Crall, Monongahela, Pa.; Mr. Dykes, representing Jansen & Co., New York. Hoo-Hoo.

MOUNT PLEASANT, IA.—Lucien Le Clere, formerly manager of the South Broadway Greenhouses, at Lexington, Ky., now has a position at the Mount Pleasant State Hospital.

NEW CARNATIONS

We have two wonderful new seedling Carnations, DEEP CRIMSON and BRIGHT PINK, which we now offer for the first time, and after a thorough trial we unqualifiedly recommend them as the strongest growing, freest blooming, healthiest and most satisfactory varieties of their color; large flowers, extra long, stiff stems; fine fragrance; calyx never bursts. As we are Rose growers and not Carnation specialists we will sell these varieties in strong, field-grown plants, clean, healthy and thrifty, while the stock lasts, and it is limited, at $8.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000.

ROSE-PINK ENCHANTRESS, strong, healthy, field stock, $5.00 per 100.

CINCINNATI

The Market.

Market conditions have been rather erratic. Some days it looks as though prosperity, the kind we heard so much about last fall, had struck us at last, and then come days so quiet that there is hardly a ripple of business. But if business is uncertain, the looks of most of the flowers are the same. Asters remind us of the looks of the stragglers of the recent convention: They have that tired look, as though they were glad of going to sleep. The outdoor flowers are about done for. The last few weeks have been so dry that there is nothing left worth speaking of.

Roses as well as carnations are improving daily and the crisp weather of the last few days has put some backbone into them. Early mums, such as Golden Glow, have been cleaned up, but here and there we see some later ones.

Prices have an upward trend and, while there have been no radical changes, quotations have been strictly adhered to on good stock.

Various Notes.

Some of the hyacinth bulbs are arriving in poor condition; cases of them are rotten.

Our florists are shaking hands with themselves over the financial success of the recent convention, as there is a snug little sum left over.

Will Murphy is still resting from his strenuous labors at the convention. He is spending his time fishing and hunting in northern Michigan.

J. A. Peterson enjoyed an outing at Mackinac Island.

Gus Adrian and Max Rudolph spent a few days with Wm. Murphy in the north.

You can see Charles Critchell any fine day taking out mother and baby in his swell rig.

Clarence Ohmer has left Cincinnati for Florida, where he hopes to benefit his health.

Geo. Corbett has been overhauling his place and has made extensive improvements.

Park Superintendent Wm. Rodgers lost his father-in-law this week and his brother florists extend their sympathy in his bereavement.

DETROIT.

The Market.

The regular run of winter business has hardly commenced. Still, there has been a sufficient demand for funeral flowers, flowers for the sick and for an occasional wedding to keep the majority of florists busy.

Stock was none too plentiful last week. The call for roses was especially heavy; therefore the small daily shipments were immediately disposed of.

We have been having some very favorable carnation weather, causing a noticeable improvement in the plants. Enchantress seems to be especially fine.

Golden Glow chrysanthemums are popular with the public, and the few on the market are easily disposed of. Asters are a thing of the past; the few that are still being sent in are fit to use only in the cheap work.

Various Notes.

Carpenters and painters are busy at J. F. Sullivan's store. The entire front is being altered and the interior of the store is also to be redecorated.

A carload of supplies in their original foreign packing cases was received at the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, from Bayersdorfer's.

Anthony Ottes, of Mount Clemens, is devoting part of his range of vegetable houses to carnations this year.

The Market.

We are having heavy rainfalls, which are rendering outdoor flowers unfit for immediate use. Trade in general has been good among the florists this week. Good stock has been selling well. Millinery openings took place this week, with the usual floral decorations.

Various Notes.

Mrs. C. E. Hapgood is visiting friends and relatives at Warren, Pa.

Chauncy Shade has accepted a position in William McCarthy's greenhouses.

Miss Jennie Adams, saleslady for the Robb Floral Co., has returned from a visit in Pittsburg.

William Nelson has accepted a position in the store of the Baur Floral Co.

Charles Offerle added two greenhouses to his plant on West Twenty-fourth street this summer.

Erie Elks presented "The County Fair" at the Majestic theater September 23 and 24. The decorations were of a striking nature and were much admired. Miles Miller, salesman for Charles Offerle, was one of the caste. B. P.

NORTH EASTON, MASS.

At the annual fair of North Easton Grange, September 21 to 23, there was a large display of dahlias and hardy lilies from R. & J. Farquhar & Co., of Boston. Mrs. H. A. Jahn, of New Bedford, showed 500 dahlias, embracing all classes. John K. Alexander had 500 fine flowers of cactus dahlias. Over $150 was distributed in prizes for children's gardens and produce, entries in all classes being more numerous than ever. There were no less than 135 entries for best children's flower garden in the town of Easton. H. Cole and Daniel Whyte judged the floral exhibits and W. N. Craig and Daniel Whyte, the gardens.

DERRY, N. H.—The gardens of the Franklin Street Conservatories, which are in charge of Samuel Bloomfield, are a grand sight at this time, with their many varieties of flowers now in bloom. The greenhouses are being enlarged and improved. The older one, which is 100 feet long, has had forty-two feet added to it, and a new one, 21x65, is now being constructed.

RICHARDSON PARK, DEL.—Hawke Bros. say that business in this section is greatly increasing. Cut flowers are in demand and there is a sufficient supply to fill all orders. Asters are in the lead, with tuberose close behind. Several of the florists here have much improved their ranges, by adding new houses and remodeling old ones. Many have their carnations housed in fine condition. A good winter's trade is looked for.

Greenhouse Heating.

THE coal market unquestionably is dull; the florist is an ever welcome customer, but more so this year than usual, for he is a regular buyer, poor seasons as well as good.

CHOICE OF BOILERS.

I have a marine boiler ten feet long, including fire box, and two feet in diameter; it also has a smoke hood. It is extra well made and a good steamer. Would this be all right for steam heating, and how many greenhouses 26x100, with 6-foot walls, would it heat?

I also have a horizontal boiler 4x12 feet. How many of the same sized houses would this heat? Which would be the most economical and most suitable for the purpose? The one would have to be bricked in, while the other, I understand, would only require an asbestos covering.

C. W. A.

The marine boiler is about thirty horsepower and should easily heat four houses of the size you mention. The horizontal tubular boiler has a greater capacity and would heat one more house. The horizontal tubular boiler will cost more to set up, but it will be more economical to operate and is superior as a steamer.

TO DOUBLE GLASS LATER.

We have two greenhouses and are building one more as described. One old house is 16x85 and the other 26x100, each nine feet to the ridge and separated by a few feet. Beside the 16-foot house we will add one house 35x125, eleven feet to the ridge. The boiler shed is at the north end and will be enlarged to cover the new house. We want to put in a boiler capable of heating these three houses, and three more of about the same size to be added later. What size boiler would you advise, also what size pipe and how put in for ground beds? Can it be piped for both steam and hot water, and do you think this a practical way of heating?

D. N. C.

To heat your range consisting of one house 16x85, one house 26x100, and one house 35x125, you will require a hot with one size of pipe; either 1½-inch, 1½-inch, 2-inch or 4-inch can be used. The 2-inch piping system is best arranged with one 2-inch flow and four 2-inch returns on each side wall of the greenhouse, and with one 2-inch flow and two 2-inch returns carried by each of the four purlin posts.

Your houses can be piped for both steam and hot water, providing you have an independent system for each, and this would be the most practical where both systems are desired, but it is not economical or practical with one piping system.

CAPACITY OF PIPES.

We have a house 110 feet long, which is furnished with thirteen 1-inch pipes. We should like to know how many 1¼-inch pipes it would take, to equal the thirteen 1-inch pipes? L. H. R.

Ten lines of 1¼-inch pipe are equal to thirteen lines of 1-inch pipe in point of radiating surface.

NOT ENOUGH RADIATION.

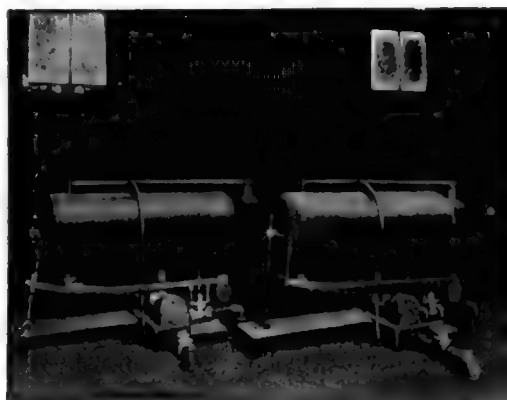

I have one greenhouse 18x75 feet and eleven feet to the ridge. I am using 3½-inch pipe for the flow and have six 2-inch pipes for returns. Will this give sufficient heat (about 45 degrees) in zero weather? A. R.

Should your house have only one glass gable and not more than two feet of glass on each side wall under the gutter, you will be able to carry 40 degrees at zero with the piping you have. A mercury thermometer would increase the efficiency of your piping in zero weather.

THREE VEGETABLE HOUSES.

We wish to heat three connected houses, 28x200. The houses run east and west, equal span; height to gutter six feet six inches; to ridge thirteen feet four inches; both ends glass and three feet of glass in the south side. The boiler house is thirty-two feet long and stands in the middle of the north side. From the boiler house to the west end, glass, the same as on the south side; east of the boiler house the range connects with old houses. We shall heat with steam. The boiler is rated at about forty horse-power and we want to set trap system. Any of the REVIEW's steam trap advertisers will be pleased to give full particulars regarding their traps for either system. For coils, 1¼-inch pipe or 2-inch are the popular sizes. Your houses will require the following for 60 degrees at zero: South house, fifteen runs of 1¼-inch or ten runs of 2-inch; middle house, thirteen runs of 1¼-inch or nine runs of 2-inch; north house, thirteen runs of 1¼-inch or nine runs of 2-inch. Start at the boiler with a 5-inch main flow, reducing to 4½-inch at the middle house and then reducing to 3½-inch for the south house. Return with a 2½-inch pipe, increasing to 3-inch from the center house and again increasing to 3½-inch from the north house. The flows can be carried on the purlins or under the eaves. The returns may be carried on the side walls and gutter posts.

CHECK VALVE NEEDED.

We have two houses, 30x130 and 25x130, running east and west. The ground inside rises about five feet to the west end. The boiler is twenty-five horse-power and is in a pit at the south-east corner. The two mains run on the same level to the north side of the farther house, a distance of about eighty feet, in a trench about fifteen inches under the level of ground. There is about ten feet rise from the boiler to the highest point in the mains, and about five feet to the first heating pipes. Each pipe is connected on the upper side of the main flow and returns back direct to the return. They are 1-inch and 1¼-inch. They don't circulate well, as the water

LET US REPEAT THESE BOILER FACTS

You know that the longer the fire travels, constantly coming in contact with the water ways, the more the heat is harnessed, and the less goes up the chimney. So far so good—but of still greater importance is the extracting or absorbing of the greatest amount of heat Directly in the combustion chamber when the burning gases are hottest. This is what is accomplished by The Burnham cross fire channels with their side flue openings, which channels are surrounded on three sides by extra deep water ways.

The heat that these deep water ways fail to absorb is then practically all taken up by the fire travel in its journey three times the boiler's length.

So these are the reasons why, for greenhouse economy, you can't beat The Burnham hot water or steam. Burn hard or soft coal. Send for Boiler Catalogue.

return at the boiler, or if you already have a check valve connected at this point, the trouble may be due to the check valve not seating properly. If desired, a small horizontal check valve can be connected to each coil just where it enters the main return pipe. You say there is ten feet rise on the mains from the boiler to the highest point of the main. It will be a great advantage to connect a $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch bleeder to the main flow near the boiler to drain this pipe. The bleeder can be connected to the main return near the boiler. With the bleeder and check valves as recommended your system should work perfectly.

COIL BOILERS.

Can you tell us the best way of constructing a coil boiler as to bricking in, etc.? Would 3-inch pipe be better than 2-inch? How much pipe would it take for 2,000 feet of radiation? H. F. C.

Either 2-inch or 3-inch pipe can be used to make a coil boiler. The 2-inch pipe would be preferable, as you could cut it yourself, whereas the 3-inch pipe must be cut at some pipe shop where the necessary tools could be had. Never build a coil boiler of regular steam pipe. Always use extra heavy or double extra heavy pipe, and one important thing is, be sure to screw the threads well into the fittings.

For 2,000 square feet of heating surface you will require a coil boiler having at least 240 feet of 2-inch pipe. Seven square feet of grate surface is necessary for the above.

Many years ago the writer built a coil boiler of 2-inch extra heavy pipe with return bend fittings. There were six rows of 2-inch pipe about six feet long in each section, and eight sections were required to do the work. The first season one of the cast iron fittings cracked during a cold spell and I nearly froze out. I simply mention this because coil boilers are not to be depended on, and for a little more money invested at the start you can get something far more substantial and much more economical.

DENVER.The Market.

Trade during the last two weeks has been a little dull, but the last few days, the weather being colder, business picked up and showed slight improvement. We have had a few good days and then some uncertain days, but they were not sufficient to change the general cheerful outlook. The warm weather has retarded its fullest development and there is a scarcity of stock.

American Beauties and Richmonds are perhaps the most plentiful in the rose line, both coming in in good quality, with fairly long stems. Carnations are in great demand but are not coming in any great quantity. One probable reason for the increased demand is the short supply of good asters, which are about over, and following them are the dahlias, which have seen better days. Chrysanthemums are beginning to be seen, but as yet are not much of a factor. Lily of the valley is fairly plentiful, but the price remains the same. Violets now and then are seen, but not enough to put on sale.

Various Notes.

We had President Taft with us one day last week and several dinner decorations was the result. The largest was at Senator Hughes' residence, it being done by A. H. Bush, of Daniels & Fisher.

The Interstate Fair and Exposition was held here last week and brought forth a fine display of floriculture. The list of exhibitors is too long to mention. The floral designs and table and mantel decorations were the center of attraction and brought out some fine work.

The Colorado Florists' Club met Thursday, September 23. Only routine business was attended to, after which a social time with refreshments was attended to.

What is the Most Vital Point in Grate Construction?

Grate makers and users agree that the most important point is to keep the air spaces open as long as possible under all conditions.

We guarantee to keep the air spaces of the open longer under any conditions than can be done by any other grate in existence.

The hottest fire you can build will not warp a "Martin," and it can be installed without disturbing the brick work.

We refer to Peter Reinberg, Emil Buettner, Bassett & Washburn, Wietor Bros., Adam Zender, Sinner Bros., Albert Dickinson Co., and many others.

Gentlemen:

FERGUS FALLS, MINN., May 12, '06.

I cannot say anything but good about the two Wilks boilers I bought from you in 1904. They have given me the best of satisfaction; would have no others.

Yours truly,

Gentlemen:

DALLAS, TEXAS, Dec. 1, 1904.

I find that one of the best boilers I have is one of your Wilks No. 24. What can you sell me one more for? I use it for soft coal and it is simply fine.

DAYTON, OHIO.

The Market.

The mercury in the last ten days has dropped considerably, from summer heat down to 40 degrees. During the warmer days stock was in full crop, but as the temperature dropped the supply of stock fell off. While the warm weather prevailed and stock was plentiful, business was seemingly quiet and quite a quantity of good stock went to waste, but as the atmosphere got cooler and crops fell off, demand for stock was so brisk that in the last few days it has been impossible to meet in full the wants of the trade. While the cool weather has been a disadvantage in one way, it has been beneficial in others. Roses especially have been coming in much better, but while one saves on the ice bill, he loses on the coal. There seems to be a good supply of carnations on the market, which are fine in quality. Lilies are a little scarce just now, as the cool weather has also put them back; lily of the valley also is scarce. We have had several light frosts, but none has been heavy enough to do damage. Nevertheless, people are taking in their outdoor plants, so as to be prepared for any calamity that Jack Frost might see fit to place upon them. The market gardeners are bringing in a great many outdoor flowers and selling them on the open market at low prices. This is hurtful to the trade, but after a killing frost these conditions will be over and the florist will benefit thereby.

Trade throughout the month of September, taking it in general, was quite satisfactory in every respect. Plenty of good stock was obtainable and prices were good. It was a marked improvement over the business of August, and a steady increase was noticeable, proving to the florist that the lull of summer business is slipping away, and that prospects for a good season are most promising. We had little rain during the month, but plenty of sunshine.

Various Notes.

The Miami Floral Co. has realized a fine business on field grown plants this fall. Their roses and carnations are in splendid shape.

The Dayton Floral Co. has had a busy week in funeral work. They report business to have been most satisfactory last week and state that the outlook for fall was never better. Mr. Matthews, proprietor of the company, believes that

ROCHESTER, N. H.

At the annual fair held in the beautiful Cold Spring park, there was, as usual, an attractive floral display. It is doubtful if any other fair has a more picturesque and pretty floral court, a large flower bed with growing plants and a fountain playing in the center, giving the whole a cool and inviting appearance. Frank I. Shorey made an efficient superintendent of this department.

The plants and flowers are here much better arranged than at the average cattle show, and the committee and energetic assistant secretary, F. M. Hayes, have every reason to feel proud of their department. Killing frosts through New Hampshire prior to the show somewhat reduced the cut flower exhibits, but all the tables were well filled. Fine displays of pot plants were made by E. A. Corson, East Rochester; Chalmers Conservatories and M. R. Folsom in the professional class. These same exhibitors had a nice lot of floral designs, those from E. A. Corson being equal to those seen in the large cities. J. K. Alexander, East Bridgewater, Mass., was the largest dahlia exhibitor, capturing all the first prizes.

Mrs. Ellen Trask Roberts, of Alton, N. H., had one of the finest displays of sweet peas we have seen this season, in some thirty varieties. There were many fine exhibits of pot plants and cut flowers from amateurs, and next year the indications are for more exhibitors from a distance than ever.

W. N. CRAIG.

TAUNTON, MASS.

Joseph Thorpe, of Fisher street, celebrated his golden wedding a few days ago. Mr. Thorpe is a keen horticulturist and won a silver medal for twenty-five cactus dahlias at the late New England dahlia show in Boston. He is a successful market grower of vegetables, but takes a great pride in flowers. C.

DIGHTON, MASS.—George H. Walker's dahlias are exceptionally fine this season. He has won premiums at the Boston, Newport, New Bedford and other shows and reports a better demand than ever for tubers.

LAFAYETTE, COLO.—George Schroeder has charge of the growing department of the Schroeder-Son Nursery Co. and is one of the principal stockholders in the organization. His father and sister have retired from the business.

NEWPORT, R. I.

The feature of the late Newport show on the closing day was the table decorations. In the several classes there was an excellent competition. The judges were Mr. Fraser, A. Meikle and Richard Gardner, all of Newport. The best table decoration of outdoor flowers was from I. Townsend Burden, Charles Newton gardener, and consisted of dark red celosias and Asparagus plumosus effectively used. One class was for the best table decoration of any material, such as plants, flowers or fruits, or along with such articles as silver or glassware. There was a bewildering display of valuable gold, silver and glassware on these tables. The first prize went to C. E. Gunther, who had a centerpiece of Adiantum Farleyense and four large vases of yellow flowers and grasses. James Boyd, gardener to J. J. Astor, was second and Herbert Coles, third.

The Rickards Bros. silver cup in class D went to A. J. Dorward, gardener to Mrs. T. J. Emery, who had a centerpiece of Salvia splendens and adiantum, with silver fruit dishes, candlesticks and shades and a gardenia flower for each guest. The second prize was taken by Andrew Pow, gardener to Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, who used Adiantum Farleyense and Pandanus Veitchii leaves, but no flowers; gardenias were used at the plates. Pink hollyhocks and adiantum, with gardenia boutonnieres, were in the third prize table. For the best decoration to show originality Mrs. E. J. Berwind's special prize was captured by A. J. Dorward with an effective arrangement of Killarney roses and Farleyense. There was a tall center vase and lower ones at each end. An orchid decoration secured second place. Cattleyas and Farleyense were used as a centerpiece and these were encircled by four smaller vases of yellow oncidiums, gardenias being as usual at each plate.

EXTREMES IN DESIGN WORK.

It has been said that the American people are prone to go to extremes in any new fad or style. To illustrate: Some time ago it became the style for the ladies to wear a kind of headgear which bore some resemblance to an inverted 10-inch flower pot. No sooner had this style been adopted than some of our fair sisters appeared in something which looked for all the world like an inverted 36-inch plant tub. Likewise it became the style some time ago for our floral artists to use a more or less loose arrangement of flowers in making designs. Judging from some recent illustrations and descriptions, it seems to me that this is being carried altogether too far. A certain latitude in this loose arrangement is all right, and we are using it right along in our work, but we see no use in having our designs made in the form of a star, cross, heart, wreath, etc., and then using such a loose arrangement of flowers that no one would have the least idea of what shape was intended. Perhaps we are wrong in this. At any rate, we would like to see the matter discussed by some of our floral artists through the columns of the REVIEW. C. L. WALKER.

A YACHT CLUB DINNER.

This dinner decoration is arranged for a yacht club styling itself The Tadpoles. The groundwork, so to speak, of the decoration is the scarlet dahlia, Lyndhurst. Over these dahlias papyrus was arranged to give a reedy effect. Above the papyrus are lotus seedpods and on the seedpods frogs do service for the more youthful tadpoles. In front of each cover are pond lilies and under each plate, large pond lily leaves with the stems towards the center to give a finished effect. This dinner decoration is in Charles Henry Fox's happiest vein.

PHIL.

THE NECESSITY OF VARIETY.

Variety is not only the spice of life, but a necessity in good work among cut flowers and foliage. To be tied to using roses and carnations, or asters in summer, means that your trade will not reach its limit. Now is the best time to note what you will grow in your garden next year, if you grow in connection with a retail trade. If asters have largely spoiled in not coming into bloom, it should not mean that you should not put any in next season, but try less of them in another part of the garden or field. Be sure to have a bed of gladioli, also some dahlias, besides several other smaller flowers in like quantity. English daisies lend to the beauty of such gladioli as America and Augusta. The latter gladiolus is, by the way, a freer bloomer than America, which, however, excels the former in size and delicate color. The daisies are best in a cluster, a few surrounding the larger flowers with their long stems. Some of these daisies are of good size and beautiful color. The white are fine with white asters.

A bed of seedling phlox is not amiss with its diverse colors. We found a dainty scalloped lavender phlox that gave a different finish to a groundwork of lavender and purple asters, just as a few bits of the paler Lorraine begonia are among Enchantress carnations. These smaller flowers and similar ones seem to be the best for mixing with heavy blooms, as to mix flowers of two colors gives a checkerboard effect, not at all desirable. To group larger flowers of one kind together gives a design or spray a character of its own.

Foxgloves stand well in tall vases for interior decoration. The creamy white flower can be used in funeral work after being well soaked in water. The blue larkspurs, or rather the new delphiniums, are acceptable, both the light and dark shades; the latter for patriotic displays just touch the spot.

Indian pinks are beautiful at night for table decoration, either alone with foliage or with pink or red cyclamens.

Let us also hope to see more of the dahlia another summer, especially the cactus flowered varieties, although the others are good and with gladioli make up well. For instance, a wreath on an easel, of Adiantum hybridum (Farleyense would do as well) and four spikes of the crimson, orange-throated Gladiolus Breuchleyensis, in a spray falling from the upper left across to the right, with a cluster of Dahlia Lyndhurst, just the color of the unopened buds of the gladiolus, arranged at the base of the gladioli on the upper left of the wreath. There need be no ribbon, although the card could be hung inside the wreath with a few loops and ends of narrow black ribbon.

ADVERTISING AS AN EDUCATOR.

The REVIEW previously has spoken of the efforts being made by B. Rubel, president of the Fleischman Floral Co., and George Wienhoeber, manager of the concern, to popularize their business. The walls and ceiling of the Fleischman store are covered with plate glass mirrors, the fixtures are of marble, brass and glass, and the environment does not indicate cheapness in any particular. Some time ago it was decided that it would be good policy to counteract any impression that flowers bought of Fleischman would be DECORATED AUTOMOBILES.

Washington, the capital city, had its second great automobile parade September 30, under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce, of which William F. Gude is president. Like the automobile parade held in Washington early in the summer, this one was a great success. The first parade had served to stimulate interest, and more than 100 decorated cars paraded in this second great event. All the leading florists of Washington were called upon to decorate one or more of these automobiles, the prizes being so attractive that there was the keenest of competition, and much fine work was done. The Chamber of Commerce offered a silver bowl as a sweepstake prize, valued, it is stated, at $600. This was won by the entry representing the gun carriage shop of the United States navy yard and was decorated by F. H. Kramer. The larger accompanying illustration shows this motor-driven float. The center was a gun deck carrying five of the navy's rapid firing cannon, also five seamen gunners, a bugler and the driver. In the decoration Mr. Kramer used 3,000 long-stemmed American Beauties, 500 8-inch pans of Boston ferns, twenty-five baskets of magnolia leaves painted with gold, 500 yards of Beauty ribbon, and considerable other material. At night the float was lighted with 400 red, white and blue electric lights. The largest gun measured eighteen feet long and the total weight of the float approximated ten tons and was said to represent a value of $100,000.

Among the numerous decorated automobiles which joined in the parade, but did not compete for awards, was a float representing the Washington Florists' Club. This was decorated by George H. Cooke and is shown in one of the accompanying illustrations.

One of the judges was Mayor Philip Breitmeyer, of Detroit. The presentation of the prizes occurred at the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce on the evening of October 1, when President Gude, whose oratorical abilities are well known to all florists who attend conventions, presented the magnificent Chamber of Commerce cago dailies costs from 25 cents to 40 cents per agate line; that is, from $75 to $120 for a single insertion of the advertisement reproduced herewith. So Mr. Rubel picks out the paper that he thinks will reach the most of the kind of people who buy flowers and feels that it would not be worth while multiplying the cost of advertising to reach the few flower buyers who do not read the city's leading daily. How successful the plan has been is shown in Mr. Wienhoeber's statement that since they began emphasizing the popular price idea a couple of years ago the business has become three times what it was before.

A TAFT WINDOW.

While Taft, the tireless traveler, is swinging around the circle, finding out how little the western people like his tariff bill, it will be the fashion in each city that he visits to decorate the store windows in his honor.

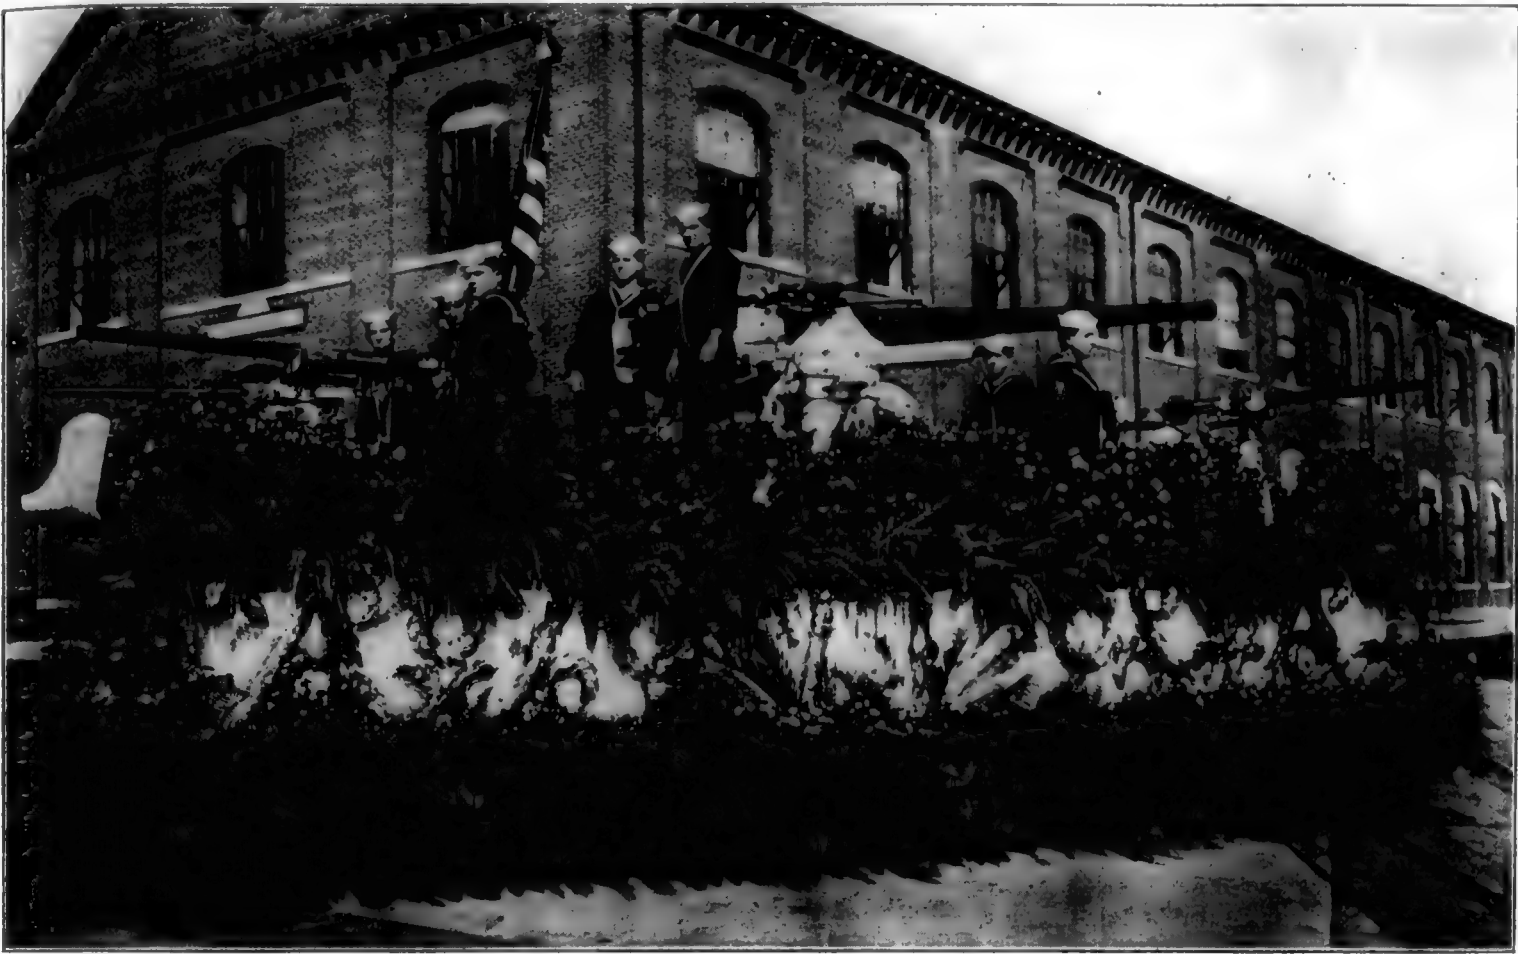

The accompanying illustration shows what Muir did at his store on Grand boulevard and Forty-seventh street, Chicago, the day the President passed. The window is an exceptionally good one for display, because it affords a view on three sides. No plants or flowers were used in the window that day, but the background contained some specimen Boston ferns and overhead there were two fern baskets, in which a number of small flags were inserted. A portrait of the President, five feet high, was the center of the decoration, draped with flags and ribbon and with Clematis paniculata, blooming of the handsomest windows he ever had seen arranged in his honor.

HYACINTHS AND VON SIONS.

I received my shipment of Dutch hyacinths and Von Sions a few days ago. I potted and boxed them off, placed them in a frame, wet them down and covered lightly. Was this treatment all right?
D. W. D.

Give the boxes or pots a good covering of ashes or soil. Cover them with board shutters to keep them cooler and throw off soaking rains. Before severe weather either protect well with straw and leaves, or better still remove to a cellar floor, one where there is no artificial heat.

OUTDOOR WORK.

he calls which florists are receiving for advice and assistance in the matter of planting hardy stock for their customers, are increasing to a notable extent. This is particularly true with those florists who plant tender stock in the spring. There was a time when the man with a 50-foot lot was content with no other embellishment than a couple of beds of geraniums, but nowadays he wants as much hardy stock as he can find room for in his space. Indeed, the call is such that some florists refer to it as landscape work, and there are enough real landscape jobs coming up in most of the smaller cities that a florist who pretends to be equipped for all outdoor work must have more or less knowledge of landscaping and all that it implies.

Landscaping is a department by itself and requires rather more general knowledge than is needed to plant a bed of soft-wooded stock. Not only must the planter of hardy stock have a knowledge of a large number of varieties and their adaptabilities, but he must be able to devise a different treatment for each job; it will not suffice to make all the properties in a block as like as the peas in a pod. And when one residence grounds has passed under the hands of a capable landscape man, it almost always leads to calls for similar work for the neighbors of the man who lead the way.

There are several advantages in being able to do hardy planting; it not only offers a chance for largely increasing the volume of business, but it is done in early spring, before the tender stock can go out, and much may be done in autumn and early winter, so that for those who do bedding out the addition of hardy stock greatly lengthens the season. Again, it is the most natural thing in the world for the house owner to consult his florist on such matters, and if the florist is not equipped to talk intelligently and do business, the customer is likely to be led away by one who has the facilities for doing anything that comes his way.

There are a large number of excellent books on landscaping and the handling of hardy plants which will make excellent winter reading for any florist who does garden work.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND.—McDonald & Steele recently exhibited in their window a fine assortment of dahlias, comprising about sixty varieties.

SHILLINGTON, PA.—Howard M. Shilling met with an accident June 19 which developed into blood poisoning, but he now is again able to attend to his duties in the greenhouses.

HYACINTHS AND VON SIONS.

I received my shipment of Dutch hyacinths and Von Sions a few days ago. I potted and boxed them off, placed them in a frame, wet them down and covered lightly. Was this treatment all right?
D. W. D.

Give the boxes or pots a good covering of ashes or soil. Cover them with board covers to keep them cooler and throw off soaking rains. Before severe weather set in protect well with straw and leaves, better still remove to a cellar floor, where there is no artificial heat.

OUTDOOR WORK.

The calls which florists are receiving for help and assistance in the matter of handling hardy stock for their customers, are increasing to a notable extent. This is particularly true with those florists who plant tender stock in the spring. There is a time when the man with a 50-foot lot is content with no other embellishment than a couple of beds of geraniums, but nowadays he wants as much hardy stock as he can find room for in his lot.

Indeed, the call is such that some florists refer to it as landscape work, and there are enough real landscape jobs coming up in most of the smaller cities that a florist who pretends to be equipped for all outdoor work must have some knowledge of landscaping all that it implies.

Landscaping is a department by itself which requires rather more general knowledge than is needed to plant a bed of geraniums. Not only must the florist have a knowledge of a large number of varieties and their adaptabilities, but he must be able to devise a different treatment for each job; it will not suffice to make all the properties in a block as like as the peas in a pod. And when one residence grounds has passed under the hands of a capable landscape man, it almost always leads to calls for similar work for the neighbors of the man who lead the way.

There are several advantages in being able to do hardy planting; it not only offers a chance for largely increasing the volume of business, but it is done in early spring, before the tender stock can go out, and much may be done in autumn and early winter, so that for those who do bedding out the addition of hardy stock greatly lengthens the season. Again, it is the most natural thing in the world for the house owner to consult his florist on such matters, and if the florist is not equipped to talk intelligently and do business, the customer is likely to be led away by one who has the facilities for doing anything that comes his way.

There are a large number of excellent books on landscaping and the handling of hardy plants which will make excellent winter reading for any florist who does garden work.

FIELD OF ASTERS.

The accompanying illustration shows a part of the field of asters grown by A. G. Lake, Wellesley Hills, Mass., and photographed September 18. The patch in question contained 33,500 plants. The varieties were principally Semple's and Vick's Branching. The plants showed remarkable vigor, many standing three to three and one-half feet high and carrying forty long-stemmed flowers per plant. A fair average per plant would be twenty good flowers. Mr. Lake had an earlier batch, containing some 36,000 plants, which immediately preceded those illustrated. They were the finest lot of asters I had seen for a long time.

SEASONABLESUGGESTIONS*Lilies.

The earliest batch of Harrisii lilies are now six to eight inches high, and have recently been placed in a house where the night temperature averages 62 degrees. These are wanted for Christmas flowering, and as they have the pots well filled with active roots they can be assisted with weak manure water, or somewhat higher temperature can also be afforded later if they appear to be a little late. Plants for Christmas should have the buds showing by the middle of November at the latest. Forcing for Christmas is quite different from Easter. We now have a decreasing amount of light and heat, while in the early months of the new year, while the cold is more severe, we have a daily gain in light. Do not allow aphids to get any hold on the plants. If fumigation once a week is done, there will be no trouble. Spraying with a nicotine solution is equally effective, if carefully done.

Numerous inquiries come in regarding the holding back of lilies for Easter. These each refer to Harrisii. Easter in 1910 comes unusually early, and it may be possible to hold back Harrisii for that date, provided they are given a cool house for the next two or three months, a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees being about right. Probably some of these will flower before the last of March, but the average florist can generally use a few lily flowers in his business.

Multiflorum and Formosum will, or should be, potted before now and held in a coldframe or pit. Giganteums are always late in arriving. They will need considerable pushing to get them in flower, and no time must be lost in potting them after their arrival.

Cannas.

Frost will have cut down the flowering cannas in many places by this time. They should not be dug right away. Usually after a freeze we get a spell of clear, warm weather. Take advantage of this dry weather to cut down the tops to within a few inches of the ground, and in digging allow some of the soil to adhere to the roots. The clumps should not at this time be cut in pieces or disturbed in any way. The roots will keep under a greenhouse bench, but this is not a good place for them, owing to the moisture in the atmosphere and the constant drip. A cellar where potatoes, gladioli and dahlias will winter is ideal for cannas. If the floor is inclined to be damp, raise them on boards. A tier of shelves makes the best possible storage place for them. Be sure to keep the roots away from furnaces or other drying heat.

Romans and Paper Whites.

The earliest batch of Romans and Paper Whites can now be introduced to heat, and in the case of Paper Whites, which are much quicker to start than Roman hyacinths, blooms can easily be had by the beginning of November. At that time there is usually a glut of chrysanthemums, but the average country florist will find a few boxes useful, especially where he has design work almost every day. Succession batches of Paper Whites can be stood below the benches in a cool house and lifted up to the light before the flowers open. Roman hyacinths had better be kept in the dark a little longer, until they are well started. It will only take three weeks to flower them in a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees at night.

Stevias.

If your stevias are still outdoors, and it is always well to leave the bulk of the plants outdoors as late as possible, keep a close watch on them. Heavy wind storms will raise havoc with them, unless securely staked, while the least breath of frost will kill them. If there is a deep frame or pit which will afford protection from the elements, the stevias will do nicely without fire heat for a number of weeks yet. Of course, a few may be placed in a warmer house to furnish an early cutting, but where a Christmas or January crop is wanted, the plants should be kept as cool as possible. Anything above absolute freezing will suffice for them. Stevias are cheap and commonplace plants, but the flowers are useful not only for design but for bouquet work. Cannot some hybridizers give us a light pink and lavender blue variety? Such would be in big demand.

Hydrangeas.

Hydrangeas are tolerably hardy plants, and will endure considerable frost when their wood is thoroughly ripened. When, however, the leaves and ends of shoots are soft and green, it requires only a few degrees below freezing to destroy the soft wood and foliage. Every year a number of growers, anxious to leave all their plants as late as possible, get caught. If spare frames are at disposal, it will pay to place sashes over the plants after the middle of October, or even earlier in the colder states. Keep the soil somewhat drier and endeavor to get the wood as well ripened as possible before cold weather sets in. If sashes cannot be placed, let the plants be stood where they can get the fullest sunlight, and make arrangements for covering them with sail cloth or some other similar material when frost threatens.

It is unsafe to leave the plants in the fields much longer. Of course, we may get no frost to injure them for weeks, while, on the other hand, a 10-degree drop below freezing will probably ruin all flower buds for another season.

Lorraine Begonias.

The growth Lorraine begonias are now making cheers the heart of the cultivator. The plants practically double in size, though by magic, during the last half of September and first part of October. Any potting of late stock should be finished forthwith. Nice 6-inch pans can still be made by putting three or four small plants in each and giving them a bench in a warm, sunny house. At this early date there is not much sale for flowering plants, so it is as well to keep the earliest flowers picked off. A few will, however, sell at Thanksgiving. As many as possible should be got in good shape for Christmas, at which time Lorraines are always a leader.

Until the flowers are well expanded, we like to give the plants a temperature of 60 degrees. When the plants are flowering freely a house 10 degrees lower will harden them and give the blooms greater substance. Be sure that where the necessary supports have not been given these are placed in the pots at once. The stakes should be thin and unobtrusive always. Cow manure water will benefit the plants which are well potbound. Be on the safe side and let it be weak, rather than strong.

Hardy Herbaceous Plants.

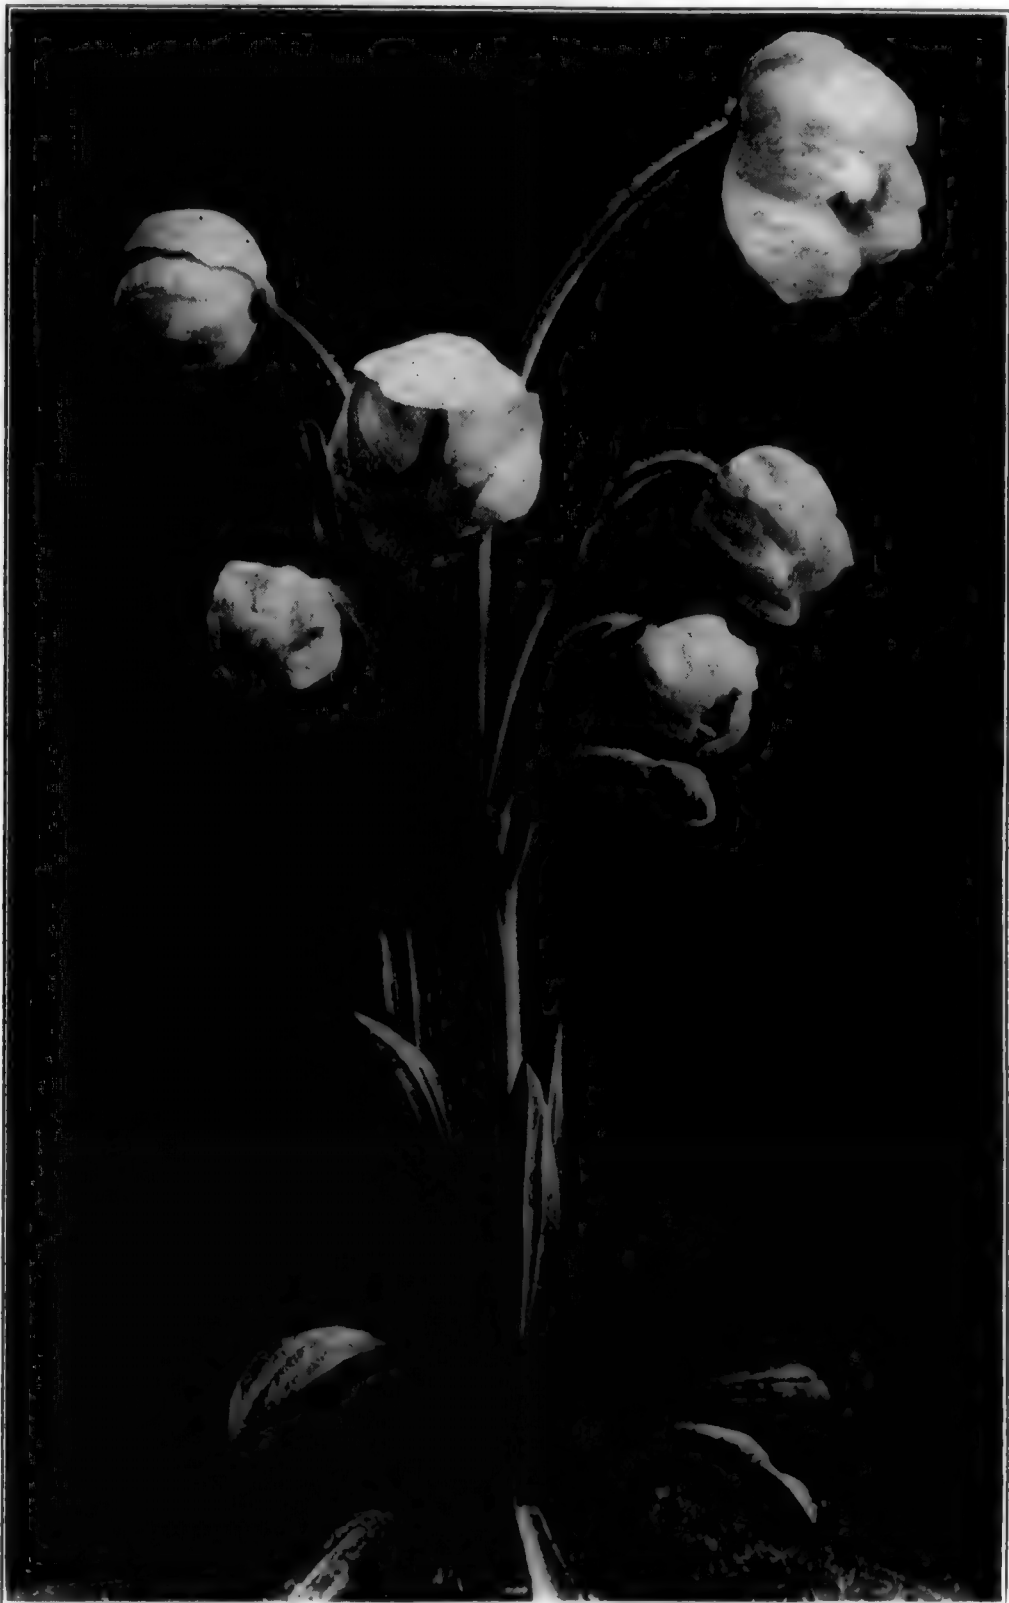

October is the month par excellence for the replanting of hardy herbaceous perennials. Peonies and the various irises ought to have been moved earlier, but it is not too late to move them during the present month. About all herbaceous plants delight in a soil which is well drained, deeply plowed and liberally manured, and it always pays to replant them at intervals of three years, peonies being an exception. It is a great mistake to leave planting until spring, when so many other duties crowd us. Some of the useful genera which should be planted now are: Hemerocallis, asters, helianthus (except multiflorus plenus, which is a doubtfully hardy plant in many places), spiræas, aquilegias, campanulas (except Medium, which should be wintered in coldframes in the northern states).

Delphiniums planted in October will flower finely next summer, as will veronicas, rudbeckias, phloxes of all kinds, physostegia, lupinus, lychnis, heuchera, gypsophila, heleniums, hibiscus, lily of the valley, centaureas, hardy border carnations, boltonias, liatris, erigeron and trollius.

Anemone Japonica is better transplanted in spring. Pyrethrum roseum can be moved in either fall or spring; if carefully mulched, fall is better than spring. Pyrethrum uliginosum and the varieties of Chrysanthemum maximum, including the Shasta daisy forms, do well moved in fall. Of course, all newly-planted herbaceous stock should have a mulching of straw, leaves, seaweed or hay after the ground is frozen solid, and losses will be few.

MECONOPSIS INTEGRIFOLIA.

To that intrepid explorer, E. H. Wilson, who has just arrived in this country for a stay at Harvard Botanic Garden and Arnold Arboretum, to classify the plants sent there as a result of his last trip to China, we are indebted for the discovery of Meconopsis integrifolia. A Russian originally discovered this plant, and along with seeds of several other plants, and described as from Yunnan, seed of M. integrifolia came into the possession of Maurice de Vilmorin. From these plants were raised, the first of which flowered in April, 1896, and the remainder the following year. Unfortunately, the plants failed to produce seed, so that the final honors associated with Meconopsis integrifolia must undoubtedly be credited to the firm of J. Veitch & Sons, of Chelsea, to them we are indebted for the photograph from which the accompanying illustration was prepared. They say, with reference to it: "In the neighborhood of Tatieu-lu the magnificent yellow poppy was discovered by Wilson, who secured seed from which plants were raised that flowered at Langley in September, 1904, and it was distributed the following year." The Gardeners' Magazine, London, recently said of it: "Not only have they given to gardens a plant of great beauty, but they have placed it within easy reach of all, and it is a matter of history that Meconopsis integrifolia appears triumphantly in this firm's exhibit every year, at the Temple show. At the one recently held they contributed a group that testified alike to the vigor of the species and to the skill displayed in its cultivation."

"Since its introduction, M. integrifolia has been the ambition of hardy plant specialists," says Thomas Smith, a well known English specialist. "In every respect it is typical of that inordinate beauty characteristic of the entire genera; sharing features common to other species, it has also characters peculiar to itself which render it most distinct. The foliage is gray-green, densely clothed with innumerable fine, needle-like hairs of a golden-amber color; the leaves are variable—at times long and narrow; they occasionally measure three inches across, and are always arranged in the form of a rosette. The golden, ball-like flowers are carried upon slender stalks which spring at close intervals from the upper part of a simple stem. These do not partake of the ephemeral nature of the poppy race, as I have noticed flowers remain effective for a fortnight. The plant is a hardy biennial, and attains a height of two feet under favorable conditions. It is deciduous, though not to the same extent as with M. aculeata and M. racemosa.

"The crucial stages in growing M. integrifolia are those of seed raising, and in providing suitable flowering quarters. Practice will readily overcome the first, but intuition is necessary in interpreting their wants when planting permanently in the open.

"Seed is short-lived and must be sown as soon as ripe, or at latest early in spring. Pots or pans may be employed for sowing, but the drainage must be ample. Use a potting compost of sandy loam and peat—that which is used for hard-wooded greenhouse plants is suitable. With this fill the pots with soil and water it, and as soon as the excessive moisture has drained off, sow the seeds upon the surface and lightly cover with sifted soil. Place the seed pots in a cool frame and exclude light. When germination becomes evident admit light, but shade from direct sunlight. Water must be carefully supplied, as the seedlings easily damp off at this stage, and air must be given on favorable occasions. As the seedlings become large enough to handle, put them singly in small pots, employing a compost similar to that used for seed sowing. Maintain a light shade during periods of bright sunshine, and spray the plants overhead morning and evening. Towards the end of July they will be ready for planting out; those intended for flowering in pots are grown on under the above conditions, repotting as becomes necessary; 9-inch and 10-inch pots are suitable for flowering specimens.

"The best position for permanent planting, not only for this species, but for all the meconopsis is, I rather fear, a debatable point. Travelers emphasize what their leaves proclaim, that they are plants adapted to an atmosphere always more or less charged with moisture, and it is here that numbers of English growers have failed in a too generous interpretation of this weakness, thereby subjecting the roots to a surfeit of moisture. From what I have seen of meconopsis in other gardens, compared with my own experience, I am led to avoid those contracted, pit-like depressions so frequently found as accessories to the rock garden, and generally recommended as inviting success, choosing in preference some sheltered bay among choice shrubs, and if the ground is comparatively flat, so much the better for our purpose. The soil must not contain lime, and should consist of the best sample of loam, peat and oak leaves procurable. Plant the foreground thinly with pernettyas, introducing Kalmia latifolia or similar shrubs behind, and subordinate their increase in width to the primary object of supplying shelter. Group among these the various species of meconopsis, those dwarf in stature to the front, paniculata and Wallichii behind, and the result will be an effect satisfying to the most exacting. As these two species have foliage that is marvelously beautiful and evergreen, the rain drops rest among the hairy leaves, reflecting the sunlight so that they almost vie in brilliancy with that produced by the gaily colored fruits of the pernettyas. From May onwards till autumn the floral feast will be one of ever-varying beauty; the garment of the meconopsis is in essence that which the poppy always wears, the former supplying those colors which the latter singularly lack; the texture of their petals is as silk compared with a common fabric, their nobility in comparison to a plebeian race.

"One of those idiosyncrasies which often force themselves upon the practical cultivator is that species so dissimilar in nature and habit and widely separated geographically should find congenial quarters in the same garden plot. Such is my experience with M. heterophylla, the only American species, and M. Wallichii from the Sikkim Himalayas, and my contention for a drier rooting medium is amply justified by the behavior of these species. So far, Wallichii has topped the measuring rod at seven feet six inches, perfect pyramids of the most exquisite silky blue, while heterophylla makes thick little bushes two feet high, of gray-green leafage, clothed with fairy stems, supporting the deep orange and maroon blotched flowers."

GLADIOLUS GAIETY.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of a seedling gladiolus which originated with Harry G. Wolfgang at Leetonia, O. The rule beside the spike gives an idea of the dwarf growth. The spike is a first season's bloom. The flowers are of excellent size. In describing the variety Mr. Wolfgang said:

"It sprang from a lot of seedlings of 1898 from the Groff strain. The plant is dwarf in habit, growing from eighteen inches to two feet in height, in ordinary garden soil. The plant is quite sturdy, holding the flower stem erect. I have never known one to lop over. Owing to the immense size of the flower spike, in proportion to the stalk, it is a shy bulb producer, although the cormels or spawn will bloom or throw heavy spikes of flowers the second season. The flowers are amaryllis-shaped, having no wrong side; when in a vase one side is just as beautiful as the other. The bud or half opened flower has a white band around it and resembles a tulip flower. When full open it is scarlet in color, the outer parts of the petals being faintly penciled with crimson and the throat marbled, white banded and splashed with violet red. Stamens and pistils are prominent, adding greatly to the beauty of the flower. In color the stamens are claret, while the pistils are of a beautiful shade of shrimp. Among the many hundreds of seedlings in our trial ground, Gaiety is the vanguard of them all and is the admiration of everyone that sees it."

EASTER LILIES.

Regarding the inquiry of E. S. H., I would like to give you some experience which I had. I found out that the later, within reasonable limits, the Easter lily bulbs are planted, the sooner they come into bloom. Leave them in the cases as long as possible, in a cool place, only looking out that they do not make any roots.

It is unnatural for the bulbs to start too early, and they never will make a good plant before the bulb has its natural rest. They will perhaps start to grow, but when the plant is about nine to twelve inches high the growth stops and that is the end of it. But if you plant your bulbs late, they will make sufficient roots and produce good, healthy plants. Do not force them too much from the start; they only can stand forcing when they show buds. Plant them two months later than your neighbor; you will save greenhouse space, coal, and have them just as early and better than he has. P. W.

NARCISSI.

Is Golden Spur narcissus as hardy a variety as Emperor, and is it as early as the single Von Sion? H. H. G.

Emperor is decidedly hardier than Golden Spur. The latter flowers a few days the earliest, but is preceded by the single Von Sion. Emperor, I consider the hardiest of all the large trumpet narcissi. Von Sion is one of the most unreliable outdoors. Emperor will increase from year to year. Golden Spur gradually dies out and Von Sion disappears nearly altogether after the second year. Princeps is a cheap trumpet narcissus, which proves hardy, also double Von Sion. W. N. C.

ROOTING HELIOTROPES.

What is the proper method of procedure in rooting heliotrope cuttings to insure a minimum loss from rotting off? R. P.

Place the cuttings in a propagating bench where they will have some bottom heat. In a house kept at 55 to 60 degrees at night they will root within three weeks. Be sure to keep the sand well watered; one soaking per day will suffice. There is no reason why every cutting should not root, heliotrope being an easy plant to propagate. In a cold house the chances are that many of your cuttings would fail to root or damp off. C. W.

NEPHROLEPIS.

Plants of nephrolepis which have been in the benches during the summer have made an excellent growth. Many of these are already in pots and pans, as the fall demand for pot plants has commenced, and it is always well to get the ferns established a little before they are sold. Provided a nice ball is lifted with each plant and some shade given for a week or two, the plants will show no signs of wilting, but will start in to grow with vigor. For compost, loam, leaf-mold and sand is suitable; any manure used should be old and thoroughly decayed.

Elevate the best specimens of nephrolepis, in order to make as perfect specimens of them as possible. It is impossible to get presentable plants where they are crowded on a bench. Be careful to avoid wetting the foliage on the dense growing sorts, like Whitmani, Elegantissima and Todeaoides, or decay of the pinnae will probably result. The plain-fronded varieties, such as Bostoniensis and Scottii, can be freely syringed. Look over the old fronds, and any badly encrusted with scale should be cut off and burned. It does not pay to clean them.

Any plants which have been carried over summer in pots and pans and look somewhat starved can be much improved by affording them doses once a week of soot or liquid manure water, or some such special fertilizer as Bon Arbor. It is surprising how quickly these will darken up the fronds and impart vigor to the plants. Much of the shading on nephrolepis can now be removed; on well established plants little is necessary, but newly potted stock will need cheesecloth or glass shading for a few weeks longer.

SCALE ON BOSTONS.

I enclose part of a frond of the Boston fern, which is, as you will notice, badly affected with a white scale or insect of some sort, also with another variety of scale. We have quite a stock of Bostons in fine shape, but a good many of them have a little of these scales on them and we do not like to sell them, as we notice the scale increases rapidly in the house. If you could give us a little information on the best method of treating these pests, it would be quite a help. The ferns are out of doors, in frames now, and could be dipped or sprayed conveniently while housing them. C. S. D.

Both kinds of scale on the fern frond are of the same species, but in different stages of growth, and it is the most troublesome pest the grower of Boston ferns has to contend with, being unfortunately widespread. Cut off the worst fronds, and then dip the plants in a solution of extract of tobacco, using one part of Rose Leaf extract to fifty parts of water. This will not kill all the mature scales, but will kill the younger generation, and is as strong as the ferns will stand.

Protect the plants from the sun after dipping, for a few hours at least, and repeat the dip two or three times at intervals of one week.

Some of the tender tips of the fern fronds may be damaged slightly by the tobacco, but this is likely to occur with any remedy strong enough to kill the scales. W. H. T.

TEMPERATURE.

Can you give us some information about ferns, Whitmani, Piersoni, Scottii and Boston? What temperature should they be kept in at night? Also pteris ferns, some in 2-inch pots and some in 3-inch. What night temperature do they require to thrive properly? All our ferns have done remarkably well in the last three months, but the weather as a rule has been warm. We have cool nights now and without fire heat the temperature in the fern houses drops as low as 50 degrees at night. Is this too cool for them? S. & S.

A night temperature of 58 to 60 degrees is most satisfactory for the ferns in question, though a drop to 50 degrees for a few nights will do them no harm, except to check the growth slightly. But if this temperature is likely to continue it would be better to use a little fire heat and keep on plenty of ventilation at night, this treatment providing a better growing atmosphere than the cold, damp air found in an unheated house of nearly the same temperature. W. H. T.

INSECTS ON BOSTONS.

Enclosed I am sending you a few fern leaves. What kind of insect is it that is on it, and is there any remedy for it? At present it is doing great damage among our plants. A. L.

This insect is, unfortunately, a common one on Boston ferns, and does them much injury. It is a scale insect, the mature specimens of which may be seen in numbers on the fronds in the form of brown, irregular dots. The white spots cover the young insects, the latter frequently being found crawling about, on examination with a microscope.

Dipping or spraying with solution of Rose Leaf extract of tobacco will kill the young insects, but the mature insects can stand as much or more than the plants. The solution should be one part extract to fifty parts water. W. H. T.

STIGMONOSE.

By this mail we are sending you a carnation plant. Can you tell us what the disease is and a cure for it, if there is any? The plants of the same variety were badly affected last year and many died. These cuttings were taken from the healthiest ones and did not show the disease until a few days ago. They were benched August 25. We have 500 and should like to save them if possible. E. & B.

The specimen forwarded is badly affected with the disease called stigmonose, formerly known as bacteriosis. This is one of the oldest diseases affecting the carnation, but only in recent years has the cause of the disease been definitely known. It is caused by certain bacteria which enter and destroy the leaf cells through the punctures made by such insects as red spider, aphid and thrips. Since the aphid is the largest of these pests and makes the largest punctures, and also ravages the plants more than the other two, we are inclined to blame it mostly for the trouble. Some varieties seem less subject to this disease than others, but all of them will sooner or later succumb to its attacks if not kept comparatively free from these pests. The more succulent growing ones are, of course, the most liable to suffer.

Once a variety is badly affected, it is a hard matter to free it again. At best it is a long and tedious task. Selecting cuttings from the healthiest plants for several seasons, coupled with careful growing, will bring some varieties out clean, but some varieties will not respond even to the best of care. Growing the plants slowly, so that the growth will be hardy and covered with that grayish bloom, is what you should aim for. Water carefully, though not too sparingly, and avoid all feeding unless the weather is right and the plants are right to take it up. A light sprinkling of dry-slaked lime about once in a month will help some, by hardening the plant tissue. Do everything you can to promote a steady, sturdy growth when the plants naturally make their growth, and do not try to push them when growth is naturally sluggish. Give all the ventilation possible and keep off all insect pests.

Do not be misled if you see the yellow spots disappear in the spring. That does not indicate that the plants are freed from the disease. The poison remains in the plant, and will make its appearance again as soon as the growth becomes sluggish again. Thus it is a continual fight between the plant and the disease until one or the other gets the upper hand, which is usually the disease, sooner or later, according to the amount of aid given the plant by the grower.

Propagate such varieties as late in the season as possible, because cuttings taken after the spring growth has started will have more vigor and will be cleaner than the earlier ones. A. F. J. B.

PICTURES OF PROGRESS.

The three pictures of the stores occupied at different times by the San Joaquin Floral Co., of Stockton, Cal., give a clearer idea of the progress of the firm than could be conveyed by multitudes of words. If Cook's progress toward the pole, with his final triumph, could have been as plainly photographed, there would have been little room for doubt as to the truth of his claims.

ILLINOIS STATE FAIR.

Flower Show a Feature.

The cut flower display at the Illinois state fair, which opened at Springfield, October 5, was the best which ever has been presented to the hundreds of thousands of people who visit this big exposition each year. The quality of the stock, especially in roses, with all the middle western growers is better this year than it usually is at the opening of October; also, the prizes offered by the fair management this year were the most liberal ever hung up at one of the big farmers' state expositions, bringing out more entries than ever before have twenty-five Beauties of superior quality, also a vase of O. P. Bassett carnations which were notably good, and a vase of fifty Rhea Reid roses which were fine. These were not for competition. Peter Reinberg, Chicago, also had a fine display of roses and carnations, not for competition. His varieties were Beauty, Field, Killarney, Richmond, Maid, Bride, Perle and Maryland. These were staged by George Asmus.

The local growers, notably A. C. Brown and A. C. Canfield, came forward in good shape. They entered in a considerable number of the cut flower classes and made creditable showing in competition with the largest growers in the state.

The awards in the cut flower classes were:

Fifty Beauties, Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, first; A. C. Canfield, Springfield, Ill., second; A. C. Brown, Springfield, Ill., third.

Fifty Richmond, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; A. C. Brown, second.

"This," says a member of the firm, "was our first downtown office, as all work had previously been done at the house. We moved into the second store two years ago, and during the last six months we remodeled it. The pictures, therefore, show only two different stores, but there are two photographs of the second store, one taken before the remodeling began and the other after the transformation was completed. We have been told that the remodeled store is as neatly arranged as any in California. The balcony is used for pots, jardinières, baskets and other non-perishable stock. The store is finished in white enamel, with green curtains, etc."

The San Joaquin Floral Co. now owns about 7,000 square feet of glass and is building at the rate of about 2,500 square feet per annum, paying the cost of construction from the year's profits. The firm grows its own roses, carnations, mums, ferns and general potted plants, besides some ornamental nursery stock. The trade is largely local, but includes, also, considerable shipping to near-by mountain towns, for the demand is increasing steadily throughout that section.

Collection of stove and greenhouse plants, arranged to cover 200 square feet, George M. Brinkerhoff, Springfield, Ill., first; George Van Horn, Springfield, Ill., second.

The liberal premiums offered for palms, ferns and miscellaneous plants brought out an unusually large and exceptionally good display. The principal exhibitors were George A. Kuhl, Pekin, Ill.; Vaughan's Greenhouses, Western Springs, Ill.; and the following Springfield florists: A. C. Brown, George M. Brinkerhoff, Wirth & Gaupp, George Van Horn. The arrangement was not commendable. The plants were all placed on the floor and were widely scattered in order to fill space. The smaller plants and ferns at least would have made a much better appearance had they been on tables.

The judges were F. H. Meinhardt and Otto Koenig, of St. Louis, and they did excellent work.

Liberal premiums also were offered for the exhibits of made-up work by retail florists. These were staged Wednesday afternoon, October 6. The entries the day before gave assurance of an interesting display, a number of Chicago entries having been received.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Not for a long time have flowers been so scarce or sold better than during the last ten days. The overwhelming supply of outdoor flowers is ended and the rather inadequate cuts of chrysanthemums, roses and carnations are being relied upon to fill the public's wants. As a consequence, prices have advanced all along the line, and fall business has started in a healthy, old-time manner. Roses are coming in of good quality. Beauties are specially fine, and realize better prices. The same holds true of white and pink Killarney and, in fact, all other roses; even the short-stemmed blooms, which were almost unsalable a fortnight ago, are eagerly snapped up. Carnations are more plentiful, but the bulk are still short-stemmed; $2 to $3 per hundred are average prices, fancies making $4.

Violets are getting quite numerous, singles predominating, and average 50 cents per hundred. Valley has a good call, as have any seasonable orchids, like Cattleya labiata, oncidiums and cypripediums. Chrysanthemums are seen in greater variety. Some fancy blooms have made up to $3 per dozen, average prices being $6 to $12 per hundred. In addition to Golden Glow, Montmort and Bergmann, there are now some fine Monrovia, Pacific, Rosiere and Polly Rose arriving. Lilies are now mostly longiflorums, and sell well.

Asters are nearing the end. Such good flowers as arrive bring $1 to $2 per hundred. Cosmos is abundant, as are dahlias and tuberoses, but gladioli and sweet peas are about over. Green stock is of excellent quality and selling well. The cooler weather has given a little fillip to the plant trade, and there is now some demand for nephrolepis, palms, ficus and other foliage plants. Chrysanthemums in pots have been in the market for a fortnight, but are as yet of rather poor quality.

Various Notes.

The Boston Coöperative Flower Market opened for business at the new stand on Park street October 4, in the basement of William H. Elliott's wholesale salesrooms. They have a reduced floor space, but the location is more central and light decidedly better than at Music Hall. With both wholesale markets and William H. Elliott's salesrooms on Park street and the Waban Conservatories' wholesale department nearby, Boston's wholesale flower trade, apart from the commission houses, is to be found within a small radius.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society will not hold a spring show in 1910, its main energies being devoted to the coming big orchid show at the end of next May. There will be a winter show on or about February 19 and 20, with numerous classes for cut flowers and pot plants, and the two wholesale flower markets will be invited to hold their trade shows in conjunction with the same.

Henry M. Robinson & Co. are getting busy, and fall trade with them promises to be better than ever. Their roses, carnations, valley and other flowers are of fine quality, while their trade in green goods of all sorts is excellent.

The addition to the Park Street Flower Market is nearing completion, and the additional space thus provided will be welcome.

P. L. Carbone's new store on Boylston street is one which attracts many interested visitors at present. It is safe to say that for artistic arrangement it marks a big advance in this city.

R. D. Kimball, of Waban, is shipping in some extra fine Princess of Wales violets and carnations to the Park Street market.

Lieut. Col. Holford, of Westonbirt, England, who possesses possibly the finest private orchid collection in the world, will be an exhibitor at Boston's big orchid show in 1910. H. Alexander, the well-known orchid grower at Westonbirt, will be one of the visitors.

Visitors last week included James Backhouse, head of the noted firm of James Backhouse & Son, York, England, whose specialties are now alpine and herbaceous plants. This is Mr. Backhouse's initial visit to Canada and the States, but he is so favorably impressed that he plans to come again next summer.

Fine Rosiere and other chrysanthemums are arriving in the markets from Willow Hill Greenhouses, for whom Thomas Pegler is salesman.

E. H. Wilson, the noted collector in western and northern China, who arrived in Boston September 28, is now at the Arnold Arboretum, classifying and assisting in the identification of the hundreds of new plants sent there by him during the last two or three years. His introductions promise, unless all signs fail, to be the most remarkable addition to the list of hardy trees and shrubs the United States has yet known. Mr. Wilson has numerous lantern slides taken during his journeys, and these, it is expected, the public will have an opportunity to see later at Horticultural hall.

Fall business with Welch Bros. has started in with a rush, and all hands at the roomy emporium on Devonshire street are being kept busy. P. Welch expects business during the coming season to beat all records.

September proved a fairly normal month. The mean temperature was 63 degrees, which was also the mean for the last thirty-nine years; the maximum temperature was 82 degrees and the minimum, 46 degrees. The rainfall was 5.15 inches, or 1.90 over the normal. We now are only .75 of an inch below the normal for 1909, but have an excess of 35.1 degrees in temperature for the summer.

Robert Montgomery is sending in some extra good white and pink Killarney and Maryland roses to the new market on Park street.

William Sim is marketing large lots of single violets of extra fine quality, as are A. W. Kidder, N. F. Comley, William Spillsbury, H. F. Woods, F. W. Fletcher and other specialists.

A big attendance is assured for the Gardeners' and Florists' Club meeting October 26, when J. K. M. L. Farquhar will deliver his stereopticon lecture on hardy bulbs.

Wheeler & Co., of Waban, are cutting a splendid lot of Cattleya labiata, of which they have some thousands of flowers.

CLEVELAND.

Store Opening.

October 4 the Jones-Russell Co. opened its new store at the corner of Euclid avenue and Huron road. The day selected could not have been improved upon, and the attendance was far above the expectations of the new firm. The members of the Jones-Russell Co. are Harry Jones, Charles Russell, both from the Gasser Co., and Mr. Barber, formerly in the retail trade at Alliance, O. This store must be counted among the best in the country, being situated in the heart of the new Euclid avenue business district. The store was a bower of beautiful plants and cut flowers and with the tasteful arrangement throughout made a most beautiful appearance. The numerous gifts sent in by the different florists assure the popularity of these young men with the trade and were as follows: The Gasser Co., papilio orchids; Mrs. A. Schmitt, begonias; Pennock-Meehan Co., orchids; E. G. Wilson, handsome maiden-hair fern plant; Carl Hazenburger, Pier-soni fern and snapdragon; Merkel & Son, two large Boston ferns; Cleveland Cut Flower Co., vase of Beauties; L. L. Lamborn, vase Brides and Maids; Charles Bartels, vase of carnations; Cleveland Florists' Exchange, cattleyas; Miss Schueren, large Boston fern; William Smith, basket of dahlias; Smith & Fetters, desk lamp trimmed with violets; Knoble Bros., vase of Beauties; R. Gamble, Jerusalem cherries; Peter Nichols, large Boston fern; C. A. Bramley, large Boston fern; Reep Bros., fancy fern plant; Robert Craig, croton with urn;

James Eadie Co., pandanus plant; James Wilson, cabbage decorated with pansies; Kahn Vine Co., vase of roses; G. A. Mason, hand-painted frieze; Miss Splatie, honeysuckle vine; and Gus Schroeder, artificial mums.

The out-of-town visitors this week were: George Wiegand, of Indianapolis, Ind.; Ed Bell, of Franklin, Pa.; C. E. Barton, of Norwalk, O.; and L. L. Lamborn, of Alliance, O.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Everything is moving along nicely and reports from all sides are that business is good, with an equal supply. Asters are again a thing of the past, but gladioli and dahlias are still coming in. The latter are of good quality, owing to the favorable weather. The rose market is well supplied and has a good demand. More carnations could have been used.

Various Notes.

Currie Bros. Co. was kept busy all last week with funeral work. They ran short on lilies and carnations.

At Theo. Boettcher's place, at Fourteenth street and Groeling avenue, everything is in apple-pie shape. In fact, the stock never was so good as it is at this time. A batch of cyclamens in 6-inch pots are especially fine.

Fred Holton, of the Holton & Hunkel Co., left Monday, October 4, for Minneapolis and vicinity, to call on the trade. Nic Zweifel, of North Milwaukee, accompanied him as companion and bodyguard. They expect to return at the end of this week.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. is daily receiving a nice lot of roses from its Wauwatosa plant.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Business continues about the same. Flowers are not quite so plentiful just now. Asters are nearly played out. A few late ones are coming in; 35 cents and 50 cents per dozen, retail, is the price. Carnations are getting a little more plentiful; 35 cents per dozen is the retail price. Sweet peas are all done. Roses retail at from $1.50 to $2 per dozen. Some nice My Maryland are now coming in. Early mums are now arriving. Flowers out of doors are still in full bloom, no heavy frosts having come as yet.

Dahlias are now in all their glory and are looking fine. Dahlia culture around New Bedford is all the go now, and some grand varieties are to be seen here.

Dahlia Show.

At the annual September show of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society, held at Providence September 29 and 30, the principal exhibitors of dahlias were W. D. Hathaway, Mrs. H. A. Jahn and F. Turner & Co., of this city. Some of the New Bedford dahlia growers have been taking sweepstakes at the dahlia shows east of New York during the last two or three weeks, and at the Rhode Island exhibit they showed blooms that compared favorably with those that have been awarded first premiums elsewhere.

The New Bedford prize winners were as follows:

H. Woodhouse reports funeral work as especially good. He is still cutting some nice asters.

GOLD ETRUSCAN WARE.

The highest art in the arrangement of flowers is to follow nature, and the highest art in originating florists' supplies is to enhance the beauty of the flowers. Gold Etruscan ware comes a step nearer to this end than the natural effects in twig and birchbark. In certain lights, under certain conditions, twig and birch are unsatisfactory. In these lights, under these conditions, Etruscan ware is seen at its best, the richness of its finish increasing the effect of leaf and flower.

Gold Etruscan ware is the name given by M. Rice & Co. to a combination of old gold and green, a combination which, I am told, it has taken months of hard work to perfect. Baskets, hampers, vases, pedestals and pot covers are treated in this way, producing a bronze-green effect of great richness, described by the expert as high lights, but which to the everyday individual means a finish that cannot be obtained in any other way. Etruscan ware was not reached in a day; there were the green stages, not wholly satisfactory, and the bronze and old-gold stages, that became tiresome to the eye. The combination satisfies the most critical. PHIL.

OBITUARY.

Wm. J. Lambert.

William J. Lambert, aged 31, manager of the florists' department of Nunnally's, at 103 Peachtree street, Atlanta, dropped dead about 12:30 a. m. September 28 at his apartment in the Lafayette, 107 Ivy Street. Mr. Lambert had been employed by Nunnally for several years. He had never been very strong, and was a sufferer for some time from a rheumatic trouble, and had just returned from a vacation of two weeks in Hot Springs, where he had gone hoping to regain his health. Returning to his work, he appeared much improved, until about a week ago, when his friends noticed that he seemed to be suffering very much, and on Monday he was advised by his employer to go home to bed, which he refused to do. When he returned home Monday night he appeared to feel better, and spent most of the evening talking with friends in the house where he lived, sitting around with them until a late hour, when he left them to go to the bath room. Not returning in two hours, search was made and he was found face down on the floor of the bath room. He had been dead some time.

Mr. Lambert was not married. He is survived by two brothers, Victor E. Lambert, the florist; Seter Lambert and John Lambert, who live in Birmingham, and one sister, Mrs. H. G. Keeney, of Atlanta.

rovia, Pacific, Rosiere and Polly Rose arriving. Lilies are now mostly longiflorums, and sell well.

Asters are nearing the end. Such good flowers as arrive bring $1 to $2 per hundred. Cosmos is abundant, as are dahlias and tuberose, but gladioli and sweet peas are about over. Green stock is of excellent quality and selling well. The cooler weather has given a little flip to the plant trade, and there is now some demand for nephrolepis, palms, ficus and other foliage plants. Chrysanthemums in pots have been in the market for a fortnight, but are as yet of rather poor quality.

Various Notes.

The Boston Coöperative Flower Market opened for business at the new stand on Park street October 4, in the basement of William H. Elliott's wholesale salesrooms. They have a reduced floor space, but the location is more central and light decidedly better than at Music Hall. With both wholesale markets and William H. Elliott's salesrooms on Park street and the Waban Conservatories' wholesale department nearby, Boston's wholesale flower trade, apart from the commission houses, is to be found within a small radius.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society will not hold a spring show in 1910, its main energies being devoted to the coming big orchid show at the end of next May. There will be a winter show on or about February 19 and 20, with numerous classes for cut flowers and pot plants, and the two wholesale flower markets will be invited to hold their trade shows in conjunction with the same.

Henry M. Robinson & Co. are getting busy, and fall trade with them promises to be better than ever. Their roses, carnations, valley and other flowers are of fine quality, while their trade in green goods of all sorts is excellent.

The addition to the Park Street Flower Market is nearing completion, and the additional space thus provided will be welcome.

P. L. Carbone's new store on Boylston street is one which attracts many interested visitors at present. It is safe to say that for artistic arrangement it marks a big advance in this city.

R. D. Kimball, of Waban, is shipping in some extra fine Princess of Wales violets and carnations to the Park Street market.

Lieut. Col. Holford, of Westonbirt, England, who possesses possibly the finest private orchid collection in the world, will be an exhibitor at Boston's big orchid show in 1910. H. Alexander, the well known orchid grower at Westonbirt, will be one of the visitors.

Visitors last week included James Backhouse, head of the noted firm of James Backhouse & Son, York, England, whose specialties are now alpine and herbaceous plants. This is Mr. Backhouse's initial visit to Canada and the States, but he is so favorably impressed that he plans to come again next summer.

Fine Rosiere and other chrysanthemums are arriving in the markets from Willow Hill Greenhouses, for whom Thomas Pegler is salesman.

E. H. Wilson, the noted collector in western and northern China, who arrived in Boston September 28, is now at the Arnold Arboretum, classifying and assisting in the identification of the hundreds of new plants sent there by him during the last two or three years. His introductions promise, unless all signs fail, to be the most remarkable addition to the list of hardy trees and shrubs the United States has yet known. Mr. Wilson has numerous lantern slides taken during his journeys, and these, it is expected, the public will have an opportunity to see later at Horticultural hall.

Fall business with Welch Bros. has started in with a rush, and all hands at the roomy emporium on Devonshire street are being kept busy. P. Welch expects business during the coming season to beat all records.

September proved a fairly normal month. The mean temperature was 63 degrees, which was also the mean for the last thirty-nine years; the maximum temperature was 82 degrees and the minimum, 46 degrees. The rainfall was 5.15 inches, or 1.90 over the normal. We now are only .75 of an inch below the normal for 1909, but have an excess of 351 degrees in temperature for the summer.

Robert Montgomery is sending in some extra good white and pink Killarney and Maryland roses to the new market on Park street.

William Sim is marketing large lots of single violets of extra fine quality, as are A. W. Kidder, N. F. Comley, William Spillsbury, H. F. Woods, F. W. Fletcher and other specialists.

A big attendance is assured for the Gardeners' and Florists' Club meeting October 26, when J. K. M. L. Farquhar will deliver his stereopticon lecture on hardy bulbs.

Wheeler & Co., of Waban, are cutting a splendid lot of Cattleya labiata, of which they have some thousands of flowers.

CLEVELAND.

Store Opening.

October 4 the Jones-Russell Co. opened its new store at the corner of Euclid avenue and Huron road. The day selected could not have been improved upon, and the attendance was far above the expectations of the new firm. The members of the Jones-Russell Co. are Harry Jones, Charles Russell, both from the Gasser Co., and Mr. Barber, formerly in the retail trade at Alliance, O. This store must be counted among the best in the country, being situated in the heart of the new Euclid avenue business district. The store was a bower of beautiful plants and cut flowers and with the tasteful arrangement throughout made a most beautiful appearance. The numerous gifts sent in by the different florists assure the popularity of these young men with the trade and were as follows: The Gasser Co., papilio orchids; Mrs. A. Schmitt, begonias; Pennock-Meehan Co., orchids; E. G. Wilson, handsome maiden hair fern plant; Carl Hazenburger, Pteris fern and snapdragon; Merkel & Son, two large Boston ferns; Cleveland Cut Flower Co., vase of Beauties; L. L. Lamborn, vase Brides and Maids; Charles Bartels, vase of carnations; Cleveland Florists' Exchange, cattleyas; Miss Schueren, large Boston fern; William Smith, basket of dahlias; Smith & Peters, desk lamp trimmed with violets; Knoble Bros., vase of Beauties; R. Gamble, Jerusalem cherries; Peter Nichols, large Boston fern; C. A. Bramley, large Boston fern; Reep Bros., fancy fern plant; Robert Craig, croton with urn;

James Eadie Co., pandanus plant; Wilson, cabbage decorated with Jan. inscriptions; Kahn Vine Co., vase of roses; G. A. Mason, hand-painted frieze; Miss honey-suckle vine; and Gus S. artificial mums.

The out-of-town visitors there were: George Wiegand, of Indianapolis; Ed Bell, of Franklin, Pa.; Barton, of Norwalk, O.; and L. born, of Alliance, O.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Everything is moving along nicely. reports from all sides are that business is good, with an equal supply. Asters are again a thing of the past, but carnations and dahlias are still coming in. The latter are of good quality, owing to the favorable weather. The rose market is well supplied and has a good demand. More carnations could have been sold.

Various Notes.

Currie Bros. Co. was kept busy this week with funeral work. They ran shops on lilies and carnations.

At Theo. Boettcher's place, at Fourteenth street and Groeling avenue, everything is in apple-pie shape. In fact, the stock never was so good as it is at this time. A batch of cyclamens in fine pots are especially fine.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburgh.

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.

We both have them.

THE report of the death of Peter Barr, the daffodil king, appeared in the REVIEW of two weeks ago, September 23.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the REVIEW $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

You can't expect to have much of a reputation for the business-like conduct of your affairs if you send out orders written in pencil on plain paper, as too many fairly prosperous florists still do. Printed stationery costs little.

YEAR after year there is a pressure to sell Boston ferns just before frost comes, when space under glass is lacking. Those who can hold their Bostons will find a good market a little later on. Salable plants were scarce all summer.

THE trade has made more of a figure than usual at the big state and county fairs this year, but in each case the number of exhibitors has been less than it should. With the good stock now available at this date, the trade should take full advantage of these opportunities for advertising.

A JOBBER in window glass, who is one of the largest in his line, says that he finds the credit of greenhouse owners as a class to be as good, if not better, than that of any other class with whom he does business. Such a reputation for the trade should be a source of pride to every man in the craft and should cause each one to do his part to sustain it.

QUICK RETURNS.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time.

Please discontinue my advertisement of violets. I received an order for one-half of the 1,000 plants advertised in the same mail in which my copy of the Review containing the advertisement came to hand, and the other one-half went the next day. How is that for double-quick action?—Frank Berry, Stillwater, Minn., September 27, 1909.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

To Retail Florists.

In view of the fact that there has recently been some comment in the trade press concerning the interchanging of retail orders among the florists of the country, it is proper to state that this subject was discussed at the recent convention of the S. A. F. in Cincinnati, with the result that the officers of that society are now actively at work and confidently expect to shortly announce the organization of a Retail Delivery Association composed of a large number of retailers throughout the country, working in conjunction with the S. A. F.

Retailers not now members of the national society have expressed an eagerness to join as soon as such an organization can be effected. The details have to be carefully considered, but the work has been taken hold of with energy and will be pushed as rapidly as possible.

J. A. VALENTINE, Pres.

BUSINESS GOOD.

The news-letters from all the principal cities indicate that there has been a great revival in trade in the last ten days. All the cut flower markets are unusually active for so early in the season—and when wholesale business is good it must inevitably be so with the retailers, for with such a short-lived commodity as cut flowers the retailer must needs have business before passing it in to the wholesalers.

Not only is cut flower business good, but pot plants are selling freely and bulbs and all hardy stock for fall planting are moving well.

THE WAY IT STANDS.

The way a newspaper stands with its individual readers shows in the volume of its advertising patronage as well as in its correspondence.

Enclosed is the $1 for another year of the Review. I do not see how a florist can get along without the Review. It certainly is up-to-date and full of interest.—H. M. Shilling, Shillington, Pa., September 28, 1909.

The Review certainly is a winner; enclosed is a two-dollar note for two more years.—E. S. Thompson, Erie, Pa., September 26, 1909.

Here is the dollar; I would as soon miss my breakfast as miss the Review. I consider it as good as any two others combined.—T. G. Yale, Wellington, O., September 27, 1909.

I missed getting my Review last Saturday for the first time since I began taking it, two years ago. I am lost without it, for I always read it through every Saturday evening.—W. L. White, Goodland, Kan., September 26, 1909.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Business has been excellent since last report; indeed, it seemed to leave nothing to be desired, except a larger supply of carnations and, possibly, Easter lilies. The way the business increased was a surprise to most of the wholesalers, and a most welcome one. The business almost in a day sprang into full mid-season volume. Shipping demand has been excellent, and the city buyers have come into the market for quantities of stock, the materials for decorations being equally in request with those for monthly purposes. Society evidently has returned from its summer outings, and dinners and social events are on one more. There has been a good number of weddings. The business for the first seven days of October and, indeed, the last few days of September, has been distinctly better than a year ago.

While there has been a large demand for roses, the supply has been in every way adequate, and the shrewd dealers among the retailers have been pushing the rose end of the business, knowing that they could buy reasonably and that the quality of the stock is so exceptionally fine that customers are sure to be satisfied. White has at times been scarce, for the quantity of white rose-grown is less than of pink; also, Perl could not be supplied on every order. But, generally speaking, roses, from Beauties on down, are abundant and of splendid quality. The prices have been easy, especially so considering the qual-

In all lengths of stem, we offer fine Killarney

Every day we add to our list of buyers of these, because the stock is right and because we have enough of it so we can fill any order, no matter how many or what length is wanted.

When we saw Killarney would be the big selling rose this season we arranged to largely increase our supply, especially of the longest, finest stock. Now we've got the goods and the buyers are taking hold in a way that shows they like the stock and the way we handle it. But we can take good care of all orders, so let them come.

MUMS! MUMS!!

The supply has increased and the quality is excellent. Usually can supply Yellow on any telegraph order, but the demand is so brisk for our grade of stock, you ought to give as much notice as possible, especially if white is wanted. Let's hear from you — we shall be Mum headquarters for the next two months.

Beauties

Our Beauties are fine—the most critical buyers come day after day and use our stock exclusively. A large supply of medium and short, as well as a good cut of long—all splendid heads on strong stems, with perfect foliage.

Carnations

The supply is increasing every day and quality is steadily improving —stems longer and flowers larger. Demand is strong for these.

Violets

We are receiving regular daily shipments—the Cream of the Hudson River doubles. Also the fragrant home-grown singles have commenced to come in. We never saw better violets at this time of the year and ask a trial order, feeling sure you can use these regularly.

Smilax Strings

We are cutting a big lot of Smilax—use it in your decorations, for Asparagus strings are on the scarce side.

ity of the stock, and they are easier this week than they were last week. But growers are getting good-sized checks because they are cutting so many flowers and because the volume of business is so good.

The carnation has been the principal problem in the last week. The excitement appears to be principally due to the passing of the aster. The demand for carnations increased rapidly as the aster passed off of the stage for the present season. As the supply of carnations did not increase as fast as the asters went down, the result was a stiffening in prices, especially for white. While it has been impossible to meet every requirement of the buyers, there have been carnations for those who could use them at the price; but there has, at the same time, been a distinct limit to the price for ordinary stock. Because carnations went up to 4 cents it is not to be supposed that any such average could be made on a grower's shipment. While a few buyers might be willing to pay the best price for the longest-stemmed flowers, the average buyer would turn away if he could not get the medium and short-stemmed flowers at a price that was satisfactory to himself. The quality of the carnations, while it is improving steadily, has not kept pace with the advance in prices.

Chrysanthemums are not coming on as rapidly as the demand has developed. It has been possible to fill all advance orders, but not always possible to fill those which demanded immediate shipment near the closing hour, especially if the call was for white. Prices advanced steadily last week, but are easing off again because of increased supply.

The Hudson river violets are now in daily supply in most of the houses which handle them, and the locally grown singles also are coming in. In general, the quality of the violets is good for this date, and the buyers are taking hold better than they ordinarily do at the opening of the season.

Valley has been in good demand, and Easter lilies are sold on sight. Cattleyas are not yet in full supply.

There are some good dahlias, but they are hard to sell. A few scrubby asters still come in, and make splendid prices when the poor quality is considered. Gladioli are still coming in, but are extremely poor and have little value. Other outdoor flowers also have about reached the end of the season.

The many decorations have made a good call for smilax and asparagus

APHINE

The Insecticide that kills plant lice of every species.

Without the slightest injury to flower or foliage.

Has no equal for the greenhouse.

But is no less effective outdoors.

"Aphine has a future as wide and long as the United States," says Collier's.

"Aphine will do all you claim for it and more," says Chas. H. Totty.

"Aphine will do the work; if you don't believe, try it," says another.

Eminent entomologists and other expert authorities are no less enthusiastic in their praises of the merits of this wonderful insecticide discovery.

Aphine can be applied effectively as a spray, wash, or dipping solution. It is used at an average strength of 1 part Aphine to 40 parts water.

Price, $2.50 per gallon.

strings, and the general revival in the trade has brought a good demand for asparagus in bunches. This market is drawing its supplies of greens from great distances this season. Wild smilax also is selling well. Boxwood is in.

Red Violets Again.

Continuing their efforts to minimize the retail business in the wholesale market, half a hundred retailers, including some of those whose opinion is best worth while, have addressed a round-robin to each of the wholesalers asking them to declare their position in the matter, the reply to be sent to "any of the undersigned."

While a discussion of the red violet proposition is like taking the lid off Pandora's box, almost everyone is in sympathy with the retailers, but many of the wholesalers find it difficult to accede to the request to prohibit absolutely the making up of work in their stores—most of them do more or less business in making up designs for customers who are in the trade.

September Business.

There is general satisfaction with the business for the month of September. During the first part supplies were large, especially of roses, and prices low, but there was a fair volume of money coming into the wholesale houses. During the latter part of the month supplies were light, demand strong, prices excellent and a good total of sales showing wherever there was any considerable supply of stock. On the whole, business was better in September than it ordinarily is. Summer business is steadily on the increase.

September Weather.

September was decidedly cooler than a year ago, an average of 7 degrees, which may in part account for the excellent September business. The mean temperature for the month this year was only 64 degrees. The rainfall was 3.6 inches, which was slightly more than the average. Light frosts were recorded September 2, 25, 27 and 28, but no killing frost in the month.

J. Smyth says he does not expect to fully recovered from the effects of his automobile accident before another six months have passed. He is as well as except that the injury to his knee shened the tendons in that leg so that he cannot straighten the limb quite to its ful length. Use is giving steady im-ness opening well. A recent addition to his store force is Fred Dinger, formerly Forestville.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. will shortly have a nice crop of cattleyas. By holding the plants up to the light the flowers in the sheaths can be counted, and the buds look like 50-cent pieces.

During the summer Peter Reinberg made but one shipment a day from the and afternoon shipments have been resumed.

The Chicago Florists' Club will hold its regular meeting at the Union restau-

George Asmus, August Poehlmann, E.

There is a good-sized flower show at the Monday morning, and Webster Randall also took hold again after a three weeks' vacation spent in the vicinity of Youngstown, O. A. L. Randall is still on his fruit farm in Michigan. Word comes that Mrs. Randall fell downstairs October 2 and met with serious injury, which may delay their return to the city for a time.

David Geddis, formerly with Mrs. E. A. Williams, of Pittsburg, and later in business for himself at Homestead, Pa., is now with C. A. Samuelson.

Peter Reinberg this year has nineteen houses in carnations, a total of 160,000 plants. This is twice as many carnations as he ever grew before. The carnations are all at the new place on the farm out Lincoln avenue.

John T. Muir says the summer business was better than he ever before has known it to be. W. B. Lampert, son of J. J. Lampert, of Xenia, O., is now with Muir at the Thirty-fifth street store. Thomas Best is in charge at Forty-seventh street.

Miss Hertha V. Tonner now for two years has been a commission dealer in cut flowers in the Flower Growers' Market, and says she feels considerably more than satisfied with the results. Miss Martha C. Gunterberg, another commission dealer in the market, is absent this week, her affairs being looked after by Miss Then, who sells Anton Then's stock in the market.

The members of the Wholesale Florists' Employees' Club are delighted with the response to the invitations for its fourth annual reception and ball, to be held October 27. The prospect is for the largest attendance they have yet had.

A. L. Vaughan, of Vaughan & Sperry, returned October 2, after spending a week in the violet district along the Hudson river. He has made a number of trips through the district, and says he never yet has seen the stock there so uniformly good as it is this season.

Kennicott Bros. Co. during the last week has put in a second large ice-box and given the entire establishment a coat of green paint, putting the store in first-class shape for the season.

Bassett & Washburn sent an exhibit to the state fair this week, not for competition, in which there were some exceptionally good Rhea. Reid roses and some O. P. Bassett carnations with stems two feet long.

Henry Van Gelder states that Percy Jones, who is in University hospital, is greatly improved this week, and his speedy recovery is looked for.

October 4 Henry Kruchten resumed his duties in his brother's wholesale house, after spending the summer in his father's greenhouses. John Kruchten for twenty-nine years is covered with glass and the property is becoming too valuable for greenhouse purposes. Business has improved considerably in the last two weeks. A good many department stores are having their fall openings, and decorative plants are in good demand. The stores here are using these plants more each year, and there are but few openings at which a few plants are not to be seen, owing to some persistent advertising by some of the local florists.

grade. Roses are perhaps the most plentiful just at present. The cool weather has shortened the supply considerably in the last week. Carnations are as good as cash and are extremely scarce. Some good red dahlias are to be had, but white ones are hard to get. Cosmos is coming in, but the supply is limited. These flowers will be plentiful in a few days and will be quite welcome. Yellow mums are becoming a little more common and are moving slowly.

Jack Frost was here on a visit September 26, but did not leave much evidence behind. Only the coleus and a few other sort bedders showed the effects. Nevertheless, the florists are hustling all outdoor stock in as fast as possible.

Next week will be horse show week and this will be the real fall opener for the florists. Prospects for a busy week are good, as the horse shows here are second to none in the country and society people are here galore.

George RENNIESSEN, foreman for William Walker, has returned to work after a week's illness.

F. Walker & Co. have built a nice conservatory in the rear of their store, 25x146 feet, and when completed it will be up-to-date in every respect.

Mrs. C. B. Thompson has had several pretty windows lately.

Two members were elected to the bowling club last week and the limit of twelve has been reached. Jim Doerr, who has been bowling with the boys, rejoined, and Martin Quirey, with Jacob Schulz, is a new member. The bowlers have not yet got the kinks out of their arms and the scores show it, but when this bunch gets in shape the pins will certainly get knocked around some. K. R.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The week has witnessed considerable activity, which is welcomed by all. There is not an abundance of stock, so good prices are realized. Few carnations are to be seen; they can be counted by the dozen, not in hundreds, and what do appear bring sellers' prices. Mums have begun to arrive and they find ready sale. Roses are more plentiful and are good stock. Ferns are overdone this fall; they move slowly and are bringing low prices for good stock. We have had several light frosts, but they did no damage to stock.

Various Notes.

The dahlia show of R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., for this year, was a great success. These annual events have come to be regarded as the floricultural feature of the autumn in this latitude and many visitors are attracted to view the fine display. This firm, as is well known, makes specialties of all kinds of bedding plants and has over thirty acres in dahlias this season. The Gardeners' and Florists' Club went down on Tuesday, September 28, and quite a delegation from other cities was there. Q.

GENEVA, O.—E. A. Knapp has disposed of his one-half interest in a recently acquired Ashtabula greenhouse property to A. H. Willis, of North Geneva.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The buoyant market described in this column one week ago, a market that is phenomenal for this season of the year, continues. Prices have actually advanced on dahlias and on carnations, the supply of choice stock being insufficient. Roses are about equal to the demand, although at times more fancy stock could be used and there is always an excess of the poor grades, which cannot be fairly classed as marketable. Orchids are stronger than for many months past. Cattleyas are more plentiful and lower in price. Dendrobiums, phalaenopsis, oncidiums, vandas and cypripediums can be had in moderate quantities. Gardenias are improving, the demand warranting firmer prices. Double violets have made their appearance, the scouts here and there, while singles are more plentiful, some of them of excellent quality for the season. Lily of the valley is in good demand. Easter lilies are fine and selling better than for a long time, at firmer prices. Cosmos has been reinforced by Lady Lenox of superb quality. Autumn foliage, chiefly oak, is at its best. The staple greens, especially adiantum and smilax, go begging.

Chrysanthemums are coming in better form and in larger numbers. Golden Glow has given way to Monrovia, while October Frost is reinforced by Polly Rose. Glory of Pacific is giving the much-needed pink in quantity. Dozen sales have been succeeded by sales in hundred lots. The best have moved up, while the culls have of necessity moved down, indicating a broader market in nick of time for the weddings and teas.

Yellow daisies are obtainable. The small outdoor flowers are becoming shabby and undesirable. Asters are practically over. Sweet peas, so fine throughout August and September, are now between seasons, awaiting the arrival of the first blooms of the indoor crop.

A fair proportion of stem and foliage is even more important in the fall than at any other season of the year, and is even less regarded, to judge by the quantities of short-stemmed flowers thrown on the market.

The October Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Florists' Club was held in the club room of Horticultural hall, Broad street below Locust, on the evening of October 5. The officers elected for the coming year were: Joseph Heacock, president; Alfred Burton, vice-president; George Craig, treasurer, and David Rust, secretary.

Various Notes.

Oak leaves and autumnal foliage effects that will last are this week's novelties with H. Bayersdorfer & Co.

Philip Breitmeyer, of Detroit, was here October 2.

J. Otto Thilow arrived home from Europe October 3 and was "on deck," as he naively expressed it, early on the following morning, full of enthusiasm over the gardens of Versailles, Malmaison, and several others, to say nothing of the delightful experiences in foreign lands.

F. J. Michell reports the exhibition at R. Vincent & Sons Co., at White Marsh, Md., as exceedingly fine. Fifty acres of dahlias and ten acres of cannas, all in good condition, formed a nucleus for an exhibition that Mr. Michell thought worth visiting three times.

The Florex Gardens have completed their mammoth greenhouse at North Wales and on October 11 they expect to commence planting this vast house with tomatoes from 2½-inch pots. It will be remembered that early in the spring it was intended to build this house during the winter. Later a change was made, completion by November 1 being the end. The successful accomplishment of this undertaking is most creditable to all the members of the company.

The announcement made in the REVIEW last week that W. Atlee Burpee & Co. had purchased a seed growing farm of forty acres at Lompoc, Cal., and that Edwin Lonsdale was to take charge, has aroused much interest in this city. The wonder-Weiland & Olinger, in common with the other cut flower growers at this center, are now making all their shipments in the corrugated pasteboard boxes. New Castle cut flowers now go to St. Louis, Pittsburg, Chicago and Cincinnati in these boxes. Weiland & Olinger ship their stock to the store in Cincinnati in the corrugated paper boxes made by the Thompson & Norris Co., a Brooklyn, N. Y., concern, which has one of its factories at Brookville, Ind. It is found that with the use of these corrugated paper boxes the saving in express on each shipment is as great as the cost of the box. Then, at the wholesale store the boxes are knocked down and tied in bundles to go back cheaply by freight, so that each box makes many trips. Since the growers here have begun using these light boxes they have saved many hundreds of dollars on express charges.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The great Hudson-Fulton celebration is over, so far as New York itself is concerned, after a distracting week of enormous crowds and neglected business. Apart from a steady demand for Beauties and smilax for the dinner decorations, and the constant call for evergreen roping from the supply men, who had to work night and day to meet the requirements, there was no special benefit noticeable in the general cut flower trade. The auctions, too, were deserted, and everybody seemed to be on pleasure bent. Weather conditions were perfect for everything but the flying machines, and nothing to equal the displays, electrical and evergreen, has ever been seen in this country, while the miles of American and foreign warships were an inspiration that thrilled millions of interested sight-seers and visitors day and night and will never be effaced from the memories of this generation. The florists on Broadway and Fifth avenue, in the line of the big processions and parades, took special pains to decorate their windows artistically and profusely. In some were floral airships and Claremont and Half-moon vessels, dressed in orchids, mums and tritomas. The visitors seemed to appreciate these as warmly as they did the electrical display.

Saturday, October 2, the market showed unusual life, and the long depression seems to be over. Prices are better; stock was lighter in quantity and better in quality, and the general demand is steadily increasing. The outdoor stock is less and must soon, with the first severe frost, pass out of consideration. Gladioli, asters and dahlias have had their day. Of the latter, some grand single varieties remain, but there is little demand now that the chrysanthemums have begun their bid for recognition. These are coming fast, and some grand stock of the early varieties last week were snapped up on arrival at fancy prices. The early birds are catching the worms.

Roses are doing better, selected stock having gone up a notch higher in the quotations, if Saturday's prices hold. The arrivals of Killarneys are enormous; everybody seems to be growing them this season. Carnations, too, grow daily in stem and size of flower, and the best of them are back to paying figures. The grower may now begin to sit up and take notice, after a discouraging period of patient waiting for the tide to turn. Violets are coming early and fast, and 30 cents to 40 cents was the prevailing figure the last of the week. The quality is not yet satisfactory. There are plenty of orchids now. The prices are firm and the shipping demand is satisfactory.

Various Notes.

Monday, October 11, the Florists' Club will meet at its rooms in the Grand Opera House building. There will be special exhibits and the house committee, Treasurer Rickards says, will have both mental and physical entertainment.

music and refreshments, with which to tempt attendance. The nominating committee, which held a special meeting Saturday, October 2, at the office of ex-president Traendly, will make its announcement of officials for 1910, and, altogether, with the big flower show at the Museum of Natural History to come off before another meeting of the club, it would seem likely that a record crowd may be expected. Send your exhibits to Secretary Young, 51 West Twenty-eighth street.

David Mellis, of Flatbush, has returned from his trip to Scotland.

Robert Craig, of Philadelphia, was a visitor last week and a practical encourager of the auction business. This has now grown into wide influence in and around New York, and at William Elliott & Sons, Cleary's Horticultural

Co. and the Fruit Auction Co. every Tuesday and Friday crowds attend and some fine stock is offered.

The Bowling Club meets every Friday evening at Thumm's alleys, Broadway and Thirty-first street. The attendance is improving. Last Friday John Young won first honors, with an average in six games of 145; Shaw was second, with an average of 140; and Faxon third, with an average of 139. Regular practice for the Rochester tournament will begin Friday evening, October 15, and Captain Berry says he will develop a team that will reach the highwater mark in the Flower City next August.

The new wholesale store of B. S. Slinn, Jr., at 55 and 57 West Twenty-sixth street, is a model in size, convenience and equipment. The location is second to none in the business. Violets, as usual, are his leading specialty. His new sign and convenient offices are both enterprising demonstrations.

Alex. McConnell returned last week from his enjoyable summer in Europe, in splendid health and overflowing with optimistic faith in the outlook.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society will meet Wednesday, October 13, at 44 West Twenty-eighth street, to consider methods in behalf of the March exhibition.

October 27 and 28 the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society will hold its fourteenth annual show at Assembly hall, Madison, N. J. October 28 and 29 the Nassau County Horticultural Society's exhibition may be enjoyed at Glen Cove, L. I. The Tarrytown Society will hold its eleventh annual show November 4 to 6 at White Plains, while from November 3 to 10 the great display of the Horticultural Society of New York and the New York Florists' Club will be seen at the Museum of Natural History in New York city. November 10 to 12 in the American Institute, New York, the Chrysanthemum Society of America will exhibit. So the coming weeks in this section of eastern floriculture are likely to be strenuous ones.

M. A. Bowe's decorative work on the Court of Honor, on Fifth avenue from Fortieth to Forty-second streets, was continuous during the last week, flowers and smilax being renewed daily.

The new store of Wertheimer Bros. will be at 565 and 567 Broadway, corner of Prince street, where they will have a fine show room and double the floor area of their present location. Growing trade, they say, made the move a necessity.

Stanton Rockefeller, of Rhinebeck, is sending fine violets to Thomas Young, Jr. Mr. Young's gardenias, from his large greenhouse plant at Bound Brook, are perfect.

Mrs. C. W. Krick has returned from an eight weeks' visit to her mother in Chicago and her sister in Los Angeles, Cal. Three of her sons are now with her in the supply business in Brooklyn. Her youngest son and daughter leave next week for California to spend the winter. Mrs. Krick says the business this fall is the best in her many years' experience.

The plant market in the tent opened Saturday, October 2, with an encouraging attendance, and will be continued every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday until the weather closes it, probably about December 1. The hours are 6 to 9 a. m., a most sensible decision, when compared with the midnight opening of this market in the spring.

The sympathy of the trade is tendered J. K. Allen in the death of his only sister, Friday, October 1, at his home in New Jersey. The burial services took place Monday, October 4, at the family ground in Whippany, near Morristown, N. J.

For the last five years he has been with the board of engineers of the Pennsylvania railroad. He has many friends in the trade and excellent facilities for renewed success.

John F. Withers, of Jersey City, the landscape architect, is acquiring a national reputation as a tree renovator, and employs a large force in this unique work. Among his triumphs in tree surgery are the saving of the holly tree at Mount Vernon, planted by George Washington, and the famous Liberty tree at Annapolis, Ind.

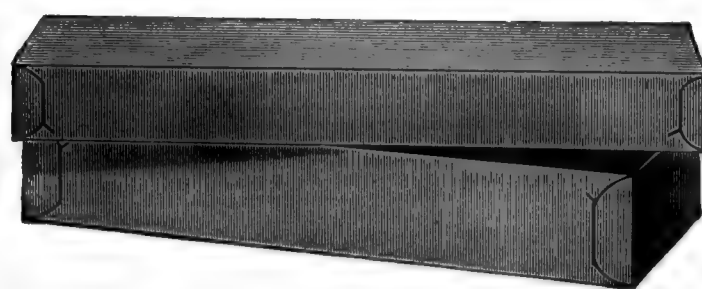

S. Jacobs & Sons, of Brooklyn, report a large call for greenhouse construction material and many building contracts this fall.

Fred Atkins, of Bobbink & Atkins, has returned from a successful European trip. Mr. Bobbink says the nursery trade this fall is extremely heavy.

W. H. Kuebler, the Brooklyn wholesaler, has taken unto himself a wife and is bearing generously the burden of congratulations. The nuptials occurred September 7, and the honeymoon journey will be after the mum season is over.

Lecakes & Co., Cotsonas & Co., and J. J. Fellouris were all overwhelmed last week with roping and wreathing orders. The Kervan Co. delivered large quantities also, and many dozen cases of wild smilax. B. Rosens found his immense supply of wild smilax completely depleted before the demand was over. It was a great week for the supply men, much like Christmas and Easter.

DETROIT.

The Market.

All is excitement in Detroit, or at least will be when this article is in print. Not that there is enough business to get any one excited, but it is the ball game. It is a case of "If baseball interferes with your business, give up the business," and this is what most people are doing. Every florist and grower has one or more representatives at the game this week, rooting for the Tigers.

But, getting down to the florists' business, it has been rushing for this time of the year. At times it is impossible to get stock with which to fill orders and I really believe a number of orders are lost just because of the fact that the supply of flowers is so limited. Roses are coming in of good quality, but not nearly enough to meet the demand. Carnations seem to be almost extinct; where hundreds should arrive only one or two dozen are to be had. One day last week the total number coming from the Bath City was seventy-five carnations. A few asters are still to be had and come quite handy for work, and once in a while some find their way into a spray or better piece.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the club held Monday evening, October 4, was not as well attended as was expected. The essay and program committee was open for suggestions from the members before arranging for the season's program.

President Plumb called on every member present for some suggestion which might be of use to the committee, and each one responded with his views. If all the suggestions for essays, talks, debates, etc., are carried out we should have a most interesting year.

William Dilger was enthusiastic about good roads. He thought that an evening spent discussing this most important subject would be well worth the time spent. Mr. Dilger believes the question of better roads is of the deepest interest to every one, not only in America, but all over the civilized world.

It was suggested that we have essays on advertising, store management, growing specialties, window trimming, getting young blood for our business, and, in fact, as many subjects were mentioned as there are days in the year.

The question of the extreme scarcity of stock was brought up. Carnations in particular are away behind this year. Mr. Bloy spoke of cutting 600 carnations from a given number of plants last September, as against 6,000 from about the same number of plants in September, 1908. The scarcity is attributed to the smallness of the plants, due to hot, dry weather this summer.

Alex La Monde, John Bains and A. Tuson, all of Grosse Pointe Farms, were unanimously elected members of the club.

ple are rejoicing, especially several of the florists, who received good orders in the form of horseshoes and pennant flags. Sullivan made a large flag in yellow and black, a gift from the city of Detroit to the Tigers. Taepke's made a six-foot horseshoe with a very white sock in the center, the same being presented to the White Socks of Chicago by the Detroit Fans' Club.

Store openings are still claiming the attention of several in the trade. In fact, these semiannual affairs are becoming a big thing in our city. With a few exceptions, nothing but the best is used, including palms by the hundreds, vases of good grades of flowers and baskets containing foliage plants trimmed with suitable bows of ribbon. E. A. did one of the large jobs last week and used, in addition to plants, a number of baskets of fresh flowers. In some of these, dahlias were used to good advantage by Mr. Fethers, who added to their beauty with artistically arranged bows of ribbon. H. S.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

There has been a shortage of flowers in this market the last week, which caused some of the storekeepers downtown to hustle to secure all they needed for funeral work. This was due largely to the in-between season, when the outdoor stock is diminishing and the bench stock is not quite ready. The situation was more forcibly emphasized because of the five days of chilly, drizzling rain during the latter part of the previous week, which blasted all asters and retarded carnations benched in the houses and almost ready to cut.

With the shortage of flowers, the funeral work has been entirely beyond the average, while the opening of the social and theatrical season added to the troubles of the dealers. Violets are arriving in small quantities, but unusually good, while mums are bidding for attention. There is an increasing demand for ferns and palms, at better prices than last year.

Horticultural Show.

The annual September exhibition of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society was more like what these exhibitions should be than has been the case for some time past. The display of dahlias, which formed the principal feature of the exhibition, far surpassed any previous showing of dahlias ever seen in this vicinity, and thousands of visitors were attracted to Columbia hall, Weybosset street, where the exhibition was staged under the direction of William Appleton.

In the dahlia exhibition the principal entries were by W. D. Hathaway, of New Bedford; Herr Prest, of this city; Mrs. H. A. Jahn, of New Bedford; George H. Walker, of North Dighton; William F. Turner & Co., of New Bedford; O. P. Chapman, Jr., of Westerly; J. Vose, of the Mayfield Dahlia Farm, Pontiac, and H. F. Burt, of Taunton. The last mentioned was not a competitor for premiums, because of his acting as one of the judges. An exhibition of outdoor roses by H. H. Pepper, of the Melrose Gardens Co., of this city, was one of the gems of the entire show. Placed in more than fifty bottles and representing fifteen varieties all grown in the open field, they attracted much attention. Among the most noticeable were: My Maryland, Richmond, Killarney, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria and Mrs. Jardine, while Brides and other tea roses added to the general ensemble.

One interesting feature of the show was the fact that on the opening day the secretary, Charles W. Smith, who has occupied that office for the last twenty-one years, celebrated his seventy-ninth birthday. In the evening he was presented with a handsome silver-mounted silk umbrella by President Burlingame of the society on behalf of his friends.

Various Notes.

Daniel A. Clarke, of the Red Oak Nurseries, Fiskeville, is booking numerous orders for spring delivery of ornamental stock.

Johnston Bros. furnished an immense baseball bat for the banquet of the Edge-wood Baseball Club at the close of the season September 29.

Charles H. Hunt has been granted permission to erect a one-story addition to his office building at 127 Burnside street.

Oscar Schultz, at 18 Broadway, Newport, having acquired the greenhouses of the Hodgson estate, now has 70,000 square feet of available space for the storage of palms, bay trees, etc. The call so far looks as though he would not have any too much space.

The floral display at the funeral of Mrs. James E. Sullivan, one of the most generous and charitable women of this city, September 29, exceeded anything ever seen here. Not only was the number of pieces unusually large, but the flowers used were of the most expensive. T. O'Connor alone had over seventy pieces, aggregating nearly $1,500, while Johnston Bros., T. J. Johnston & Co., and Kelly Bros. furnished large numbers of pieces. It is estimated that there were between $3,000 and $4,000 worth of flowers.

John P. Hammond, for several years gardener for Col. Delancey A. Kane, and more recently assistant gardener at the E. J. Berwind estate at Newport, has accepted a position as gardener for Mrs. E. H. G. Slater, to fill the position from which James Sharkey resigned.

John Johnston visited New York last week and enjoyed the sights of the Hudson-Fulton celebration.

William Appleton celebrated his fifty-fourth birthday in a quiet way at his home in this city September 28.

CHILLICOTHE, MO.—The business enterprises of R. L. Isherwood occupy a conspicuous place in the handsome little book which was recently issued as a souvenir of this city. The book contains a full-page picture of his greenhouses, and also a picture showing part of the interior of the foundry and machine shops of the Frank Way Co., a long established and prosperous organization of which Mr. Isherwood is vice-president. His greenhouses were not started till 1904, but already cover 16,500 square feet of surface.

THE bean situation does not improve to any appreciable extent.

CANNERS are among those who appreciate that there is a shortage of the popular varieties of peas.

J. F. NOLL & Co., Newark, N. J., will, under the leadership of Edward Dungan, develop its mail order department.

TOMATOES appear to be among the items that have yielded best this season, and yet there are partial failures on these.

THE work on the general catalogues is now receiving attention. Conditions make it seem to many desirable to have the books early rather than late.

D. J. TAMMINGA will again conduct a seed store at 10818 Michigan avenue, Chicago, after January 1. He sold out a couple of years ago to Kirkeby & Gundestrup.

THE perfection of artificial cold storage has done something besides increase the cost of the eggs and butter we consume; it has made lily bulbs and valley pips regular, daily articles of barter in the markets of the world.

"SHOW ME."

M. F. Miller, of the College of Agriculture and Experiment Station at Columbia, Mo., has sent out the following:

"A seed testing laboratory for the benefit of Missouri farmers and seedsmen is being operated at the Agricultural College at Columbia, in cooperation with the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The farmers of Missouri are wasting annually thousands of dollars in buying seeds of poor quality and a large share of this could be saved by having all seeds tested at the laboratory. This work is done free of charge and it is to the advantage of every farmer to have this work done.

"Seeds should be sent in care of the VALLEY PIPS

— ALL THE YEAR AROUND —

In the Review of September 30, a florist who proposed putting a lot of Valley Pips in storage was advised to:

"Get cold storage supplies direct from a reliable dealer who makes a specialty of this work. You could have them sent weekly, fortnightly or monthly, as desired. This would really be better, for you would not then have to pay storage rent or worry about whether the pips had just the right temperature, or whether they would start well when forced."

I Am That Reliable Dealer

I can supply Pips all the year around. Ship you so many a week, or fortnight—flower them yourself and have some always ready on your place.

COLD STORAGE STOCK (scarce), $1.75 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

NEW SEASON'S CROP (Fine)

Will arrive, from my agent in Germany, early next month. Selected with great care—best my money will buy. Will flower for Christmas and New Year's. I shall place a large quantity (over 2,000,000) in cold storage, to last me and my customers till November, 1910. Better get in touch now. I shall stop booking orders when I get my supply sold up.

Prices for early delivery, $1.75 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

I make regular shipments of Cut Valley to leading retailers within 500 miles of Chicago.

Seed Testing Laboratory, Columbia, Mo. For small seeds, like grasses and clovers, a tablespoonful is sufficient. For large seeds, such as wheat, oats, etc., three or four tablespoonfuls should be submitted. These samples should bear the name and address of the sender and a letter should accompany them stating whether a purity test is wanted or whether the seed is to be tested for both purity and germination.

"Where a purity test is desired, a report can be returned within a week. Where a germination test is desired, it takes a few days longer.

"The number of pernicious weeds that are being distributed over the state in the various kinds of grasses, clovers and other seeds are many of them dangerous pests and it is to the interest of every man to know exactly what he is sowing. He should also know the germinating quantities of the seeds he uses. This information is at the disposal of the farmers of Missouri, with no cost to them. It is frequently possible to secure sample of seeds from the various sources, have them tested, and then buy on the results of the tests."

GERMINATION OF ALFILERILLA.

Uncle Sam is now studying the distribution and habits of the alfilerilla, one of the world's best forage plants, with a view of determining the possibility of growing it upon overgrazed ranges, and introducing it upon national forest ranges where hitherto it has been unknown or has occurred only in limited quantities.

Alfilerilla is a valuable and hardy forage plant, which constitutes one of the principal spring foods upon many of the semiarid ranges of the southwest. Stock fattens rapidly upon it, and the gain is good, hard tallow, not easily lost through shipment. Many stockmen have endeavored to introduce it upon their ranges, and in most instances their efforts have failed. The cause of this failure is now said by the Bureau of Plant Industry to lie in the fact that the seed sold by seed firms seldom has over ten per cent germinative power, and that nine-tenths of the seed sown is worthless.

ENGLISH VIEW ON SWEET PEAS.

We are now getting in the sweet pea seed crop, and it needs no note of mine to emphasize the fact that the crop is going to be short, says a writer in the Horticultural Trade Journal. The plants have not all finished growing, but this does not serve to raise our hopes, for the weather would indeed have to take on a marvelous change to ensure the maturing of the pods now forming. The crop already set, is about all we shall get, and with the conditions prevailing, some weeks will elapse before all the pods are cleared. The bitter pill we have to swallow as best we can, is the enormous loss due to non-setting of the early flowers, and this trouble is not merely confined to the Spencers. We may take any variety, unless the deep blues are excepted, and we will find a big array of flower stalks devoid of anything in the nature of a pod. Oh! for a season like that of 1906. Essex men and midlanders, too, have assured me that more seed was spilled on the ground then, than has been picked in any year since.

The assured shortage will undoubtedly make many turn their thoughts to America, if they haven't done so long ago. Although early reports stated that the sweet pea seed crop would be short, there is little doubt but that there will be enough to go round, if not all 1909 crop, and it goes without saying that a goodish bit of year-old seed does get about. Wholesalers at home may know something of it. However, year-old seed, if reliable, is better by far than new seed which is not, and I can only hope that foreign seed, no matter where it comes from, will improve upon the reputation it has gained.

I recently had a note from a gentleman connected largely with sweet pea seed growing in America, and he says if only your men would cease looking for cheap trash we might hope for better things. In California there are growers and growers, just as there are

BURPEE'S LOMPOC FARM.

Howard W. Earl, business manager of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., and Edwin Lonsdale, who is to be superintendent of Burpee's new seed farms and experimental grounds at Lompoc, Cal., the acquisition of which was announced in the REVIEW last week, were in Chicago October 4. When they visited the REVIEW office they showed the photograph herewith reproduced, giving an idea of the character of the California farm. It shows in the foreground a field of mustard, with the mustard straw at the left. Both Messrs. Earl and Lonsdale are extremely enthusiastic over this farm, believing it to be in one of the richest spots in the California seed growing region. They say it was about the last choice farm which is to be obtained in that district and that the soil seems of inexhaustible fertility. Dry farming can be practiced, but they have an unfailing water supply for irrigation if desired. Mr. Lonsdale expects to remove to Lompoc and take up his residence on the farm early in November.

SEED TRADE WITH CANADA.

The trade in seeds between Canada and the United States has attained considerable volume. In 1908 Canada bought seeds in the United States to the value of $1,002,592, while the United States bought from Canada seeds to the value of $455,930.

RAILROAD TO TEACH FARMING.

In furtherance of its policy of encouraging agricultural interests along its lines, the Pennsylvania railroad has just purchased a farm of fifty acres at Bacon, Del., on the Delaware railroad. It is proposed to operate an experiment station for the benefit of the farmers of the Maryland, Delaware and Virginia peninsula, and with a view of exploiting the advantages of that section throughout the country.

In the fall of 1908, James McCrea, president of the Pennsylvania railroad, made a trip of three days over the railroad lines on the Delaware-Maryland-Virginia peninsula. He saw thousands of acres of this section, one of the richest agricultural districts in the world, idle, with the adjoining farms flourishing and the products of the latter in great demand in all of the large markets of the middle and eastern states.

Having knowledge of the success attained by the Long Island railroad with its two experimental farms, which have now been in operation some four years, Mr. McCrea suggested that a committee look into the matter of establishing an experimental farm on the Delaware-Maryland-Virginia peninsula; a practical demonstration farm, where the railroad could show the agricultural possibilities of the land on the peninsula. The committee's report was favorable and the railroad has just closed a deal whereby

ED TRADE WITH CANADA.

Trade in seeds between Canada and the United States has attained considerable volume. In 1908 Canada bought in the United States to the value of $2,592, while the United States bought from Canada seeds to the value of $1,950.

ROAD TO TEACH FARMING.

Furtherance of its policy of encouraging agricultural interests along its line the Pennsylvania railroad has just leased a farm of fifty acres at Bacon, on the Delaware railroad. It is intended to operate an experiment station for the benefit of the farmers of the mid, Delaware and Virginia peninsula with a view of exploiting the advantages of that section throughout the country.

In the fall of 1908, James McCreary, agent of the Pennsylvania railroad, made a trip of three days over the rail lines on the Delaware Maryland peninsula. He saw thousands of acres of this section, one of the richest agricultural districts in the world, with the adjoining farms flourishing with the products of the latter in demand in all of the large markets of the middle and eastern states.

Long knowledge of the success attained by the Long Island railroad with its experimental farms, which have been in operation some four years, McCreary suggested that a committee be organized to establish an experimental farm on the Delaware Maryland-Virginia peninsula; a practical demonstration farm, where the railroad could show the agricultural possibilities of the land on the peninsula. The committee's report was favorable and the deal has just closed whereby it comes into ownership of the fifty acres at Bacon.

According to the last census there are 3,916,800 acres of land on the peninsula, of which 2,058,299 acres are under cultivation. There are 28,355 farms on the peninsula, and it has a total population of some 500,000. To secure additional farmers to cultivate the 1,858,501 acres of idle land is one of the reasons for which the Pennsylvania railroad is to undertake the operation of an experimental farm. The coöperation of the farmers of the peninsula is already assured, and the state agricultural colleges, agricultural boards and horticultural societies are enthusiastic supporters of the project.

CENSUS OF AGRICULTURE.

Forty-five thousand enumerators out of the estimated grand total of 65,000 will be engaged April 15 next in gathering the required information concerning agriculture for the thirteenth decennial United States census. Director Durand purposes making every effort to secure progressive farmers and crop reporters for these places. The agricultural schedule, which is to be placed in the hands of these enumerators, is nearing completion by the Census Bureau. It will be as simple as possible, and yet secure the greatest amount of important information concerning agriculture.

By means of the census schedule an effort will be made to secure an accurate statement of the total number of acres of land in the farms of the country, by states and counties; also the improved area, number and size of farms. An important part of the schedule will be that enabling a study of the crops of 1909. The enumerators will ask about areas, quantities produced, and value of crops, in the case of all the principal crops grown in all parts of the United States. This inquiry covers grains and seeds, hay and forage crops, and all important special crops, such as fruits, nuts and vegetables, cotton, tobacco, rice, hemp, potatoes, broomcorn, etc.

SOIL FERTILITY INCREASING.

Declaring that the world's soils are today a greater storehouse of fertility than they ever were, Prof. Milton Whitney, chief of the Bureau of Soils in the U. S. Department of Agriculture, in a bulletin just issued, takes a stand in direct opposition to the view of many writers that soils are gradually wearing out.

Prof. Whitney states that a study of the records for the past forty years will show that the average of crops is increasing, particularly in the older states, where the soil has been worked the longest. There has been, he states, an increase of two bushels in the average yield of wheat per acre in the past forty years, although the yield of corn has decreased one-half a bushel.

"The soils of New England have materially increased in yields of corn and wheat during forty years," says the professor, "but, what is more startling, they are producing considerably heavier yields than the soils of the Mississippi river states."

He adds that an examination of the records shows that the leading European nations are not only producing greater crops now than at an earlier period, but the crops are larger than those produced by the comparatively new soils of the United States.

THE LEAGUE.

Many seedsmen who have before them the very difficult determination of retail prices for printing in seed catalogues will be glad to learn that the directors of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League are to hold a meeting October 20, after which they will issue a list of what the Board of the League considers to be near the correct wholesale trade values of the sixty or seventy sorts of garden seeds which are known to be in short supply.

Of course these values are only suggestive, no one being in any way bound to follow the rates, yet these assumed values being issued by a party of nine men fully informed of conditions both in America and Europe, the intimated rates will of course be of inestimable value to the wholesale trade, and equally so to the retail trade catalogue men, who can use the wholesale valuations as a starting point from which they can make their retail catalogue prices.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

Arthur T. Boddington, New York, bulbs, seeds, roses and garden supplies; Stuart Low & Co., Bush Hill Park, Middlesex, England, special list of orchids; T. S. Hubbard Co., Fredonia, N. Y., grape vines; Wild Bros. Nursery Co., Sarcoxie, Mo., nursery stock; E. Y. Teas Co., Centerville, Ind., nursery stock, new hardy hydrangeas, peonies and irises; W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, bulbs and seeds for fall planting.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business last week among the retailers was reported good. The wholesalers, too, say that they have been cleaning up pretty well each day. There is not an oversupply of anything at present and the quality of the stock is becoming better daily.

This is Centennial week. The city is crowded with visitors and the trade is looking for a good business week. There are also quite a few large weddings on for this month and we are looking for the awakening of our business from now on. The wholesalers were cleaned up early last Monday morning, October 4, as consignments were light. The prices have stiffened up a little as compared with those of the previous week.

Beauties are coming in fine in color and meet with a good demand in all grades. Other roses are also selling well. Carnations, as usual at this time of the year, are scarce, but they show an improvement in color and stem. Mums are as yet limited to a few dozen. Violets are looking better each day. Extra good valley is still at $3 per hundred. Asters are over for this season. Other outdoor stock is becoming scarce. All greens are plentiful, except smilax.

Various Notes.

Henry Emunds, of Belleville, was a caller on Saturday, October 2. He reports that he has just completed his new carnation house, 22x150, and is expecting a big cut of carnations this season.

Andy Hoffman, of Waldbart's, was visiting in Chicago last week. He is now back at his post, much pleased with his trip.

Of the thousand mayors who visited us last week, none was more welcome than the Hon. Phil Breitmeyer, mayor of Detroit. His escort during his stay was

Boddington's Gigantic Cyclamen

The seed of Cyclamen is often sown too early in the year; from the middle of August to the end of October is the best time. The seedlings should be grown on to the flowering stage without any check whatever. When grown cool, the results are most satisfactory. Boddington's Gigantic Cyclamen are unequalled for size and quality of bloom. A magnificent strain of Cyclamen with flowers of extraordinary size and substance.

Gigantic White Butterfly. Pure white; immense flowers.

Gigantic Snowflake. The largest of all white Cyclamen.

Gigantic Cherry-red. Most brilliant and effective.

Gigantic Rose. Immense flowers of a pleasing shade of light rose.

Gigantic Pink. Exquisite shade of soft pink.

Gigantic Crimson. Most striking color; under artificial light appears to be almost luminous.

Gigantic Crimson and White. A magnificent flower of the largest type.

Gigantic Syringa Blue (new). A charming color.

Gigantic Lilac. A very pleasing color, lighting up well at night.

Any of the above varieties, trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.00; 1000, $7.50.

Collection of the above nine selected varieties, one pkt. of each, for $4.00.

Palms, Ferns and Plants

With the addition of our plant at Edgebrook, where we have over 70,000 square feet of glass, we now have about 150,000 square feet of glass, and thirty-two acres devoted exclusively to growing all kinds of nursery stock. You know that in plants there can be a great variation in quality and yet strictly be up to specifications. Knowing this, we want you to feel that you will get good value from us, as well as having every shipment strictly up to specifications. We believe that such a policy will appeal to every prospective purchaser. We have been raising and selling plants to the florists for fifty-two years. And in all this time we have had but one policy, and that is: "Good value given on every purchase." Here is a fact that you should not lose sight of: Chicago, being centrally located, has the best railroad facilities in the United States. You will find that you will make a saving in express and freight rates and have the advantage of quick service if you place your order with us.

Areca Lutescens—The above cut shows one of our largest sizes, in 10-in. pot, at $5.00 each.

Palms

We have a very fine stock of palms embracing all the leading varieties. All of them are in very vigorous growth.

The Market.

The last week, being warm, brought in a glut of roses, all colors and all grades being plentiful, so that some of the "cut rate" stores made a specialty of roses at 35 cents per dozen. Carnations are still scarce. Chrysanthemums, Easter and speciosum lilies, dahlias and other late garden stock are plentiful. Violets are arriving in fairly good quantities for this early season of the year. The bulbs are coming in large quantities now, and great satisfaction is derived from the decreased duties on most bulbs.

Various Notes.

Luther W. Spear, 629 Hennepin avenue, intends putting in a stock of flowers and plants in addition to his business of distributing Fruit Nectar.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. is expecting a fine stock of azaleas and palms within the week. This firm has some good Beauties for sale at present, and stock here is good, with the exception of a scarcity of carnations.

Rice Bros. note the same scarcity of carnations, but are getting some good stock in other lines.

R. A. Latham has some good stock each morning, but night finds it well disposed of, and business is good here.

N. Neilson, of Mankato, was in town last week. M. E. M.

NEWARK, N. J.

Newark has some handsome flower stores. August C. Begerow, on Broad street, successor to the Begerow Floral Co., the oldest in the city, has a perfect new establishment, with a fine conservatory, large basement and electric lighting. Close at hand is the handsome store of Phillips Bros., long established and fitted up with rare taste and completeness, with greenhouse facilities also, with William H. Straham, formerly of New York, as foreman. Across the way is Mr. Wolfinger, a Texas boy, who has been in Newark eight years and long in the service of the Begerow Floral Co. He is official decorator of the Navarre hotel. Business is satisfactory, the florists say, and a big season is anticipated. There are four of the Renecks with stores in various parts of the city, the Strobells, McLaughlin & Murphy, Charles Witheridge, J. F. McDonough, Kimmerle & Minder, and about twenty others who do a prosperous business. Mr. Gerlach, one of the partners of the Begerow Floral Co., who died a few years ago, was a bachelor and left an estate valued at a quarter of a million.

The only seed house in Newark is that of J. F. Noll & Co., where Edward Dungan has recently purchased an interest and become president and general manager, after over thirty years of service with William Maule, of Philadelphia. The house does a general seed business, wholesales to market gardeners, and will at once add a mail-order branch to its other enterprises. The store is 30x100, five stories and basement, with all modern conveniences.

With the new Pennsylvania tunnel open, the Twenty-eighth street flower market will be only fifteen minutes away from Newark.

Vegetable Forcing.

HEAD LETTUCE FOR FORCING.

Kindly tell me of some of the best heading lettuce for forcing. W. A. P.

Rawson's Hothouse Forcing head lettuce is considered the best by most of the head lettuce growers. The variety was introduced by W. W. Rawson & Co., of Boston, Mass., but is now sold by all first-class seedsmen. H. G.

CROPS FOR UNHEATED HOUSES.

I have two greenhouses, each 12x50, running north and south, in which I have no heat. I can grow one good crop of Grand Rapids lettuce in the fall in these houses, and then, about April 1, I transplant Jersey Wakefield cabbage into these houses from flats. Now, what I want to know is whether I can grow a crop of winter head lettuce in these houses between November 25 and April 1, by using good mats over the beds in severe weather.

Please advise me as to the best variety of lettuce to use in this case, and state if there is any other crop I could get in between these dates. The houses referred to are low dig-outs, and well protected from the cold winds. I am located in Ohio. H. D. H.

It may be possible, but it is hardly probable that you could get a crop from these houses as stated. Much would depend upon the weather.

There is only one way in which you would be likely to be successful, and that would be to make hotbeds. If you have benches, make them deeper and put in ten inches or more of good, fresh horse manure, which has been turned and shaken out two or three times. Then put about three or four inches of good soil on top to transplant your lettuce into. Keep air on the house early and late; the heat from the beds will keep the plants growing and keep them from freezing.

If you have no benches in the houses, it will be just as well to cover the entire floor, path and all, with a foot of hotbed and lay a board down the center to walk on.

Rawson's Hothouse head lettuce is considered the best variety of head lettuce for forcing. The seed can be purchased of any prominent seed company. Grand Rapids leaf lettuce matures more quickly and pays better than head lettuce, if your market will take it. Head lettuce is forced almost exclusively in the eastern states, while Grand Rapids is the only variety that is much grown farther west.

Making hotbeds is particular work if they are made to heat well and hold their heat a long time. You may cut two crops from the houses if the plan works well, as it requires only about six weeks to mature a crop if the plants are of good size when transplanted, but the seed should be planted a month before the plants are wanted to transplant. H. G.

CAULIFLOWER IN COLD FRAMES.

Will you kindly tell me when cauliflower seed should be planted to winter in coldframes for very early market? Please tell me, also, something about the care of the plants. I am located in southeastern Iowa. S. K.

I am not positive whether S. K. wishes to have a lot of fine plants to transplant to the fields early in the spring, or whether he wishes to grow them to maturity in the coldframes. Both methods are practiced a little farther south, but are uncommon in the northern states, where the winters are so much longer.

Supposing S. K. wishes to mature the heads in the coldframes, I would say that it is now too late to get the plants to any size in this latitude before severe weather would stop their growth. It takes about six weeks from the date of planting the seed until the plants (which are transplanted as soon as the seed is up) are ready to transplant the second time, to the garden or coldframe or wherever they are to be grown. If seed were planted about September 18, it would be transplanted a week later to flats, and again, about November 1, to the coldframes. That would be too late a date to get much growth this fall before freezing weather, or before the plants become dormant. Of course, much would depend on the weather and the latitude, but for S. K.'s part of the country —because with it a boy can do as much as two men can do in a whole day with the hose—and do it better.

The system is equally valuable outdoors, and for many other crops besides vegetables—wherever you need water.

(Iowa) I would advise getting started a month earlier.

If he does not wish to transplant the second time, but expects to leave them about two and one-half inches apart until spring, to plant into the open garden or field, I would advise waiting until October 1 to plant the seed, keeping the frames uncovered as long as possible. H. G.

MANSFIELD, MASS.—Bert Hartwell has finished building a greenhouse 225 feet long on the land he purchased from W. L. Barker on the east side of South Main street last spring. He will set cucumber plants in it as soon as they are far enough advanced. Mr. Hartwell will build another house several feet longer at once. When the plant is completed it will be one of the best equipped of the many in town.

The Market.

Conditions here are excellent. Business started off with a rush at the beginning of the month and so far has kept it up. The florists are all well pleased and look forward to a busy season. Roses are plentiful and of good quality. Carnations are scarce. My Maryland is coming along nicely and gives promise of being popular.

The weather continues warm, with cool nights, and roses and carnations like it. September was the coolest for this month for several years. Frost came September 26 and 27.

Various Notes.

Julius Niednagel & Sons are cutting plenty of roses, with a good demand for them. Their carnations and mums are looking well. The big boiler has been fired and is working finely. The old boiler will be used in case of emergency.

Ben Kramer is having a good run of trade. Mrs. Kramer, since returning from Denver, has been improving in health right along.

The Blackman Floral Co. is doing a fine business. The firm is cutting plenty

PACIFIC COAST.

FLORISTS on the Pacific coast especially will be interested in the illustrations on another page showing the progress of the San Joaquin Floral Co., of Stockton.

SANTA BARBARA, CAL.—George Whipple, a well known gardener in Montecito, will open a flower store in a combination concrete and glass building for which ground was broken September 23, on State street adjoining the Howard-Canfield building.

SPOKANE, WASH.—Hoyt Bros. Co. recently prepared a post card carrying a picture of the store front, another of the greenhouse range, one of the uniformed messenger, and several pictures of cut flower arrangements. At the fair they gave away 6,000 of these, most of which were mailed to friends by those who took them. Hoyt Bros. Co. expects to mail out several thousands more, with an advertisement printed on the front of the card.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

A few stiff showers have somewhat changed the situation in the cut flower line. Good violets, and plenty of them, have been the most noticeable feature, and this has been especially agreeable to the retailers. The price has lowered about 25 cents per dozen bunches, and the quality has improved about 100 per cent. Carnations are daily becoming more plentiful and, although they are still eagerly bought up, the chances are that in a week or so they will be much easier. This will depend somewhat on the chrysanthemum crop, which up to the present time has been slow in materializing, but from this time onward we can look for plenty of flowers at fair prices.

We have seen the last of the aster crop during the present week, and the same can be said of gladioli and amaryllis. A few Japanese lilies are still being shown, and although they are quickly bought up they are quite past their prime, and do not bring as good prices as they did earlier in the season.

Roses are the scarcest proposition that the retailer has to face at this time. Almost everyone is afraid to take orders for fancy stock for fear that he will be unable to furnish it. There is a fair amount of second quality Brides and Maids, but they do not fill all requirements.

Any kind of good outdoor stock sells well. Coreopsis, gaillardias, stocks and such like are eagerly bought for window displays, and much space is devoted to these articles that is usually filled by something much more expensive.

Business, despite the changes in the weather, continues to be fair, and with the advent of the better grades of stock that are becoming daily more in evidence, the chances are good for a continued run of fair trade. Funeral orders are ahead of those handled at this time one year ago, both in San Francisco and the surrounding towns.

Various Notes.

L. E. Blochman, the well-known Santa Maria dealer, is in town.

C. E. Lilley, the green goods man, for-

GERANIUMS BECOMING POPULAR.

Geraniums of all kinds have always been looked upon heretofore in California as a flower of no value and relegated to the back garden, or used to cover waste places. They are of such easy and continuous growth and flowering qualities and attain such a huge size that the public has, up to within the last season or two, given them little attention. With more stress being laid on the making of artistic neighborhoods and home sites, many lovers of massive effects have interested their neighbors, and large plantings have been made of the newer and brighter shades of geraniums, to the distinct betterment of general surroundings.

Improvement clubs have found that the geranium in California can be used as a small or large hedge, as a covering for any unsightly mark on the landscape, or as a massive bedder in any portion of the garden. It is evident that many thousands of them will be called for during the next season, and plant growers should be prepared with good supplies of the best colors.

Large planters usually plant nothing but the unrooted cuttings, as under almost any conditions there is rarely over one per cent of failure in their growth. But to the general planter who wishes but a hundred or two, rooted cuttings will appeal most forcibly.

With geraniums that have been grown without much water, this is probably the best time of the year to propagate them. Use only the young tips, and place the cuttings closely in flats. Trim off most of the foliage, and put the flats in partial shade. Don't give them much water for a couple of weeks, and then only sparingly for two weeks more. If the stock plants have been grown with considerable moisture at the roots it is better not to make cuttings before November, when the wood will be riper. Regarding frost, there is but little to fear on that score in California. Occasionally the tips of the cuttings are nipped, but no serious damage to them results. G.

HOLLY FROM SEED.

Your article on "Budding the Holly" was just what I was wishing for. Will you kindly give, in an early issue, directions for correctly growing from the seed? In growing the seed, do we have to plant both male and female trees in close proximity to insure fertilizing the blooms?

G. G.

There is little difficulty in raising holly from seed, provided the grower has patience enough. Although all the holly family are more or less dioeciously polygamous—that is, the male and female flowers occur on different plants—I have never had any trouble in germinating seed. They are apparently always fertilized in the usual manner and I have used them indiscriminately from a dozen or more widely distributed trees.

The best success will always be had from seed that has remained the longest time on the trees. Pick it when it gets ready to drop off, which will be late in the season. Soak the pods about ten days in water and do not let them dry out again before planting. I always use flats made of inch thick redwood, four inches deep, eighteen inches wide and two feet long. I use inch redwood, as it takes a season at least to germinate the seed, and if anything thinner is used it will probably not last until the young seedlings are ready for transplanting. In such a flat, plant about two handfuls of seed pods. Pack them down well and cover with half an inch of clear sand. Wet them down well and stack the boxes, one above the other, in any situation that is not too shady. They are much easier kept damp this way than if they are strung out in the open. About once every ten days take and repile the boxes, after giving each a good watering. They will keep sufficiently damp in this way until the next watering time. Always lay a damp piece of burlap on the top box and in changing let that box be put on the bottom of the new pile.

After about six months in the latitude of San Francisco the seeds will be found to have commenced to germinate, when they should be put in a coldframe or under a lattice house. See that they are kept constantly moist and the little seedlings will be found to keep coming out of the ground for another four or five months. It is usually a year after they have been planted before the last of them show themselves.

They grow slowly at first and should be left in the seed boxes for another year at least before they are transplanted out into the ground. Do not be afraid to give them plenty of water and keep them in partial shade.

It is a long and tedious undertaking to grow hollies from seed and the imported plants can be bought at a fraction of a cent each in Europe. It is a queer condition that it seems to be impossible to replace well berried plants by carefully growing from their seed; the only way to be sure is to bud or graft on seedlings with scions from heavy fruiting plants.

Officers for 1909-10: Pres., F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; Vice-Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Sec'y., Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., O. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-fifth annual meeting, Denver, June, 1910.

E. H. SMITH, formerly a railroad agent at York, Neb., has taken a part of the management and office work of the Harrison Nursery Co.

THE New England Fruit Show, at Horticultural hall, Boston, will attract a large number of nurserymen to the Hub October 19 to 24.

E. M. SHERMAN.

Though it is true that in the multitude of counselors there is wisdom, it is just as obviously true that the multitude of counselors would not accomplish much without a suitable leader. Hence the success of the majority of great business enterprises seems to be due principally to the ability and energy of some one man. However well this one man may be surrounded by helpers and advisers, it is his personality which controls and molds and energizes the whole of the great business movement with which he is connected.

Among these practical leaders must be included E. M. Sherman, the founder and president of the Sherman Nursery Co., of Charles City, Ia. Commencing in an unpretentious way in 1884, he built up the business until he now has under his management one of the leading nurseries of the world. The growth of the business was so rapid as to necessitate, in 1888, an enlargement of the capital and the formation of a stock company. Each year more land was bought and more acres of trees planted in order to supply the increasing demand, until in 1907 the company controlled 600 acres of land and had over 300 acres of this land covered with growing nursery stock.

About eight acres of the ground are covered with arbors for the proper care of young evergreens, which are here grown in large quantities from the seed and must be partly protected from the fierce summer heat of the sun, which otherwise would kill the seedlings. The packing house, built at the edge of a small hill, is so arranged that it is nearly surrounded by banks of earth. It is 150x300 feet, with 16-foot walls. There is also a range of glass for the growing of roses, which are shipped principally to St. Paul and Minneapolis. A large, handsome, stone office building stands at the entrance of the grounds and is connected by telephone with various parts of the nursery. Most of the land has a high altitude with a general northwest exposure, which is said to be ideal for the production of hardy stock.

Mr. Sherman is a member of the executive committee of the American Association of Nurserymen. He first acted in that capacity in 1907, and his services have been considered so valuable that he has been reelected to the position each year.

Mention The Review when you write.

Under date of July 12 E. G. Hill writes me: "I have been considerably interested in your notes on peonies appearing in the REVIEW, and have noted in particular your remarks about the Mons. Crousse. Three years ago the coming September we sent roots of several varieties which we wished to have M. Lemoine pass upon. Among the number was Mons. Crousse, and this is what he says: 'We have no Mons. Crousse in stock, but Mons. Crousse himself, who saw the flowers, states that from his remembrance it is the right name for the variety, a very fine one.' Mons. Crousse is a neighbor of Mons. Lemoine and we understood when there that the newer varieties and the larger part of the stock of Mons. Crousse were purchased by the Lemoine firm, so you see what Mons. Crousse himself has to say, and as he raised Meissonier, it would seem as if he ought to know."

A. Dessert, in his manuscript of all French peonies catalogued by the French up to and including 1902, does not mention the variety Mons. Crousse.

Eliot Coit in his Peony Check List under date 1907, issued by the New York College of Agriculture, fails to list the variety Mons. Crousse, and his list embraces all varieties catalogued by all countries up to the year the check list was issued. I fail to find Mons. Crousse in the current catalogues of the French growers, and the query naturally arises, who introduced Peony Mons. Crousse? When was it introduced, and why had the French never catalogued it? Mons. Lemoine admits he has no stock of it. Who has? It is identical with Meissonier we have from several growers and is a fine peony.

No doubt the trial grounds at Cornell University will set us right in the matter.
JOHN M. GOOD.

APHIS ON CURRANTS.

Will you please tell how to care for our currant bushes? The trouble is new to us, although we have grown them for more than twenty-five years. The first growth of the trouble seems to be a pink edge to the leaf. I took off most of them as they grew larger. Later the leaves looked like green blisters and were nearly filled with small insects, like green lice. Last year I gave them showers of coal ashes, hoping the grit would kill the lice. This year I made a saturated solution of whale oil soap and used nearly a pint of it to ten quarts of water and sprinkled twice a week. I also used hellebore. Will you please tell me what to do for them? They stand in good garden soil and the yield was good of reds and poor of whites. H. W.

Spraying with Whale Oil soap or kerosene emulsion is the best remedy for the aphis which attacked your currants and which is a common pest. As the under sides of the leaves are always affected, it is necessary to direct the spraying materials from below, rather than above. You can get a spray nozzle which will send an upright stream. INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Business for the last two weeks has been highly satisfactory. There has been a decrease in funeral work, but numerous decorations for the fall weddings have made up for this. A number of light frosts stimulated things a little and put a quietus on the outdoor flowers. Quantities of chrysanthemums are coming in, but the demand is not what it will be a little later. Carnations have improved wonderfully in the last few weeks. Brides and Maids are still poor, while Richmonds, Killarneys and Beauties are showing improvement. There was considerable call for orchids last week, but they are slow in coming in as yet. The recent frosts cut the dahlia supply down till there are not enough to go around.

Various Notes.

John Rieman has returned to the city after spending the summer at his country home, near Broad Ripple.

Henry Bakemeyer, of A. Wiegand & Sons, was laid up last week with a sore foot, caused by the removing of an ingrowing toenail.

F. W. Brandt, who recently purchased the establishment of William Billingsly, reports business opening up excellently.

H. W. Rieman suffered an accident last week, while riding a wheel, which might have proven serious. In some manner he fell from the wheel and ran the handle bars against his side. He suffered considerable pain for some time, but thinks it will leave no bad results.

E. C. Pruner, with E. H. Hunt, was a caller last week. Mr. Pruner says it is his last trip on the road, as he is to take an inside position with Mr. Hunt.

Mrs. Ernest Rieman is to return this week after a three months' visit in Germany.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Wiegand and Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Wiegand have returned from an auto trip to Cincinnati. Messrs. Wiegand paid a visit to the florists along the line and found business in a healthy state.

B. F. Hensly, of Knightstown, has been sending some fine mums to this market.

E. J. Fancourt, with the Pennock-Meehan Co., was in the city last week. This is the first trip here since Mr. Fancourt became a benedict. He looks as though married life agreed with him.

NEW CARNATIONS

We have two wonderful new seedling Carnations, DEEP CRIMSON and BRIGHT PINK, which we now offer for the first time, and after a thorough trial we unqualifiedly recommend them as the strongest growing, freest blooming, healthiest and most satisfactory varieties of their color; large flowers, extra long, stiff stems; fine fragrance; calyx never bursts. As we are Rose growers and not Carnation specialists we will sell these varieties in strong, field-grown plants, clean, healthy and thrifty, while the stock lasts, and it is limited, at $8.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

There has been a great change in the flower business in the last week. Asters and gladioli are a thing of the past for this year, and there was a scarcity of flowers the latter part of the week, with an advance in prices on roses and lilies.

The wholesale houses are having some trouble taking care of orders, on account of the scarcity of carnations. This week finds a good many Bergmann chrysanthemums coming in, but pink and yellow will be a few days later.

The retail stores are all quite busy again, a number of small weddings helping out the funeral business, and the general trade is picking up every day.

Various Notes.

Walter Breitenstein, T. P. Langhans and Harvey Sheaf were the members of the trade who found they had business in New York last week.

John W. Jones, the chief florist at Schenley park, thinks that the new white chrysanthemum named President Taft, which he is growing in Phipps Conservatory, is hard to beat. The Common Sense Club has been organized by the gardeners under Mr. Jones, with the following officers: Honorary president, John W. Jones; president, George Pfeifer; treasurer, Timothy Casey; financial secretary, John Radtsky; recording secretary, Willock Young, and committee on ways and means, William Shirley, Philip Fay and James Perry. The new society will hold an entertainment in the near future. Hoo-Hoo.

 6-inch pots.....$7.50 and $9.00 per doz.
 8-inch pots.....$12.00 and $15.00 per doz.

We also have a large stock of the Light Lonsdale Sport at same prices. This variety we consider far superior to the original type, it making a finer shaped plant as well as holding the flowers much better, while the color is a little lighter than that of the original Lorraine.

OTAHEITE ORANGES

Our stock is unusually fine this year. We can supply plants with from 4 to 25 fruit. When shipped prior to Oct. 1st, 15 cents per fruit in green state; when fully ripened, 25 cents per fruit—for Christmas.

CYCLAMEN

Our stock at this time is better than we have ever had it and sure to be a money-maker for anyone buying now. The prices at Christmas will be just double those quoted below.

The Market.

Trade has taken on a gait that reminds us the busy season is about here again. Stock has been scarce here for the last week or so. Since the cool weather set in the supply has been especially short in roses, and as carnations are just coming in, they are used up mostly before putting them on sale. Carnations here are looking fine, and it will not be over a week or so until we shall have some heavy cuts coming in, and they will certainly be welcomed. Roses were plentiful for a week or so, as several growers had a heavy crop at the same time, but they are a little off crop now. They are looking fine, however, and in a few days more they will be coming in heavily again.

Mums are moving well at good prices. Golden Glow and October Frost are the only varieties so far. Monrovia will be in by the latter part of the week, with Pacific and Estelle next.

There has been a good demand for Beauties in the last few days. Valley has been moving better, and the outlook is promising for a busy season. Gladioli, asters and outdoor stock are a thing of the past. Violets are coming in, but are rather short-stemmed and mostly single. The Gov. Herrick violets are looking fine, and in a week or so they will have fair stems.

Various Notes.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. is cutting some fine carnations, and has a crop of roses just coming which will be extra fine.

E. Metzmaier reports that business is rushing and it is hard to get enough stock to go around.

C. A. Roth has had several busy days lately. He reports stock looking fine, with a good cut coming.

G. Drobisch has had a busy time on funeral work, and has found it hard to get stock enough.

The Munk Floral Co. is cutting some fine Golden Glow mums, of good size and with well-filled blooms.

The Livingston Seed Co. had a special sale on ferns at 24 cents, which used up a nice lot.

Ralph Knight, formerly with the Munk Floral Co., is putting up one large house, which he will use for lettuce this winter, and next season for flowers. J. M.

YOUNGSTOWN, O.—The recent McNab-Euwer wedding at St. John's church gave John Walker the opportunity for possibly the largest decoration ever put up in Youngstown. It included church and residence, and the flowers for the nuptial party.

Facts Worth Learning

Look, brother mine! Listen to what the Philadelphia hustler, GODFREY ASCHMANN, the great foreseer, has to say. He never goes wrong. He predicts prosperity. It is now knocking at your door. Are you prepared for the rush?

TESTIMONY FROM MICHELL.

I personally visited Mr. Aschmann's greenhouses September 21, 1909, and found that the Araucarias, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, Boston, Whitmani, Scottii, Amerpohilli, Todeaoides ferns, Rubber Plants, Kentias and Arecas are indeed A No. 1. Have never seen any better plants. The Gloire de Lorraine begonias in 6-in. pots are a perfect wonder, bushy and clean. Have never seen his greenhouses filled with plants as good as they are now.

F. J. MICHELL, of the firm of Henry F. Michell Co., 1018 Market St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 7, 1909.

Mr. Godfrey Aschmann, Philadelphia, Pa.

Dear Sir: Enclosed please find check to cover the 100 Araucarias which you shipped us August 31, 1909. They came on in fine shape and we were pleased.Respectfully, George M. Kellogg Flower and Plant Co.

ALPINE PRIMULAS.

Alpine primulas are delightful plants that rank among the most desirable subjects for rockery planting, and are characterized by elegance and diversity of habit and coloring. Judiciously placed in compact groups they cannot fail to attract attention, while as pot plants grown in a coldframe they yield a wonderful display of decorative material in the early spring months. It frequently happens that plants are lost in winter from being placed in low-lying positions, and consequently subjected to excessive moisture, both at the roots and overhead.

These primulas revel in a loamy soil and short manure, and require abundance of moisture during their season of active growth, but in common with many another subject from mountainous districts, resent wet conditions in the dull and dormant season. Bearing this in mind, the groups should be so arranged that overhanging boulders will effectually carry off heavy rains and provide the proper shelter.

"I would strongly advise," says W. H. Aggett, in the Gardeners' Magazine, "that they be planted in groups of from three to half a dozen, these being much more effective than single specimens. They will, of course, be planted out from small pots, and this may be done in the autumn or in March. Slugs are fond of the succulent morsels they afford, and not only devour the young foliage and flower spikes, but play havoc with the crowns, feeding upon them in winter if allowed to take up their quarters in their vicinity. Hence the necessity of dusting soot around them occasionally, and of trapping the slugs with cabbage leaves, carrots, turnips, etc.

"The following possess much beauty: Primula ciliata, a well-known and popular species; it bears bluish-purple flowers, and grows with great freedom. Extremely beautiful is P. frondosa, whose silvery foliage and large trusses of bright, rosy lilac flowers at once attract attention. Scarcely less desirable is P. marginata, with similar foliage and bluish flowers. From the Tyrol we obtain P. Tyrolensis, which has rose-colored flowers. P. Forsteri and P. glutinosa have pink and blue flowers respectively. Well worthy of notice is P. farinosa, which is found growing in a wild state in many parts of the British Isles. P. lycina, a native of the Alps, has purple flowers, while P. Facchini supplies us with a pink shade, the individual flowers being fine, and altogether out of proportion to the minute foliage. By all means include P. nivalis, of spotless purity; it is worthy of being proclaimed queen of the section. It is a native of the Caucasus."

DELAWARE, O.—Presley Groom, on Railroad street, has been enlarging his greenhouses and coldframes and his establishment is now in first-class condition.

ROCHESTER, N. H.—The local florists were represented at the fair with splendid displays of potted plants. The floral arrangements were about the same as in previous years, with a handsome bed, sprayed by a fountain, and potted plants and flowers all around the four sides of the square.

Greenhouse Heating.

THE American Blower Co., Detroit, has issued a catalogue, listing its steam traps, used by greenhouses, in Spanish and Portuguese, with the intention of reaching out for business in Latin-American countries.

THE COAL MARKET.

Smith, Lineaweaver & Co. have given this summary of conditions in the coal market:

"The bituminous coal market is considerably better, owing to the fact that a great many manufacturers have started up, and there is already felt a great car scarcity.

"The situation in the anthracite business has shown marked improvement on the demand for domestic sizes, owing to the fact that the houses are being opened that were closed for the summer, and people are home from their vacations. In addition to this, the cold weather has started many fires going.

"The steam size market has also improved very materially, for the same reasons that the bituminous market has, and besides that, apartment houses and office buildings are using more coal now because they have begun to heat and light the buildings."

IN NORTH CAROLINA.

How many lines of 2-inch pipe will it take to heat a house 20x90 feet, the side walls being five feet high, with eighteen inches of glass in them? The ridge is eleven feet high. The house is to be heated with water and should have 60 degrees when the temperature outdoors is at its lowest. It seldom goes lower than 20 degrees above zero on the coldest night here in North Carolina. Would you run the pipes with a slight incline downward from the boiler to the farther end of the house, and a rapid incline to the boiler? Or would you run them in with an upper incline to the farther end of the house? We want to hang the pipes on the walls. How many rows and how many returns should we put on each wall, using 2-inch mains and 1½-inch returns? J. L. O.

zero you will require two coils, each consisting of one 2-inch flow and five 1½-inch returns. One coil can be placed on each side wall. Pitch all flows up from the boiler one inch in every ten feet and place an air vent at the highest point. Pitch all returns down toward the boiler one inch in ten feet.

RANGE OF FOUR HOUSES.

I have four small greenhouses, running north and south. No. 1, on the east side of the range, is 14x44, five feet six inches to the ridge. No. 2 and No. 3 are each 20x44 and nine feet to the ridge. No. 4, the west house, is 26x44 and eleven feet six inches to the ridge. A shed covers the north end, with glass in the south gables. The boiler stands just north of the partition between houses No. 3 and 4. It is the Kroeschell pattern and on account of water it cannot go lower than so that the returns are on a level with the floor. I can go but four feet above the boiler. Where should be the highest point in the piping? No. 1 house I want to heat with 2-inch pipe, the rest of the houses with 3-inch pipe. Can I take off a 4-inch flow four feet high for the three houses that lie east of the boiler, putting in a 3-inch tee for each house? I also want to take off a 3-inch flow for house No. 4, which lies to the west. How many flows and returns must I have in each house? Should the highest points in the piping in the several houses be all the same level? I would like to have these houses piped

To maintain 60 degrees at zero house No. 1 will require nine lines 2-inch pipe. These can be arranged two coils, as follows: One coil to have one 2-inch flow and four 2-inch returns the second coil to have one 2-inch flow and three 2-inch returns. The first coil should be placed along the east side of the house. Houses No. 2 and No. 3 each require eight lines of 3-inch pipe, of which two lines can be used for flows and the remaining six as returns. House No. 4 will need ten lines of 3-inch pipe for 60 degrees at zero. Three of the ten lines can be used as flows and the balance as returns. This arrangement would give you three coils in all. size should be used for the return pipe of the above.

A 3-inch main flow will be plenty large enough for house No. 4. It will not make any great difference if the high points of the piping vary a little, as each and every coil will take care of itself if the mains are of the proper size.

POOR COMBUSTION.

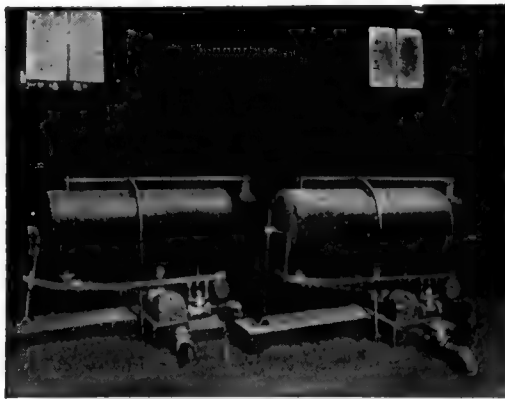

I have a return tube boiler that seems to have poor draft. I will describe the situation as closely as possible and hope you can tell what the trouble is. There are two boilers that stand in a pit twelve feet deep and are connected to the same chimney. One boiler is forty inches in diameter and sixteen feet long, the other forty inches by fifteen feet. One contains fifty-two 2-inch tubes, the other thirty-six of the same size. The grate is 4x6 feet and is twelve inches from the bottom of the boiler. The ashpit is sixteen inches deep. The outlet to the chimney is 12x12. The stack is two feet in diameter and forty-six feet high. I hope you can see the trouble and tell me how to fix it.
M. H. R.

Your stack should be at least sixty feet high and the smoke pipe from the boiler to the chimney should be increased from twelve inches to eighteen inches for each boiler. The shell of your boiler is entirely too close to the grate, and this condition both interferes with the draft and prevents the gases from expanding, thereby producing incomplete combustion, which means waste of fuel. You should lower your grate at least six inches, and also deepen your ashpit to correspond.

FROM STEAM TO HOT WATER.

I would like to know if I can change my heating system from steam to hot water without too many alterations. I have one plant house 12x50, with solid beds, with a trench through the center of the house. This house runs east and west. The north wall is three feet high, the ridge five feet from the beds, sloping to one foot on the south side. This house requires little heat. The other house runs north and south, is 18x60 feet, sides three feet high, ridge eight feet. The sides are lined with felt paper and banked up over one-third. The boiler is in the south end of this house, sunk in a pit. The steam line is 2-inch through this house and reduced to 1½-inch where it goes on into a dwelling

Let Us Overhaul Your Greenhouse Heating System Before the Fall Rush

Don't wait until you need heat in your greenhouses, to know if your plant is in condition to give it to you. Better let us look over your entire heating system now, repair or replace your boiler if necessary—put in new pipes, headers, and so on—in other words, give it a thorough overhauling. You then take no chances of a breakdown and a frozen up house.

We know how to do it—have been doing it for over forty years—the oldest Greenhouse Heating Engineers in the business.

enough, but the two 1¼-inch returns are not sufficient. Possibly these can be made larger; two 2-inch returns would answer. It would be an advantage if the flow line running to the dwelling had a gradual rise from the far end of the 60-foot house into the dwelling. The return lines of the greenhouses can be carried along the side walls. No check valves are required for hot water.

RETURN TRAPS.

How high above the return pipe to the boiler should a steam trap be located to operate properly? Our trap at present is situated about three feet above the top of the boiler. It takes about five or six pounds of steam to operate the trap. Would it not operate with less pressure if placed only a few feet above the boiler return?

O. H. A.

The question gives nothing on which to base a reply. It is not stated what trap is used, nor are any of the points covered which might affect the working of the trap. About the only reply that can be made is to advise writing to the manufacturer of the trap.

DISEASE ON HARDY PINKS.

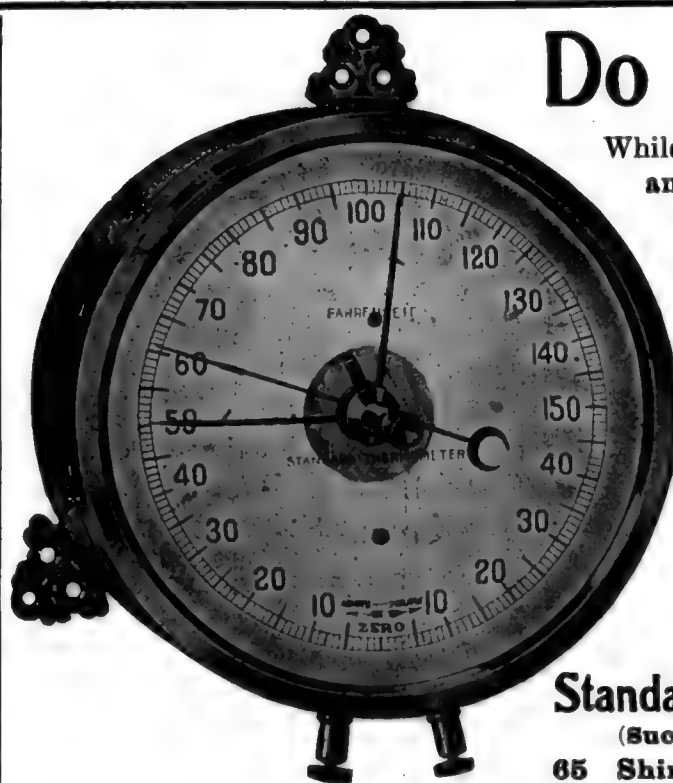

I am sending under separate cover some plants of my seedling hardy garden carnation, which are, in my opinion, affected by some bacterial or fungous disturbance that causes their foliage to curl and shrivel and which considerably checks their growth. The roots and stems seem to be all right. Kindly tell me what the trouble is and suggest a remedy.

O. L.

These bacteria are not by any means uncommon on the hardy garden pinks, being aggravated by spells of warm, moist, sunless weather. Dusting with fine air-slaked lime and sulphur while the foliage is dry will help to check it. When washed off by rain apply more. The disease will probably run itself out with the arrival of cooler weather.

During the last summer George E. Buxton has remodeled one house from a three-quarter span to an even-span house, giving him a fine additional growing house, 30x125. A building for the storage of cut flowers has also been added, and another boiler of ninety horse-power is at present being installed. His carnation stock, which includes all the leading varieties, looks unusually well. Mr. Buxton October 16 will celebrate his twenty-fifth year in the florists' business. He still looks quite youthful. He has some extra fine seedling carnations.

Stephen Chase, who has hitherto grown carnations quite largely, has dropped them and is now devoting his energies to the growing of geraniums and cucumbers; with the latter he has been successful.

W. W. Powers has added to his flower business the new fad of hammered brass and is doing a rushing business in this line, being obliged to make long days to fill his orders.

That Charles H. Blake is prospering a new, modern, two-tenement house serves as evidence.

J. F. Hammar has about 5,000 mums which are looking first-class.

George H. Hopkins has a new tree spraying preparation which he has perfected and applied for patent rights on. It has proved sure death to all leaf-eating insects, and the park commissioners of Boston and other cities will be asked to give it a trial.

NEWPORT, R. I.

The season that is now drawing near a close at Newport might be rightfully called a floral season. The florists of the city, those who make Newport their year-round business point, and those who only spend the summer months in the city, have had a busy summer.

Flowers have always been used extensively for table and other house decorations during the summer social season in Newport, and this summer there has not been a social event, no matter how small, but there have been some floral decorations. At some of the larger dinners this year the arrangements of flowers have bordered on the magnificent, especially the decorations that were used for the large dinner that was given by Mrs. Herman Oelrichs and by Mrs. J. Mitchell Clarke, who had her dining hall turned into a regular small Italian garden.

Gardenias have been the popular bou-tonnieres, as last year, and there is always a great demand for these sweet flowers, no matter what the price may be. Several times during the summer the supply in Newport has been exhausted and rush orders were sent to New York and Boston for supplies, and high prices were paid for the sake of having these sweet-smelling blossoms grace the top of the dinner table finger bowls.

The presentation of flowers has also seemed to be one of the popular pastimes of some of the social set this season, floral tokens being sent on the slightest provocation.

TWIN FALLS, IDAHO.

Two young men leaving Worcester, Mass., less than a year ago to seek fortunes in the far west, have established a greenhouse business here, a pioneer institution of that kind in this section of the country. The men are E. R. Peterson, who was formerly with H. F. A. Lange, of Worcester, and J. A. Lundahl.

Ten acres, one and one-quarter miles from the center of Twin Falls, a short distance off Blue Lakes boulevard, has been obtained for greenhouse purposes by these young men, who recently organized as the Twin Falls Floral Co. Both believe that they have found the one great opportunity for which they came west, and since they started the establishment six months ago they have developed it until there is none more comprehensive in scope in Twin Falls county.

In the beginning a small part of an alfalfa field was plowed and set to various kinds of flowers. No enrichment of the soil was attempted, the plants were just planted, given water as they appeared to require irrigation, and thrived remarkably well. Having thus proven that the soil was well adapted to the culture of flowers, such as asters, gladioli, cosmos, cannas, carnations and kindred species, Messrs. Peterson and Lundahl proceeded to further laying the foundations for what they are confident will be a splendid business as the community grows.

A store has been hired in the First National Bank building. At the gardens, there has been erected a greenhouse, 25x125. It will be heated with hot water in the winter, provisions for which have been made, including the digging of a cistern, into which the ditch water is filtered before going through the pipes under pump pressure.

Fifty tons of coal were hauled out a week ago, for use in this work, the intention being to have an entire winter supply delivered before bad roads could handicap this work. In the glass house there are already many beds of flower plants, which will do service throughout the winter, and contain a large supply of bedding plants for the spring delivery.

It is also the intention of the promoters of this enterprise to divert a considerable part of their greenhouse to raising lettuce, radishes, rhubarb and other table delicacies of this class.

MUSKOGEE, OKLA.—C. E. Taube, proprietor and manager of the Muskogee Carnation Co., opened an uptown store at 230 West Broadway October 1.

HOUSES AT SANDUSKY PARK, OHIO

A curvilinear palm house and straight roof wings like this, makes a mighty fine little layout. We recently designed a similar one to this, but made the wing houses with Curved Eave. The effect was especially fine.

Sandusky had contemplated building for several years, and when they did build, they built right.

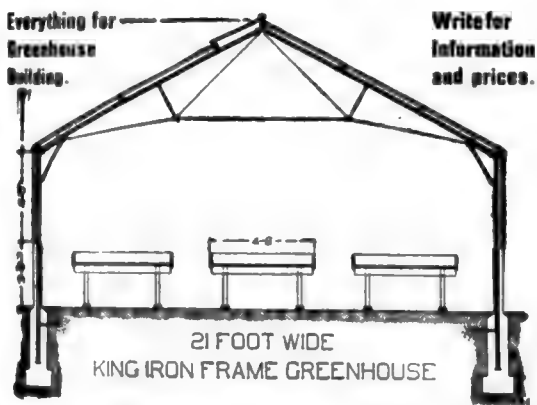

They took no chances with any "new fangle" constructions. What they wanted was up-to-date houses, but they must have a construction with proven durability. That's why the L & B Sectional Iron Frame Construction was chosen. Ask J. H. Roth, the head gardener, what he thinks of them.

Buy Hot-Bed Sash at Cut Prices and Build Cold Frames Economically

Hot-Bed Sash
3 x 6-1% Glazed with 6-inch Glass
Dealer's price $3.50

The problem of finding room for bedding plants is solved by the use of Cold Frames. It is poor economy to overcrowd your greenhouse with plants that are better off outside, in cold frames, where they soon become sturdy and in fit condition to plant or market. The capacity of any greenhouse can easily be doubled by building Cold Frames to care for the "overflow."

Florists' Cypress Hot-Bed Sash Made with Blind-Mortised, Double-Shouldered Joints

Gordon-Van Tine Hot-Bed Sash are better made than the ordinary kind. No open joints! We make the joints moisture-proof and build our Sash extra strong. Only the best grade of Louisiana Red Cypress used. Primed with pure raw linseed oil. Greenhouse putty and plenty of points used. Our prices are 50% less than retail dealers ask for inferior sash. All regular sizes in stock for quick shipment.

DUTCH BULBS

NARCISSI NATURALIZED.

Dotted Over Grass Land.

To see many varieties of narcissi at their best, they should be observed when flowering in grass land or along the edges of lakes or streams. This method of planting is extensively practiced in Europe. On many of the large English estates and in such public resorts as Kew Gardens, acres of grass land are dotted with bulbous plants in spring. There is a steady increase in this style of planting in the United States, tens of thousands of bulbs being used on some private estates annually. Not only are they being more largely used by wealthy flower lovers, but in parks, public gardens and cemeteries some attention is at last being given to this natural planting, and there is an immense future before it. Narcissi and some other bulbs are infinitely more beautiful when seen growing and blooming in this way than under more formal conditions.

Many country florists have bulb planting to do each season for their customers. As a rule, hyacinths or tulips are used in formal beds. These we have nothing to say against, but on many even small places there are spots where a few handfuls of narcissi thrown down and planted where they fall would produce charming effects. It is a mistake to use them in the lawn. They should go where the grass will not be cut until the foliage of the bulbs is matured. Under or among deciduous trees, around the edge of ponds or in any part of the grounds kept in a semi wild state, they will be at home.

How to Plant Them.

For planting a narrow trowel answers well, taking out a small circle of turf, dropping the bulb below it and replacing the grass so that no disturbance of the surface is noticeable. Planting is better done when the ground is moist, as the turf lifts better then. Special bulb planters are made for use in grass land. They cut a clean, circular piece of turf and release it when wanted for refilling. All narcissi prefer rather moist soil, the poeticus section particularly so. Water, however, should not be about them in winter.

Small circles and all symmetry should be avoided when naturalizing bulbs. It is always best to use the hands and broadcast them, planting each bulb where it falls. The long trumpet section, poeticus and short trumpets do not look well mixed; each kind looks best by itself. While all will succeed in full sunshine, a little shade is beneficial and the flowers will last longer where it can be afforded them. The bulbs should be covered two to three inches, according to their size.

Good Sorts for the Purpose.

The best of all narcissi for naturalizing is N. poeticus. It is specially fine when grown along the margins of lakes or streams, reveling in the moist soil conditions and increasing surprisingly fast. The early form, ornatus, comes in season two weeks before poeticus. It lacks the vigor of the latter, but has a better formed flower. Any of the Leedsii section will naturalize beautifully. The finest of all is Mrs. Langtry. It is doubtful if even N. poeticus can outclass this

The large trumpet class should not be ignored. A few which can be relied upon are: N. princeps, increases quickly, one of the earliest to bloom; Emperor, robust, and to look well should be planted in coarse grass land; Victoria, a fine bi-color sort; albicans, white trumpet; William Goldring (Swan's Neck daffo-when well flowered. It increases almost as fast as poeticus. N. Leedsii Duchess of Brabant is another cheap but useful variety. The ordinary Burbidgei and Burbidgei Vanessa come in season a little ahead of poeticus and do well in grass land. The handsome Barrii conspicuus, incomparabilis Stella and Gwyther, and Sir Watkin are other desirable short trumpet varieties to use.

dil), a charming flower in the grass, long snow-white tapering perianth, gracefully drooping over the light primrose trumpet; moschatus of Haworth, the snowy white Spanish daffodil; pallidus præcox—this and moschatus succeed best in partial shade facing the north—and the lovely golden yellow Johnstoni Queen of Spain.

Soil and Treatment.

The time to plant tulips in the open depends on the locality, but the middle to the end of October will be about right in the northerly states, while November will answer well farther south. The bulbs lose considerable vitality if kept out of the soil late. Better plant them a trifle deeper to offset any danger of their starting too early. Of the foregoing, the following half dozen are inexpensive and good for anyone wanting only one or two sorts: Joost van Vondel, chrysolora, Keizerkroon, Proserpine, Thomas Moore, Vermilion Brilliant.

Tasteful Combinations.

While tulips in solid beds are the most effective, the following combinations seen last season were in good taste and quite pleasing: A large circle planted with Sir Thomas Lipton, scarlet, with a broad edging of Joost van Vondel, white; a similar bed of Keizerkroon with a band of Queen Victoria (La Reine); Yellow Pottebakker bordered with Thomas Moore; a large oval bed with equal portions of Chrysolora and Dussart, deep crimson; a square bed of Couleur Cardinal edged with Joost van Vondel; a ribbon border with Joost van Vondel Ophir d'Or, yellow, and Wouverman, dark purple. White Pottebakker and Chrysolora, planted in quarters opposite each other, looked well, the contrast being less violent than if a scarlet or crimson had been used. Prince of Austria, President Lincoln, light violet, and chrysolora made a harmonious trio.

In Perennial Borders.

While tulips are largely used in formal beds, they are extremely effective planted in clumps through perennial borders, from half a dozen to twenty-five bulbs together, according to the size of the border. Used in this way, they need only to be lifted every second or third year. Perennials or annuals will cover any blanks left when they die down.

In spring when the winter protection has been removed from the tulip beds, it is a good plan to plant a groundwork of arabis, violas, pansies, silene, myosotis, double daisies or some other spring flower through the beds. This helps to cover the earth and, when the colors are rightly used, throws the tulips in stronger relief, as the tulips fade. The to extend their bulb sales might do worse than cater to this growing trade. There are some growers who could probably naturalize a few on their own place. They would serve the double purpose of utility and beauty, to say nothing of proving a good advertisement.

The debt of gratitude we owe to the late Peter Barr cannot be adequately expressed. To his tireless energy and painstaking labors are due many of the finest sorts we are growing today. But for him the narcissus would not be holding the commanding position it does in the bulb world today. W. N. CRAIG.

BEDDING TULIPS.Their Unfailing Popularity.

Tulips remain by far the most popular of spring bulbous plants for bedding. Hyacinths are, if anything, less used than a decade ago, while narcissi have not yet become properly appreciated for this purpose. In the near future, however, they will give tulips a close race, even for bedding. Tulips have the advantage in regard to colors, most of the narcissi being either yellow or white, while the tulip family has about every color of the rainbow.

Beds of mixed tulips look well and are in good taste. The colors harmonize well. The same cannot be said of hyacinths. Beds of one solid color or variety are decidedly preferable to those quartered or otherwise divided for color effects. The time was when a circle would consist of alternating rings of scarlet and white, and a square bed would be chopped up like a patchwork quilt of riotous colors. Now if the beds are not one variety, the only change will be a band of some color distinct enough to show up the other variety.

nure used should be well decayed. Among fertilizers, fine bone, sulphate of potash and soft coal soot are good if carefully mixed in the soil. A little lime will be helpful in correcting any acidity in the soil.

The following, in their respective colors, are hard to beat as bedding tulips: White, Joost van Vondel, White Pottebakker, White Swan, Queen Victoria; the first named is the finest white tulip; White Swan is a splendid late one; Queen Victoria (La Reine) comes tinged with rose; it is a useful variety for edging; yellow, chrysolora, Mon Tresor, Golden

LATE TULIPS.

Gaining in Popular Favor.

It is noticeable that the American bulb catalogues this season are giving greater prominence to the late flowering Cottage and Darwin tulips. Two years ago the REVIEW commended these varieties and predicted great popularity for them in the near future. It is pleasing to note the advance they have made in popular esteem in this short time. These late tulips have for some years been extremely popular in Great Britain and on the European continent. Many of the Cottage section were originally found growing in old cottage gardens in England, Scotland and Ireland, where they had been growing for half a century or more. Others had their origin in France.

The late tulips in nearly every case grow much taller than the early ones. They are therefore much better for cutting. It is not at all uncommon to see them twenty-four to thirty inches high, occasionally as much as thirty-six inches. They possess greater vigor than the early tulips and do not run out like the latter. Planted in patches in herbaceous borders or shrubberies, they last for years, flowering splendidly each spring.

Their Suitability for Bedding.

For bedding they are practically an unknown quantity with us as yet. Why this is so, there would seem to be no good reason. Some of the best sorts are inexpensive. They embrace a wide range of colors and remain in flower longer than the early varieties.

In New England some varieties are annually used for Memorial day, when they prove valuable. They are also seen in considerable numbers in the markets. Their long stems render them much better than the early class for this purpose. Solid beds of such late tulips as Gesneriana, Gesneriana lutea, Inglescombe Pink, Golden Eagle, Picotee, and Darwins like Clara Butt, Gretchen, Glow, King Harold and Farncombe Sanders, if used in the public parks and gardens, would quickly cause a boom in these varieties. Will not some wideawake, progressive park superintendent lead the way? Others will speedily follow.

Some Good Varieties.

A list of reliable and inexpensive late tulips is as follows: Picotee, Golden Eagle, Bouton d'Or, Gesneriana spathulata, Gesneriana lutea, Inglescombe Pink, Inglescombe Scarlet, Isabella (Shandon Bells), Leghorn Bonnet, Vitellina, La Candeur (Snowdon). A select assortment of Darwins are: Clara Butt, soft rosy pink; King Harold, deep red; Gretchen (Margaret), blush rose; White Queen, white passing to pink; Glow, bright vermilion; Farncombe Sanders, rosy scarlet; Mrs. Krelage, rose margined blush; Pride of Haarlem, salmon rose, shaded scarlet; Dream, soft heliotrope.

The florist who wants to keep up with the times cannot afford to be without some late tulips. To say nothing of their value for cutting, they cannot fail to attract the attention of customers, who will be glad of a change from the yearly routine of ordinary bedding tulips. At the exhibitions in Boston each season the early tulips are practically ignored, but the visiting public quickly enthuses over the late ones. A single exhibitor staged no less than 300 varieties May 22 last.

CHINESE LILIES.

The Chinese lily bulbs are making growths. As I have quite a number of them, kindly advise me how to stop them.

Beyond keeping the bulbs as cool as possible, you can do nothing to check the growth on your Chinese lilies. They naturally flower early in the season, and you cannot retard them, like many other bulbs.

LILIES FOR EASTER.

My Easter lilies arrived about three weeks ago. I potted them up at once in 6-inch pots and stood them under the coolest bench I have in my greenhouse. I covered them with paper, but I find they are coming up. I put them in a frame outdoors last year, covering them with ashes, but they drew up too much. I think, however, that they were better off last year than they are this year.

D. W. D.

The lilies will be fully as well in a frame for a few weeks. Water sparingly until the pots are full of roots. You will be able to hold most of these until Easter if you move them back into a cool greenhouse a month hence. Run them at 45 degrees at night for a time, increasing the temperature as growth advances. You want to be able to count your buds at least forty days before Easter, which comes March 27 next year.

The foregoing list comprises a number of really good and reliable varieties, but many others will succeed equally well if similarly planted. None of them want manure at the root, but a top-dressing of manure in early spring will prove beneficial, if well decayed.

Soil and Treatment.

The time to plant tulips in the open depends on the locality, but the middle to the end of October will be about right in the northerly states, while November will answer well farther south. The bulbs lose considerable vitality if kept out of the soil late. Better plant them a trifle deeper to offset any danger of their starting too early. Bulb beds want the soil thoroughly pulverized and any ma-

A PRIZE WINDOW.

One of the features of Seattle day in the Pacific coast city of that name was a competition among merchants in the decoration of their show windows, prizes being awarded for the best displays. The second prize was awarded to a music house, which put up a distinctly novel decoration. The large show window was curtained, sides and back, with heavy, rich velvet, and in the center of the window there stood a life-sized grand piano made of flowers. The florist used a wire frame, the same as for a funeral piece, mossed it and filled the frame with asters, outlining it with smilax. The piano was complete in every detail, keyboard, makers' name, music rack and even upraised cover, the under side of which was filled with small and darker flowers. At each side of the window there was a pedestal which carried a large made-up basket of blooming plants or cut flowers. Heavy wide ribbon bows on the baskets, with long streamers, added much to the completeness of the arrangement.

A NEW CLEVELAND STORE.

The illustrations on page 7 are made from photographs taken October 4, the date of the opening of the new retail flower store of the Jones-Russell Co., Cleveland, O. The members of the concern are Harry Jones and Charles Russell, both formerly with the J. M. Gasser Co., and Mr. Barber, formerly of Alliance, O. The location is on Euclid avenue, in the new business district on that thoroughfare. The illustration will serve to show how up-to-date the store is in all its details.

RETAILERS' ADVERTISING.

Advertising is almost as contagious as chicken-pox, but unlike the juvenile infections, one does not quickly recover from it; once a retail florist starts advertising, he never stops. An advertiser once remarked that advertising is to business what steam is to a locomotive—the thing that makes it go. At any rate, the advertised business is the one that really does go—and every retail florist ought to advertise regularly.

The trouble with the average florist's advertising is that it does not advertise—it merely tells his name and occupation; it wholly misses the opportunity of inspiring a desire for flowers in those who read the advertisement.

A good advertisement has some talk about the stock the florist wants to sell; the best advertisement tells how much money the florist wants for the stock.

In Chicago the leading retailers are acquiring the advertising habit. One of them started it and his business seemed to thrive. Now all the leaders are using high-priced space on a regularly thought out plan. The accompanying illustration, showing the advertisement of the Bohannon Floral Co., which recently moved into a new store in the University Club building, is an example of what is being done. Of course, it pays; if it didn't, they wouldn't keep it up. But they use only one paper—the best—not everything that comes along.

Once upon a time there was a business show at the Coliseum. A large sign hung over the booth of one of the exhibitors. It read: "If your business is not worth advertising, advertise it for sale."

MUMS AT NEW ORLEANS.

The crop of chrysanthemums, which was quite promising a few weeks ago, took a bad turn after the last storm. Some growers suffered quite heavily, but stock is not going to be really scarce, as some growers have been successful in both quantity and quality. Going among a few places, I found that Dan Gutler's greenhouse had been badly battered by the wind, but his chrysanthemums stood it as well as could be expected in a sash house. He will cut some good flowers, also dahlias, which will be in demand, few patches having been spared by the storm.

A BID FOR BUSINESS.

Mount Greenwood cemetery, Morgan Park, Ill., where W. N. Rudd presides, sends out "A Suggestion to Lot Owners," which may also afford a suggestion to florists who do cemetery work. In the big cities many of the cemeteries derive a considerable part of their income from the care of graves and do anything from sodding and boxing to the placing of wreaths and sprays of cut flowers on the graves. Where the cemetery does not itself do this work, the cemetery officials usually are ready to supply the florist with the names of lot owners, if, indeed, he does not already possess a considerable list of these people through the work he has done for them.

In the spring it is good business to send a neatly printed circular to each lot owner, soliciting orders for planting the graves for summer. In the autumn Mount Greenwood suggests to its lot owners the rate at which graves will be covered with evergreen boughs for winter and adds the following on bulbs:

THE SEATTLE EXPOSITION.

October Horticulture at A. Y. P. E.

Whether or not an interested observer of the A. Y. P. be an admirer of formal gardening, he must admire almost unreservedly the thought and execution of this beautiful plan. With natural advantages of site and scene, this garden is a gem with all but no blemishes.

With the view of the cascades on one side and Mount Rainier in the distance, you find yourself ascending an easy promenade from Twenty-third avenue toward a distant group of buildings, the center of which is the U. S. government exhibit. On either side of the promenade are steep banks sloping toward you, leading to broad levels in both directions. On these slopes are still left a few stray poppies, suggesting that earlier they were a mass of these brilliant flowers, succeeded by Coreopsis lanceolata, strangely intermingled with red clover. We question not the value of either the clover or the coreopsis, but the combination of these two strong, self-sufficient colors.

Continuing past a long stretch of side embankments, which are slowly decreasing in height, till you can first see over them and finally walk on their level, there appears a streak across the path like a amethyst ray in a sunset. On a closer approach, this gay coloring develops into an immense circular bed of mesembryanthemum, with a center group of white Phlox paniculata surrounding a pedestal urn planted with a center phlox palm, with the usual plant vase accompaniment of vines, the only discordant note being the dots of color of scarlet geraniums in the urn. Where this bed breaks the straight course of the promenade we have the walks running around the bed and the grounds opening out to you on both sides. Let us stroll off to one side, with the intention of returning to the point for a start toward the upper grounds later.

Panels of Phlox and Hydrangeas.

Turning, then, to the right and taking a few steps upward, we find ourselves on a wide grass plat bordered at the rear by long beds of Phlox paniculata in separate colors, alternated by the same sized rectangular beds of Hydrangea paniculata. The varieties of phlox are happy selections of color in these harmonizing tints and shades of lavender, lavender pink, and white: Lothair, King of Purples, Stella's Choice, Richard Wallace, Embarrassment, Pantheon, Queen, Independence, Pearl, Madsen. At intervals behind the phlox and hydrangea panels were pedestaled urns with Dracæna indivisa as center plants, surrounded by ivy geraniums graded from the lightest rose-pink to deep magenta, with Vinca minor as trailers. A few scarlet ivy geraniums scattered through these urns slightly marred the otherwise complete color harmony. At a short distance these color differences do not appear.

A hedge of shrubbery and pines encloses this part of the grounds. Seen over their tops are scattering taller pines, between which the columns of the Music hall appear. This part of the garden is so green and restful and retired that we are not surprised to find seats at regular intervals, with plenty of room for everybody.

Central Portion of the Garden.

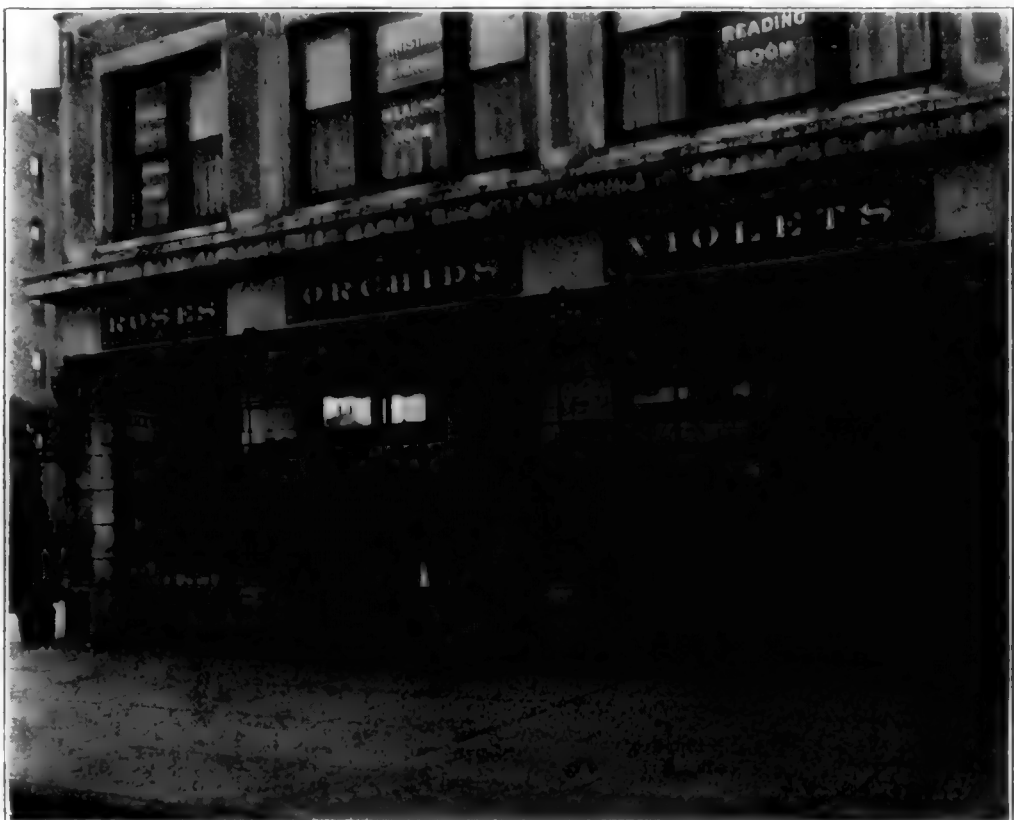

Retracing our course to the mesembryanthemum bed, we take a semicircular course around one side of it until a wide expanse of lawn turns us farther around its end and back again beyond it, up a few steps and facing the central and most strictly formal portion of the garden. The transition from the circular to the rectangular form of beds is achieved gracefully. One long side of a bed of geraniums, facing the circular bed just passed, is a slow curve, and the other side, lying over against the rectangular beds, is a strictly straight line. Each bed is laid out with reference to its adjacent plats and with respect to its relation to the whole plan.

With this hint as to what is coming, we are prepared to find just what is now in sight. Having passed the bed of scarlet geraniums of various kinds, hedged in by a miniature border of Berberis Thunbergii, now bearing its scarlet berries, we find sectional beds with strips of lawn between, grouped about a sundial as a center. Nearest at hand is a bed of yellow, bordered by Calceolaria rugosa and white pansies in separate lines. The same color principle is carried out throughout the bed in a fine lot of yellow antirrhinum, scabiosa and Gaillardia picta. This last, on the off side of the bed, is a skillful mixture of the colors to follow, which are seen in a bed of assorted Marguerite carnations.

This purple principle being well introduced in the crimson carnations, we logically enjoy a panel of heliotrope with a border of sweet alyssum, and then one of begonias in red and pink. A corner panel of white Phlox Drummondii, with orange and white poppies, completes the group of beds on this side. But still following ahead, we find an introduction of blue verbenas happily placed, but red and pink unhappily placed.

The Geyser and Its Surroundings.

We are still viewing the central portion of the garden, which, still ascending over

An advertiser has no idea that advertising is to let his goods and store is to a locomotive; the engine makes it go. At any rate, the effect of it seems as if one that really works, and every retail florist ought to get to work early.

The week of the average florist's advertising is that he does not advertise. He forgets his name and occupation; he forgets the opportunity of increasing his business in those who are not his customers.

A retail florist has some talk to his customers. He wants to sell; he wants to know how much money the customers have for the stock.

The big cities many of the florists derive a considerable part of their business from the care of graves, anything from sodding and the placing of wreaths and sprays of flowers on the graves. Where the cemetery does not itself do this, cemetery officials usually are supplied by the florist with the material, if, indeed, he does not possess a considerable list of the florists through the work he has done.

SEATTLE EXPOSITION.

Horticulture at A. Y. P. E.

As not an interested observer, but as an admirer of formal gardens, I must admire almost unreservedly the thought and execution of the plan. With natural advantage and scene, this garden is a masterpiece, but no blemishes.

View of the cascades on one Mount Rainier in the distance, itself ascending an easy prom.

Twenty third avenue toward group of buildings, the center of the U. S. government exhibit, one of the promenade are steep going toward you, leading to can both directions. On these still left a few stray poppies, then earlier they were a mass of brilliant flowers, succeeded by anecdotal, strangely intermingled clover. We question not whether the clover or the core, the combination of these two sufficient colors.

ing past a long stretch of side beds, which are slowly decreases, but till you can first see over a gently walk on then level, cuts a streak across the path, a ray in a sunset. On a garden, this gay coloring develops a massive circular bed of phlox, with a center group of Phlox paniculata surrounding a large plant, with a center with the usual plant vase of vines, the only display being the dots of color of vines in the urn. Where this the straight course of the we have the walks running bed and the grounds opening both sides. Let us stroll off to the intention of returning at for a start toward the upper then, to the right and taking us upward, we find ourselves on a less plot bordered at the rear by Phlox paniculata in separate situated by the same sized rectangular beds of Hydrangea paniculata. The varieties of phlox are happy selections of color in these harmonizing tints and shades of lavender, lavender pink, and white: Lothair, King of Purples, Stella's Choice, Richard Wallace, Embarrassment, Pantheon, Queen, Independence, Pearl, Madsen. At intervals behind the phlox and hydrangea panels were pedestaled urns with Dracena indivisa as center plants, surrounded by ivy geraniums graded from the lightest rose pink to deep magenta, with Vinca minor as trailers. A few scarlet ivy geraniums scattered through these urns slightly marred the otherwise complete color harmony. At a short distance these color differences do not appear.

A hedge of shrubbery and pines encloses this part of the grounds. Seen over their tops are scattering taller pines, between which the columns of the Music hall appear. This part of the garden is so green and restful and retired that we are not surprised to find seats at regular intervals, with plenty of room for every body.

Central Portion of the Garden.

Retracing our course to the mesembryanthemum bed, we take a semicircular course around one side of it, and a wide expanse of lawn turns. Farther around its end and back again beyond it, up a few steps and facing to central and most strictly formal portion of the garden. The transition from the circular to the rectangular form of beds is achieved gracefully. One long side of a bed of geraniums, facing the circular bed just passed, is a slow curve, and the other side, lying over against the rectangular bed, is a strictly straight line. Each bed is laid out with reference to its adjacent plots and with respect to its relation to the whole plan.

With this hint as to what is coming, we are prepared to find just what is now in sight. Having passed the bed of scarlet geraniums of various kinds, hedged in by a miniature border of Berberis Thunbergii, now bearing its scarlet berries, we find sectional beds with strips of lawn between, grouped about a central as a center. Nearest at hand is a bed of yellow, bordered by Calceolaria rugosa and white pansies in separate lines. The same color principle is carried out throughout the bed in a fine lot of yellow antirrhinum, scabiosa and Gaillardia potha. This last, on the off side of the bed, is a skillful mixture of the colors to follow, which are seen in a bed of assorted Marguerite carnations.

This purple principle being well introduced in the crimson carnations, we logically enjoy a panel of heliotrope with a border of sweet alyssum, and then one of begonias in red and pink. A corner panel of white Phlox Drummondii, with orange and white poppies, completes the group of beds on this side. But still following ahead, we find an introduction of blue verbenas happily placed, but red and pink unhappily placed.

The Geyser and Its Surroundings.

We are still viewing the central portion of the garden, which, still ascending, over-another stretch of lawn, is leading toward one of its most attractive features, the geyser, with its wide basin and surrounding balustrade. The embankment which encloses the basin is covered with Dorothy Perkins roses, trailing over the ground. Growing up through these are Japanese anemones in white and lavender pink; an exquisite bit of color conception, made harsh by a border below of Calceolaria rugosa again.

Diverging to the right or left, again are seen flanking beds of roses, hedged in at the rear by the short pines and crimson and pink hollyhocks, a charming setting for the array of crimsons, crimson pinks and whites of the La France, Testout, Druschki, Jacqueminot, Brunner, Soupert and Margaret Dickson. Neighboring areas of like form, bordered by berberis and white pansies, are a mass of fine blooms of Paul Neyron and Baronne de Bonstettin, with the above varieties repeated and the addition of a crimson Phlox Drummondii.

Standard bays and urns alternate about the circle of the geyser basin. Peering over the rail brings into view millions of yellow and white pansy faces, the whole circular space from the railing to the water's edge being a solid panel of pansies. The soft recesses of white and gold surround the geyser, which throws its silvery spout high in the air each minute.

We wish we could say that the pansies have it all to themselves in this delightful nook. But assorted gladioli were seen here and there against the railing. Let us hope that they were meant for white and buff.

Panels of pansies, blue-eyed and white with streaks of yellow, backed by hedges of rhododendrons and other shrubbery now out of bloom, filled in the recesses around the Agricultural and Manufacturers' building. Nothing was more attractive about the grounds than these beautiful pansy beds, both as to quality of stock and arrangement of colors. Everyone feels, as he stands admiringly, "Somebody thought." SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

The Favorable Weather.

Cultural notes will soon be a thing of the past, for nearly all the varieties, except the latest, are showing color and it is simply a matter of waiting for the final development of the flowers. The season so far has been ideal for opening flowers, with bright days, cool nights and no fog. Foggy weather often ruins more good flowers than all other causes combined, and this year so far it has not given the long-suffering grower the benefit of its chastening influence.

Under the influence of the lovely weather, nearly all the varieties are earlier than usual, Beatrice May, Miller, both bronze and yellow, Gloria and W. Meredith being already cut.

What a glorious flower is Beatrice May! Nothing in white approaches it, and if we had some other foliage on the stem we would have the ideal mum. October Frost, Willowbrook and all the other early whites are simply lost alongside of it.

Yellow Miller, one of last year's new ones, has established a place for itself as a high-class early yellow and will be largely grown next year. The early bud is not of much use on this variety, but a crown late in August produces lovely flowers.

Gloria, also one of last year's novelties, will find a place. Though the color may be too light for some tastes, the flower is handsome and the stem and foliage excellent. The color is the Enchantress shade of pink and it would seem that, if Gloria will come as early next year, it deserves to be largely grown. My only regret is that I did not grow more of it.

The Coming Exhibitions.

The shows will soon be with us and it will not be long before we shall see how others of the new ones of last year will turn out, but at present, so far as I have seen them growing, they are the finest looking lot ever known and novelties this year will have to climb high to get in line. The only regret caused by the present lovely weather is that it rushes the heavy exhibition flowers open too quickly and they are not coming as deep as they should. It would seem that many of the finest things will be over by the time the national society meets, November 10, unless the weather soon changes.

Market conditions seem brighter than for some years past, and flowers are selling readily at fairly good prices. One reason may be that there are not so many grown this year as last, some of the growers getting disgusted and not planting so many as formerly, or it may be that business conditions generally mean that more flowers are being sold, for all of which let us give thanks. A VEGETABLE FORCER'S VIEW.

[A paper by B. H. Thorne, of Wooster, O., read before the Greenhouse Vegetable Growers' Association at its convention at Ashtabula, O., October 12 to 14, 1909.]

Owing to the nature of the chrysanthemum, and the nature of the crops grown mostly by the florist, the chrysanthemum belongs more to the vegetable forcer than it does to the florist.

The chrysanthemum is planted in its permanent quarters any time from the first part of June until the first part of August and is out of the way in October and November, while the florist plants his roses, carnations, smilax, etc., from June to August and they occupy the beds until the next June. The chrysanthemum also makes an excellent crop to take the place of a part of the fall lettuce.

Although the chrysanthemum is easy to grow, it is insistent in its demands upon your attention and unless you are prepared to give it daily attention I would not advise the vegetable grower to try it. As there is plenty of literature on the chrysanthemum, I will try to treat the subject more from the standpoint of the vegetable greenhouse man.

Culture From Vegetable Forcer's Standpoint.

The chrysanthemum is started from cuttings taken from stock plants. The stock plants can be procured of a large number of florists and it would be well to consult them and the wholesalers in the market in which you expect to sell before deciding on varieties. Each variety comes in at a certain date in the fall, no matter when rooted or planted. The only exception to this is Golden Glow, which blooms a certain length of time after rooted.

Plant your stock plants in a cool place, where they will get a fair amount of sunlight. When the stock plants begin to grow, take cuttings as fast as they get three to four inches long and place them in a cool house. Shade the cuttings for a few days. When the cuttings have roots half an inch to an inch long, pot them up in 2½-inch pots, or plant in flats or even beds; after they have grown a few inches cuttings can be taken from the tops of these also.

Cuttings can be taken any time from December to July. Late winter and early spring is the best time to take them for cut flowers. Two or three flowers can be grown on these, while only one can be grown on May or June cuttings. The plants of the taller varieties from the early cuttings should be cut back in June or July or they will make too much stem. Rooted cuttings cost 2½ cents to 3 cents each, so it will save you money to buy stock plants and make your own cuttings. The plants must be kept growing and not be allowed to suffer from lack of water or plant food or the wood will harden and inferior flowers will result.

As soon as danger of frost is over the little plants can be put in 5-inch pots and plunged in soil outdoors until the beds are ready for planting. Cuttings rooted in June can be flowered in 5-inch pots if desired, one flower to the pot.

Tomatoes and cucumbers are rarely done before the last of July, but if the chrysanthemum plants are kept growing nicely they can be planted in the greenhouse the first week in August and still make long enough stems and first-class flowers.

Planting and Staking.

The beds in the greenhouse can be prepared as usual for the vegetable crops and then mulched with two or three inches of good manure. The chrysanthemum mums are planted in rows eight or ten inches apart and close enough together in the rows to give about three stems to the square foot. If single-stemmed plants are grown they can be planted seven inches each way, or even six with some of the dwarf ones. Leave out every sixth or seventh row to give a walk to work from.

They should be staked as soon as possible, either with a cane stake forced solidly into the ground, or with a wire stake tied to a wire running over the row about two and one-half feet above the ground.

From this time on they need almost daily attention. They should be tied frequently to the stakes to keep the stems straight, suckered both at the leaves and the ground the same as the tomato. The chrysanthemum revels in a bath and should be sprayed once or twice every sunny day, both on top of the foliage and underneath, with enough force to knock off any red spider that might be there. Spraying must cease as soon as the buds begin to show color, the atmosphere kept drier and the ventilators partly open and a little heat on at night when there is likely to be any condensation, for a little water on the flowers spoils them.

There are two kinds of buds, called the crown or summer bud, and the terminal buds. The crown bud is not much used except in the hands of experts, as it is hard to develop a good flower from it. The terminal buds are a bunch of buds that come in the fall and all but the best one should be pinched off as soon as possible. As soon as the buds appear the plants should be fed with liquid manure once or twice a week until they show color, and then it must stop. On well fertilized ground beds with a heavy manure mulch this feeding is not entirely necessary. Any grown in pots should be fed often at this time.

Marketing.

In packing the cut flowers for shipment they should be cut before the flower is fully open at the center, with stems two to three feet long, according to the variety. The stems should be placed in jars with several inches of cool water in them and placed in a cool room twelve to twenty-four hours before shipment. This treatment hardens them for shipment and future handling.

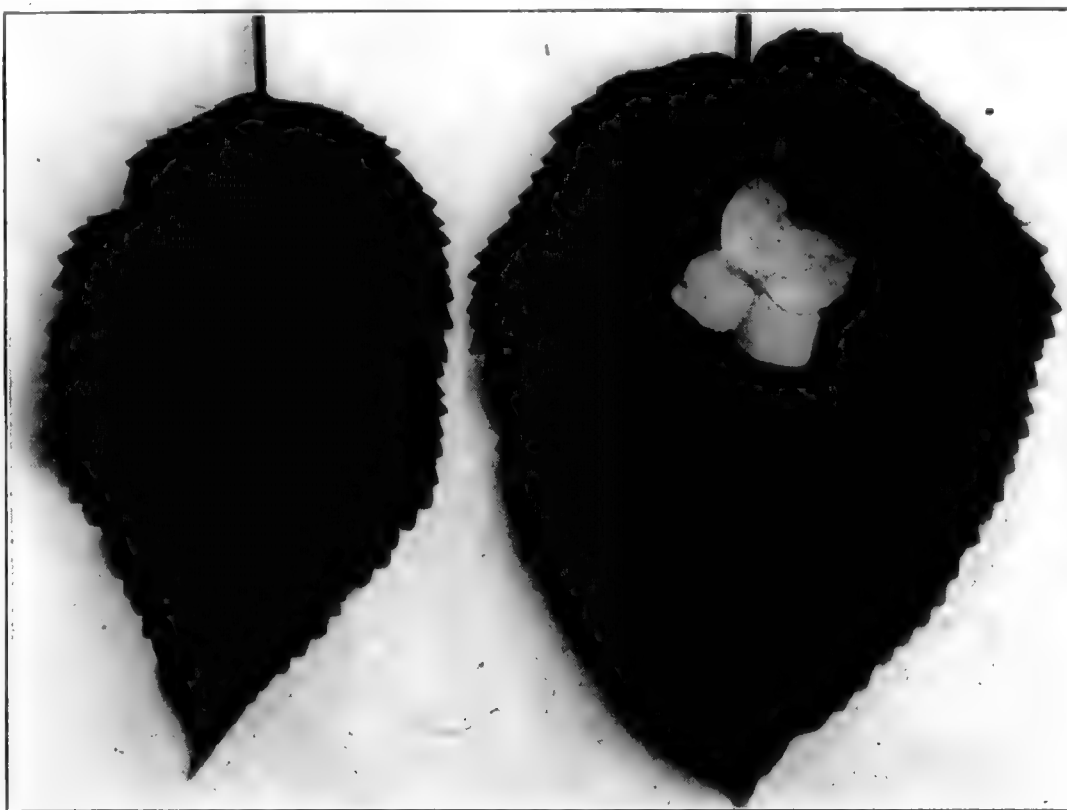

Use light wooden boxes about one foot wide, six inches deep and four feet long. Line them with paper with a layer of tissue paper on the inside. Place each flower in singly, with a roll of paper under the necks of the lower row. Each box holds one and one-half to two dozen blooms. These boxes are returned and can be used as long as the express companies are merciful to you.

Prices range from 75 cents to $4 a dozen according to quality and season, with about $1.50 as the average. Commission houses charge fifteen per cent and the express is the merchandise rate. If arrangements are made with some firm to handle the crop there is no reason for chrysanthemums not being a profitable crop except in case of an unusual glut.

Varieties.

As there are a large number of varieties I will only name a few that are easy to grow and make fine flowers.

In white are October Frost, Ivory, White Bonnaffon, Mrs. Buckbee, Mrs. Henry Robinson and Timothy Eaton. In pink are Glory of Pacific, Pink Ivory, Mrs. E. G. Hill, Dr. Enguehard, Maud

Hydrangea cinerea sterilis.

Hydrangea arborescens alba grandiflora.

Leaf and Floret of Two New Hardy Hydrangeas.

Dean and Mrs. Perrin. In yellow are Golden Glow, Robt. Halliday, Major Bonnaffon, Col. Appleton and Yellow Eaton.

As each variety comes in at a certain date, several varieties must be grown when a succession is wanted. If each variety, or those that bloom at the same time, are planted in the same bed the whole bed can be cleared off at the same time and planted to lettuce. By using a succession of varieties on different beds the lettuce can be brought on in succession.

Other Crops.

While I am on the subject of flowers I will mention a few others. Sweet peas seem to be in fashion now, and as they require the same temperature as lettuce a single row can be planted down the center of a north and south house and take up the room of only one lettuce row for the first crop of lettuce. They require about eight feet of head room. If a house is planted solid, leave two and one-half to three feet between rows. The sweet peas can be supported with either chicken netting or close woven wire fencing. Red spider seems to be the most serious enemy. Be sure to use the winter flowering varieties in straight colors.

Smilax could be grown in a winter cucumber house. This is planted in the summer seven or eight inches apart. Two and three crops can be taken from the same plants during the year. At the prices it has been quoted at the past year it should be quite profitable.

Carnations can be grown in the warmer lettuce houses and cucumbers or tomatoes planted in between in the spring. Ground beds give as fine or finer flowers than raised benches, but not quite as many during the winter.

TWO NEW HYDRANGEAS.

I am sending two photographs to show leaf and floret variation in the two new hardy hydrangeas. Some claim that there is only a leaf variation.

There is a wide and marked difference in the two varieties in many ways. The photographs give a characteristic leaf and floret reproduction that speak for themselves. The floret of Hydrangea arborescens alba grandiflora has four petals and is much larger in size than the florets of H. cinerea sterilis, which has but three-petaled florets.

The differentiation under greenhouse culture is much more marked than when grown outdoors. The arborescens blooms freely in pots, while the cinerea fails to produce a single flower under glass.

I predict for H. arborescens alba grandiflora a greater range of planting, and that it will be a far greater money-maker for those who handle it, than any shrub ever grown. A field of 50,000 plants of H. arborescens alba grandiflora planted in May from small pots made a uniform growth of two and a half to three feet in height.

One of the widely distributed fall circulars says: "We have the original variety, which originated near Piqua, O., and which is characterized by a comparatively broad leaf, of large size, the panicle of bloom also being larger than in the variety originating near Yellow Springs and Springfield, O., which has serrated foliage."

Lest this might give the impression to the trade that the plants grown and offered by the florists of Springfield, O., were of the cinerea variety, instead of the arborescens alba grandiflora type, I will say that with one exception all or the stock propagated from and produced in Springfield was originally purchased from the concern issuing the above quoted circular, the one exception being a nurseryman who procured his stock at Xenia, O. Springfield will produce this year not less than a quarter million to a half million plants of the true arborescens alba grandiflora type, and I might add that a blindfolded child should pick out the difference in the two varieties.

I would like to know why this plant was given the name of arborescens, as it in no particular answers the definition of that word. Was it simply arbitrarily so named?

These hydrangeas in no way conflict with H. paniculata grandiflora and should not therefore be held up in comparison to that variety, but to those who another stretch of lawn, is leading toward one of its most attractive features, the geyser, with its wide basin and surrounding balustrade. Nothing was more alive about the grounds than these full pansy beds, both as to quality of stock and arrangement of colors. One feels, as he stands admiring, "Somebody thought." GERTRUDE

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

The Favorable Weather.

Cultural notes will soon be a thing of the past, for nearly all the varieties, except the latest, are showing color and it is simply a matter of waiting for the final development of the flowers. What a glorious flower is Beatrice May! Nothing in white approaches it, and if we had some other foliage on the stem we would have the ideal mum. October Frost, Willowbrook and all the other early whites are simply lost alongside of it.

Yellow Miller, one of last year's new ones, has established a place for itself as a high-class early yellow and will be largely grown next year. The early bud is not of much use on this variety, but a crown late in August produces lovely flowers.

Gloria, also one of last year's novelties, will find a place. Though the color may be too light for some tastes, the flower is handsome and the stem and foliage excellent. The color is the Enchantress shade of pink and it would seem that, if Gloria will come as early next year, it deserves to be largely grown. My only regret is that I did not grow more of it.

A VEGETABLE FORCER'S VIEW.

[A paper by B. H. Thorne, of Wooster, O., read before the Greenhouse Vegetable Growers' Association at its convention at Ashtabula, O., October 12 to 14, 1909.]

Owing to the nature of the chrysanthemum, and the nature of the crops grown mostly by the florist, the chrysanthemum belongs more to the vegetable forcer than it does to the florist.

The chrysanthemum is planted in its permanent quarters any time from the first part of June until the first part of August and is cut of the way in October and November, while the florist plants his roses, carnations, smilax, etc., from June to August and they occupy the beds until the next June. The chrysanthemum also makes an excellent crop to take the place of a part of the fall lettuce.

Although the chrysanthemum is easy to grow, it is insistent in its demands upon your attention and unless you are prepared to give it daily attention I would not advise the vegetable grower to try it. As there is plenty of literature on the chrysanthemum, I will try to treat the subject more from the standpoint of the vegetable greenhouse man.

Culture From Vegetable Forcer's Standpoint.

The chrysanthemum is started from cuttings taken from stock plants. The stock plants can be procured of a large number of florists and it would be well to consult them and the wholesalers in the market in which you expect to sell before deciding on varieties. Each variety comes in at a certain date in the fall, no matter when rooted or planted. The only exception to this is Golden Glow, which blooms a certain length of time after rooted.

Plant your stock plants in a cool place where they will get a fair amount of sunlight. When the stock plants begin to grow, take cuttings as fast as they get three to four inches long and place them in a cool house. Shade the cuttings for a few days. When the cuttings have roots half an inch to an inch long, put them up in 2 1/4-inch pots, or plant in flats or even beds; after they have grown a few inches cuttings can be taken from the tops of these also.

Cuttings can be taken any time from December to July. Late winter and spring is the best time to take the cut flowers. Two or three flowers can be grown on these, while only one can be grown on May or June cuttings. The plants of the taller varieties from early cuttings should be cut back in June or July or they will make too much wood. Rooted cuttings cost 2 1/2 cents to 3 cents each, so it will save you money to buy plants and make your own cuttings. Plants must be kept growing and not allowed to suffer from lack of water, plant food or the wood will harden and inferior flowers will result.

As soon as danger of frost is over, little plants can be put in 5-inch pots and plunged in soil outdoors until the beds are ready for planting. Cuttings rooted in June can be flowered in pots if desired, one flower to the pot.

Tomatoes and cucumbers are usually done before the last of July, but if chrysanthemum plants are kept growing nicely they can be planted in the greenhouse the first week in August and make long enough stems and first flowers.

Planting and Staking.

The beds in the greenhouse can be prepared as usual for the vegetable crops and then mulched with two or three inches of good manure. The chrysanthemum planted in rows eight or ten feet apart and close enough together in the row to give about three stems to the foot. If single-stemmed plants are used they can be planted seven feet apart, or even six with some dwarf ones. Leave out every sixth plant in the row to give a walk to work.

Plants should be staked as soon as possible with a cane stake forced into the ground, or with a wire run to a wire running over the row and one-half feet above the plants.

At this time on they need almost no attention. They should be tied freely to the stakes to keep the stems from suckering both at the leaves and at the same as the tomato. The cinerea revels in a bath and should be sprayed once or twice every day, both on top of the foliage and underneath, with enough force to knock off any red spider that might be there. Spraying must cease as soon as the plants begin to show color, the atmosphere kept drier and the ventilators kept open and a little heat on at night. There is likely to be any condensation or a little water on the flowers should be removed.

There are two kinds of buds, called the crown or summer bud, and the terminal buds. The crown bud is not much used except in the hands of experts, as it is supposed to develop a good flower from it. The terminal buds are a bunch of buds that come in the fall and all but the best one should be pinched off as soon as possible. As soon as the buds appear the plants should be fed with liquid manure once or twice a week until they show color, and then it must stop. On well fertilized ground beds with a heavy manure mulch this feeding is not entirely necessary. Any grown in pots should be fed at this time.

Marketing.

In packing the cut flowers for shipment they should be cut before the flowers are fully open at the center, with stems about three feet long, according to the variety. The stems should be placed in buckets with several inches of cool water in them and placed in a cool room twelve to twenty-four hours before shipment. This treatment hardens them for shipment and improves their appearance.

Light wooden boxes about one foot square, six inches deep and four feet long, lined with paper with a layer of paper on the inside. Place each plant singly, with a roll of paper around the necks of the lower row. Each box holds one and one-half to two dozen plants. These boxes are returned and should be used as long as the express company are merciful to you.

Prices range from 75 cents to $4 a dozen according to quality and season, about $1.50 as the average. Commissions charge fifteen per cent and express is the merchandise rate. If shipments are made with some firm handle the crop there is no reason for the flowers not being a profitable crop except in case of an unusual glut.

themselves. The floret of Hydrangea arborescens alba grandiflora has four petals and is much larger in size than the florets of H. cinerea sterilis, which has but three-petaled florets.

The differentiation under greenhouse culture is much more marked than when grown outdoors. The arborescens blooms freely in pots, while the cinerea fails to produce a single flower under glass.

I predict for H. arborescens alba grandiflora a greater range of planting, and that it will be a far greater money-maker for those who handle it, than any shrub ever grown. A field of 50,000 plants of H. arborescens alba grandiflora planted in May from small pots made a uniform growth of two and a half to three feet in height.

One of the widely distributed fall circulars says: "We have the original variety, which originated near Piqua, O., and which is characterized by a comparatively broad leaf, of large size, the panicle of bloom also being larger than in the variety originating near Yellow Springs and Springfield, O., which has serrated foliage."

Lest this might give the impression to the trade that the plants grown and offered by the florists of Springfield, O., were of the cinerea variety, instead of the arborescens alba grandiflora type, I will say that with one exception all of the stock propagated from and produced in Springfield was originally purchased from the concern issuing the above quoted circular, the one exception being a nurseryman who procured his stock at Xenia, O. Springfield will produce this year not less than a quarter million to a half million plants of the true arborescens alba grandiflora type, and I might add that a blindfolded child should pick out the difference in the two varieties.

I would like to know why this plant was given the name of arborescens, as it in no particular answers the definition of that word. Was it simply arbitrarily so named?

These hydrangeas in no way conflict with H. paniculata grandiflora and should not therefore be held up in comparison to that variety, but to those who insist on the comparison as to merits paniculata grandiflora will suffer every time—it unquestionably is superior to that variety in many particulars.

The United States Nursery Co., of Rich, Miss., made a planting of it last fall, and when in bloom last May it was a sight never to be forgotten. Thus it shows that it grows and blooms freely in the warmer climate.

I might add that immense stocks of this hydrangea are being distributed to the homes of this country without the aid of the nurserymen, who for some reason have fought shy of this shrub, buying it in dribs and pushing the sale of much less meritorious shrubs. The growing center of this shrub is Springfield, and I have as yet to find any surplus stocks unsold.

SOIL FOR ROSES.

I am sending you three rose plants with soil for examination. We have tried for years to grow first-class roses and have bought plants from the best rose growers in the country and still find our plants do not give results. We do not know whether it is the soil or the water, or the care we give them, but we have excellent success with carnations, mums and other varieties of plants, and though we have given our roses the very best of attention and care, they do not send up the shoots or have the color that they should at their best. I am coming to you to find out, if possible, wherein lies the fault. These plants were benched June 20.

My grower has been here for fifteen years and says they have always had the same trouble, so that I am sure it must be something outside of the care we give them. Will you kindly look into these samples and give me your best judgment in this matter?

A. P. A.

After a careful examination of the soil I am forced to the conclusion that the trouble arises from that. It is too close in substance and when wet it is as plastic as putty. It is also deficient in lime and possesses few of the qualities required in rose soil. This would account for the puny growth and also for the poor texture of the foliage.

Try to get a loamy soil, with a mixture of clay in it, and take as much as possible of the top spit, which contains the fibrous roots of the pasture. Mix this with cow manure in the proportion of one of manure to four of soil and add a 5-inch potful of bone meal to each cubic yard of compost at time of planting.

In the meantime stir up the surface of the soil to the depth of one inch, putting on a sprinkling of bone meal before stirring. Keep the temperature during daytime minimum 60 degrees, maximum 80 degrees, if possible. Night temperature, 56 to 58 degrees. Syringe twice a day during bright weather and do not attempt to feed until the plants begin to show vigor. I am, however, confident that until you change your soil you will meet with disappointment.

Of course there may also be some defect in house construction, such as in ventilation, heating, etc., which only a man on the ground could detect.

RIBES.

HARDY ROSES.

Will you please give me a list of roses that would do for outside planting, without any protection, in the vicinity of Buffalo, N. Y.?

D. R.

The following dozen hybrid perpetual roses are reliable. They should have some earth drawn up to them for protection before the ground freezes. None of even the hybrid perpetual roses can be classed as absolutely hardy in the northern states: General Jacqueminot, Mme. Gabriel Luizet, Mrs. John Laing, Frau Karl Druschki, Ulrich Brunner, Baron de Bonstettin, Captain Hayward, Paul Neyron, Prince Camille de Rohan, John Hopper, Duke of Edinburgh and Mme. Victor Verdier.

Among other useful roses, Mme. Planter (Bourbon) is perfectly hardy, as are Harrison's Yellow, Persian Yellow, Austrian Copper and the various forms of rugosa, also all the species roses, such as setigera, Wichuraiana, multiflora, rubiginosa (sweetbrier), lucida, nitida and blanda. All the hybrid sweetbriers will be hardy. The everblooming hybrid teas are not fully hardy, but if you lift and bury them in the soil just before the ground freezes up they will come through all right.

Among reliable climbing roses are: Crimson Rambler, Dorothy Perkins, Tausendschon, Lady Gay, Dawson, Hiawatha, Farquhar, Baltimore Belle, Seven Sisters and Queen of the Prairie. Hermosa and Clothilde Soupert will be found excellent for massing. They should have some protection, however, in winter.

HIBISCUS.

How long should hibiscus be left without dividing?

G. H. P.

Hardy varieties of hibiscus, such as militaris and Moscheutos, should stand a good number of years without dividing. The last half of September and first half of October is a good time to do the work. These varieties are increased easily from seeds, and make good flowering plants within a year.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Sweet Peas.

It will be necessary to look carefully after the supports for the earlier sweet pea sowings. A few days' neglect may mean a serious loss to the crop. Visiting a large commercial establishment within the last few days, we noticed that the earliest sweet peas had growths a foot in length, that a pound of seed had been used where an ounce would have amply sufficed and that rows, instead of being four to five feet apart, were not over twelve inches apart. This happened, we were informed, because carnation planting and other more important duties had to be attended to, but that the peas would be got around to shortly. Any plants, if worth growing at all, are surely worth growing well. It is quality which always counts with sweet peas, as with everything else. We mention this as a not exceptional instance of how sweet peas should not be grown.

Supports should be in position by the time the vines are two or three inches high and before they start to throw out tendrils. If they are allowed to become tangled and twisted, the shoots are in many cases spoiled and one's temper seriously ruffled at the same time. If the seed has been thickly sown, do not be afraid to thin. Far better have seedlings four to six inches apart than crowded together. The finest sweet peas we ever saw were grown in the open air and a foot apart; almost equally good in pot ones were six inches apart. The sooner they are left, the fewer sprays will be necessary and the stems will be better.

As the early mums pass out of season, it is a good plan to use at least part of the space they have occupied for sweet peas. By making a sowing now, a nice crop of flowers early in the new year will be assured. There are no better varieties than Watchung, Florence Dancer and Mont Blanc for whites, and Christmas Pink, pink and white, for this sowing. The lavender and other shades take a little longer to come in season. On no account coddle the peas. They must have rich soil, abundant sunlight and air and a night temperature not exceeding 50 degrees. It is a big mistake to grow peas unless they can be allowed ample head room. This should never be less than six feet, and if more, all the better.

Berried Plants.

At both Thanksgiving and Christmas, but especially at the latter holiday, there is a good call for berried plants. Of these one of the best sellers is the easily grown Christmas pepper. As an individual plant it is not specially attractive, but in boxes or pans, with some low green plants around their base, they make up and sell well. They do not sell well unless the fruits are fairly well ripened and the foliage has been retained. A sunny bench in a temperature of 50 to 60 degrees will suit them. As the fruit ripens, move them into cooler quarters. A low temperature is liable to cause the foliage to fall, these being less hardy than the Jerusalem cherries (Solanum Capsicastrum).

The solanums should now have some of their berries ripening. Those lifted from the open ground will be much more heavily berried than the pot-grown ones. They do not require a warm house; in fact, they must be kept quite cool to hold them in good shape for Christmas. Anything short of freezing will suffice; even a few degrees of frost will not hurt them. They must have an abundant water supply, as they dry out rapidly.

Ardisia crenulata is an extremely good Christmas plant. It is of slow growth and cannot be sold at any such low price as peppers or Jerusalem cherries, but many customers prefer the ardisias, owing to their being less common, having evergreen foliage and carrying their fruit for so many months. They are unsalable if the fruit is not well colored. Let the plants have a temperature of 60 degrees and full sun. Spray at least once a day to keep them clean, and use liquid manure occasionally. They will stand more heat than the other berried plants, but can be held quite cool after the fruit is ripe.

Poinsettias.

While we have so far had an exceptionally warm and favorable fall, practically immune from frost, these conditions cannot continue much longer. With the arrival of cold, sunless and damp weather, any poinsettias still remaining outdoors or in coldframes should be placed where they can get some fire heat. A warm house is not necessary; 50 to 55 degrees at night will keep the plants growing nicely and will not draw them up, as will a temperature 10 degrees higher. Careful watering will retain the foliage down to the surface of the pots and pans. Poinsettias with leaves to their bracts will sell much better than bare-stemmed ones with a variety of green-foliated plants tucked among them to cover their nakedness.

Plants being grown in beds or benches for cutting are now growing fast. As the weather permits, stake up the strongest stems. It is important that these be kept straight. The bracts will begin to fall in November, after which time and until they are developed warmer treatment is desirable. Avoid heavy fumigation where poinsettias are being grown, as a heavy loss of leaves is likely to occur.

Dahlias.

Frosts have already cut the dahlias down in many places, and inquiries as to how to dig and where to store them reach us by every mail. There is no immediate hurry about cutting the stems down as soon as they are frozen. It is, in fact, better to delay so doing for a few days.

Cattleya Citrina, the Tulip Orchid.

Killing frosts are usually followed by spells of warm, sunny weather, which will dry up the frozen stems, and there will be less bleeding if a few days elapse before cutting the stems down to within six or eight inches of the soil.

Lifting should be done on a clear, sunny day, so that the tubers can be thoroughly dried before being placed in the cellar or shed where they are to be wintered. Be careful not to cut or break the tubers in digging. A careless workman will soon spoil a lot of dahlias. For winter quarters a dry cellar, where there is little or no fire heat and where potatoes will keep well, should be all right for dahlias. Be sure, after lifting, to tie the labels securely to the stems of the plants. Some growers pack their roots in sawdust or dry sand and they keep well treated thus.

Erica Melanthera.

The flower buds are now quite prominent on the Erica melanthera. No other variety blooms over so long a period, it being possible to secure blooming plants from Thanksgiving until Easter, or even later. A batch placed in a light house now, and kept at 45 to 50 degrees at night, will come along for either Thanksgiving or Christmas. If the plants are in flower at the earlier date and do not sell, they will easily keep in fine condition for Christmas in a cool house. Be always sure that ericas do not suffer from dryness at the root. Hard-wooded plants are seriously injured and often killed by a single severe drying out.

CATTLEYA CITRINA.

Cattleya citrina is totally unlike any others of the genus. The pseudo-bulbs are comparatively small, oval in shape and silvery in appearance, usually carrying two to four leaves each. The flowers are lemon yellow in color, of a delicious vanilla-like odor and are usually produced one or two on a stem from the new pseudo-bulbs. On rare occasions three flowers are borne. The flowers are quite stout and waxy.

This cattleya succeeds best on a block of wood on which a little fern fiber and sphagnum are tied, and delights in a cool house where it can get abundant ventilation. The best batch I have seen were grown quite near the roof ventilators in an odontoglossum house, but the plant here pictured was grown in a cattleya house, suspended from the roof. The flowering season is June to August. Travelers in Mexico frequently purchase baskets of this cattleya, which are sold by the natives cheaply. The plant was first introduced from Mexico in 1838.

SPINDLING FERNS.

After reading the notes on ferns in the last number of the REVIEW, we make bold to inquire still further about ferns. What causes long fronds? We see on the market Whitmani and Piersoni ferns not more than eight to ten inches tall and quite bushy. We use a loose soil, with a mixture of sand and leaf-mold and a portion of well rotted manure. We also have the glass well shaded with whitewash, in order, as we think, to prevent the ferns having too pale a color. They seem to do well and are of a rich green color, but have only four or five long fronds instead of the desired eight or ten short fronds. Where is the difficulty? Should they have a heavier soil or some other fertilizer? We should be very grateful for a few pointers along these lines. Thanks for information already gained through the REVIEW.

J. S. & S.

The trouble with these ferns is undoubtedly too much shade, and also too light a soil. No shading whatever is needed on the glass at this season of the year, and even during the summer much better plants of the various forms of the Boston fern are grown with only a very light shade. A good loam soil, such as would answer for carnations or chrysanthemums, will give much better results than the leaf-mold mixture in which they are now growing, the latter tending to produce long fronds with weak stems and a generally loose habit.

ILLINOIS STATE FAIR.

Display of Made-up Work.

The display of made-up work at the Illinois State Fair, staged Wednesday, October 6, far exceeded anything heretofore shown by the retail florists of the state. The center of the large dome building was filled with the baskets, bouquets and designs, large and handsome pieces, and almost all of it work that in years gone by would easily have taken first premium, but this year many fine pieces were outside the money, although there were three prizes in each class. Two Chicago retailers entered, the Schiller store in six classes, every entry taking a first prize. The table decorations were a special feature, the first premium being $50. The table of George M. Brinkerhoff, done in orchids, valley and adiantum, was simple and dainty, thoroughly deserving of the recognition it received.

It is gratifying that the display proved one of the most attractive features of the fair, many thousands of persons crowding about the section. The awards were as follows:

Basket of cut flowers, Schiller Estate, Chicago, first; Wirth & Gaupp, Springfield, second; A. C. Brown, Springfield, third.

Bouquet of roses, A. Lange, Chicago, first; George A. Kuhl, Pekin, Ill., second; Wirth & Gaupp, third.

Bouquet of mixed flowers, Wirth & Gaupp, first; A. Lange, second; A. C. Brown, third.

Flat bouquet or spray of roses, Schiller Estate, first; George A. Kuhl, second; Wirth & Gaupp, third.

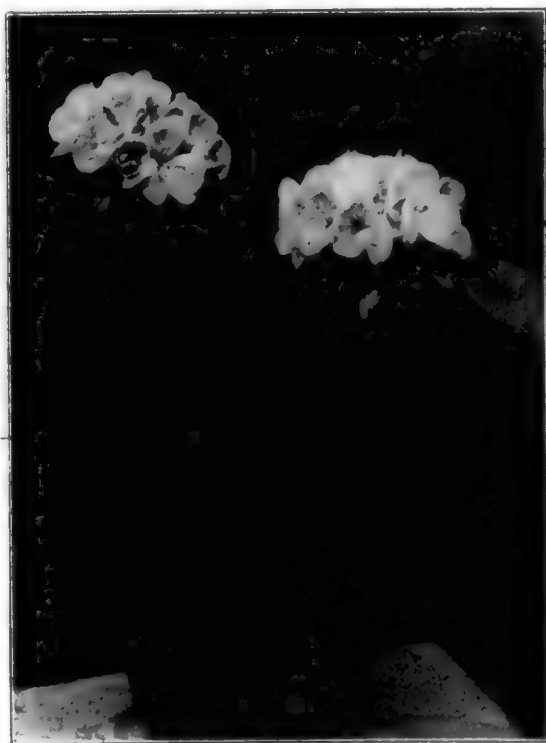

Flat bouquet or spray of carnations, Schiller Estate, first; George M. Brinkerhoff, Springfield, Ill., second; Wirth & Gaupp, third.

Bride's bouquet, Schiller Estate, first; A. Lange, second; George A. Kuhl, third.

Corsage bouquet, George A. Kuhl, first; A. Lange, second; George M. Brinkerhoff, third.

Dinner table arrangements, George M. Brinkerhoff, first; George A. Kuhl, second; A. Lange, third.

Standing cross, Schiller Estate, first;

Geranium Dr. Cothran.

George M. Brinkerhoff, second; A. Lange, third.

Wreath on easel, George A. Kuhl, first; A. Lange, second; George M. Brinkerhoff, third.

Best floral arrangement, set piece, Schiller Estate, first; George A. Kuhl, second; Wirth & Gaupp, third.

A NEW GERANIUM.

The new geranium, Dr. Lincoln Cothran, originated at the establishment of Richard Diener, at Colma, Cal. It is a cross between Beaute Poitevine and Queen Olga. The color is soft pink, with white center. The florets are large, as big as a silver dollar, and under California conditions sometimes much larger, two and one-half to two and three-quarter ters inches across. The trusses also are large and carried well above the foliage. The plant is of low, branching habit. Mr. Diener says the color does not fade and that the keeping quality is unique. This geranium has been on exhibition before the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society at San Francisco and has attracted a great deal of attention, for geraniums are just now coming much into favor along the coast.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

The Chrysanthemum Society of America will hold its annual exhibition at the American Institute, 19 West Forty-fourth street, New York city, November 10 to 12. In addition to the regular list of premiums a considerable number of special prizes have been offered, among them the following:

New York Florists' Club trophy, for best six blooms seedling or variety never before exhibited in this country, to be judged under both the exhibition and commercial scale, the highest total number of points under both scales to decide the winner, silver medal and bronze medal.

Chrysanthemum Society of America prize, for ten blooms of any one variety, silver cup.

H. W. Buckbee prize, twelve blooms, twelve varieties, American seedling, silver cup.

J. C. Vaughan prize, for private gardeners only, specimen bush plant, silver cup.

Stumpp & Walter prize, for ten blooms Miriam Hankey, silver cup.

W. Wells & Co. prize, for six blooms Pockett's Crimson, gold, silver and bronze medals.

W. Wells & Co. prize, twelve sprays assorted single varieties, silver and bronze medals.

F. R. Pierson Co. prize for private gardeners only, twelve blooms in four varieties, 24-inch stems, $10.

Peter Henderson & Co. prize, for twelve vases Ostrich Plume chrysanthemum, twelve varieties, three blooms to a vase, $10 and $5.

Elmer D. Smith & Co. prize, twelve vases anemone varieties, one variety to a vase, six of which are to be introductions of 1909, $15 and $10.

Charles H. Totty prize, six blooms any introduction of 1909, $15 and $10.

Skidelsky & Irwin Co. prize, twelve sprays pompons, twelve varieties, $1.

Foley Mfg. Co. prize, best undisseeded seedling, $10.

Traendly & Schenck prize, twelve blooms Appleton, $6 and $4.

William Duckham prize, twelve blooms, twelve varieties, 12-inch stems, $10 and $5.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Business has been good. There have been quite a number of large funerals and every florist has had orders for these. Stock, although quite plentiful, has been kept well cleaned up. American Beauties were used in profusion at some of the funerals, also many Richmond roses, in casket covers, etc. Carnations are scarce but they are looking fine in the greenhouses. There are few chrysanthemums in this market and the demand is slow, for the prices are high. Pink and red dahlias are not plentiful but the sales are good. Green is plentiful. Large quantities of wild smilax were used in decorating the electric light poles on our principal business streets this week, it being the week for our fall festivities. The weather was excellent and our city was crowded with visitors.

Missouri Valley Fair.

The Fair and Exposition under the auspices of the Missouri Valley Agricultural and Horticultural Society was held in Electric park October 2 to 10. This park is in the southern part of the city and was an appropriate place to hold a fair. The grounds and buildings were decorated in profusion with corn, sugar cane and various kinds of grain and grasses. This gave the appearance of an old-fashioned fair-grounds. The large pavilion was made into a horticultural and agricultural hall. Here all kinds of fine specimens of fruits, grains and vegetables were displayed in profusion. The fruits from Iowa were worth going many miles to see. In this same hall the decorative plants were displayed and made a fine show.

For the best display of decorative plants Samuel Murray received first prize, W. L. Rock second prize, Ed Humfeld third, The Rosery fourth and W. J. Barnes fifth.

Best display of crotons, W. L. Rock first, W. J. Barnes second.

Best group of six araucarias, Ed Humfeld first, W. J. Barnes second, W. L. Rock third.

Best group of six pandanus, W. L. Rock first, W. J. Barnes second.

Best group of six kentias, The Rosery first, W. L. Rock second, W. J. Barnes third.

Best group of six Whitman ferns, W. J. Barnes first, Samuel Murray second.

Best group of six Boston ferns, W. L. Rock first, The Rosery second, W. J. Barnes third.

Group of six ferns any other variety, Samuel Murray first, The Rosery second, W. L. Rock third.

Best pair of standard bay trees, W. L. Rock first.

Special new ferns, The Rosery first.

Best display of floral designs, any arrangement, Samuel Murray first, Ed Humfeld second, W. L. Rock third.

Sam Murray's exhibits were worthy of special mention, both plants and designs. The latter were the work of Miss Hayden and were as high class a lot of designs as ever have been shown here. There is nothing that Mr. Murray does that is not done well.

The automobile parade called out nothing but artificial flowers. This week we have the stock show and horse show at the stock yards.

Various Notes.

R. S. Brown is preparing for winter. He bought fifty gallons of Mastica and is going over his houses, filling every crack with it. Mr. Brown is busy, as usual, and is looking quite well since his illness.

A. F. Barbee is fixing to keep warm this winter. He has installed a new steam boiler and by the way his place looks like he is expecting a good trade.

H. Heusen, the lettuce man, has been busy planting his range of houses. He has it about half planted and lettuce can be seen in all stages of growth.

The Rock Flower Co. is cutting some fine roses. The new range of seven houses 27x260, all in roses, surely is looking fine. The new smokestack, which is 25 feet tall, is made of cement and shows up fine and can be seen at a long distance.

Freudenthal is having fine business. The only trouble he has is to keep stock enough on hand to meet the demand. He had quite a lot of funeral work last week.

Humfeld, from Clay Center, Kas., was a visitor last week.

MERELY A SUGGESTION.

A reader of the REVIEW sends the advertisement of the Eastern Nurseries herewith reproduced, with the comment that "it merely is a suggestion for other readers, but one which if generally employed would largely increase the autumn business in hardy plants."

One of the special advantages with hardy stock is the fact that planting can be done in the autumn, as well as in the spring; the florist has two chances each year to do business, as against one chance with the ordinary bedding plants. Every florist who does garden work in the spring should equip himself to do garden work in the autumn, when the season is longer and the pressure less great. Pretty nearly everyone has as much as he can do in spring. The business in autumn can be increased much more easily than the spring trade can be built up.

WITTBOLD'S EDGEBROOK PLACE.

For the last three or four years the George Wittbold Co., Chicago, has been engaged in building up an establishment at Edgebrook, just outside the city, where it could produce the stock needed, primarily, for its landscape work, and where also cut flowers and decorative plants could be produced in greater quantity and more cheaply than can be done at the range of glass in the city, where every foot of ground has long since been occupied and there was no room for expansion. The Edgebrook establishment represents to the Wittbold Co. an investment of more than $100,000. The accompanying illustration is from a photograph taken with a revolving camera, and shows the greenhouse establishment and also a portion of the nursery grounds. The nursery is just beginning its period of greatest usefulness, for it has taken time to stock it. The Wittbold Co. does a large amount of garden work in Chicago and vicinity and it now has on this Edgebrook place practically everything that is required for this purpose. The aim has been to eventually work into the wholesale end of the trade in herbaceous stock and shrubs, but the local demand has thus far exceeded the supply of stock, so that little has yet been done in the wholesale way. This, however, is expected to come later. The Edgebrook plant is in charge of Otto Wittbold, who makes his home on the nursery.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Business opened this week with evident lethargy. The handsome spurt of the last ten days has lost its force; the market is full of roses, carnations and chrysanthemums, while the warm weather and complete lack of frost to date have prolonged the stay of gladioli, dahlias and asters. The supply of Beauties is now abundant, and the few selected ones maintain their price encouragingly, but short-stemmed roses of all kinds are too numerous to meet with satisfactory sale. Quality improves daily, however, and as is always the case in New York, the best of everything finds a ready market. My Maryland and Killarney vie with each other in popularity. These, with Richmond, seem to be assured of continued appreciation.

There are few new varieties of carnations and no specialties in quantity this fall. But the favorites of last season are again at the front, and Prosperity, White Perfection, Winsor, Alma Ward and all the old standbys have asserted their sway and are in wide demand. Orchids are here in thousands; the sources of supply are many and few of the leading wholesalers are without a share of them. Cattleyas, oncidiums, Vanda carulea, Dendrobium formosum and D. Phalaenopsis were never finer in quality and are widely used. Prices having receded, retail windows are gorgeous with combinations of orchids and chrysanthemums. Lilies advanced last week and have held their values well. The stock of chrysanthemums increases in quantity every day. In another week the market will be heavily loaded, and a tremendous flood of bloom is certain until December.

The hot weather worked the inevitable slump in violets. The street is already

SPINDLING FERNS.

After reading the notes on ferns in the last number of the REVIEW, we make bold to inquire still further about ferns. What causes long fronds? We see on the market Whitmani and Pieroni ferns not more than eight to ten inches tall and quite bushy. We use a loose soil, with a mixture of sand and leaf-mold and a portion of well rotted manure. We also have the glass well shaded with whitewash, in order, as we think, to prevent the ferns having too pale a color. They seem to do well and are of a rich green color, but have only four or five long fronds instead of the desired eight or ten short fronds. Where is the difficulty? Should they have a heavier soil or some other fertilizer? We should be very grateful for a few pointers along these lines. Thanks for information already gained through the REVIEW.

J. S. & S.

The trouble with these ferns is undoubtedly too much shade, and also too light a soil. No shading whatever is needed on the glass at this season of the year, and even during the summer much better plants of the various forms of the Boston fern are grown with only a very light shade. A good loam soil, such as would answer for carnations or chrysanthemums, will give much better results than the leaf-mold mixture in which they are now growing, the latter tending to produce long fronds with weak stems and a generally loose habit.

ILLINOIS STATE FAIR.

Display of Made-up Work.

The display of made-up work at the Illinois State Fair, staged Wednesday, October 6, far exceeded anything heretofore shown by the retail florists of the state. The center of the large dome building was filled with the baskets, bouquets and designs, large and handsome pieces, and almost all of it work that in years gone by would easily have taken first premium, but this year many fine pieces were outside the money, although there were three prizes in each class. Two Chicago retailers entered, the Schiller store in six classes, every entry taking a first prize. The table decorations were a special feature, the first premium being $50. The table of George M. Brinkerhoff, done in orchids, valley and adiantum, was simple and dainty, thoroughly deserving of the recognition it received.

It is gratifying that the display proved one of the most attractive features of the fair, many thousands of persons crowding about the section. The awards were as follows:

Basket of cut flowers, Schiller Estate, Chicago, first; Wirth & Gaupp, Springfield, second; A. C. Brown, Springfield, third.

Bouquet of roses, A. Lange, Chicago, first; George A. Kuhl, Pekin, Ill., second; Wirth & Gaupp, third.

Bouquet of mixed flowers, Wirth & Gaupp, first; A. Lange, second; A. C. Brown, third.

Flat bouquet or spray of roses, Schiller Estate, first; George A. Kuhl, second; Wirth & Gaupp, third.

Flat bouquet or spray of carnations, Schiller Estate, first; George M. Brinkerhoff, Springfield, Ill., second; Wirth & Gaupp, third.

Bride's bouquet, Schiller Estate, first; A. Lange, second; George A. Kuhl, third.

Corsage bouquet, George A. Kuhl, first; A. Lange, second; George M. Brinkerhoff, third.

Dinner table arrangements, George M. Brinkerhoff, first; George A. Kuhl, second; A. Lange, third.

Standing cross, Schiller Estate, first;

Geranium Dr. Cothran.

Wreath on easel, George A. Kuhl, first; A. Lange, second; George M. Brinkerhoff, third.

Best floral arrangement, set piece, Schiller Estate, first; George A. Kuhl, second; Wirth & Gaupp, third.

A NEW GERANIUM.

The new geranium, Dr. Lincoln Cothran, originated at the establishment of Richard Diener, at Colma, Cal. It is a cross between Beaute Poitevine and Queen Olga. The color is soft pink, with white center. The florets are large, as big as a silver dollar, and under California conditions sometimes much larger, two and one-half to two and three-quarters inches across. The trusses are large and carried well above the foliage. The plant is of low, branching habit. Mr. Diener says the color does not fade and that the keeping quality is unique. This geranium has been on exhibition before the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society at San Francisco and attracted a great deal of attention for geraniums are just now coming into favor along the coast.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

The Chrysanthemum Society of America will hold its annual exhibition at the American Institute, 19 West Forty-fourth street, New York city, November 9 to 12. In addition to the regular list of premiums a considerable number of special prizes have been offered, among them the following:

New York Florists' Club trophy, for six blooms seedling or variety never before exhibited in this country, to be judged under both the exhibition and commercial scales, the highest total number of points under both scales to decide the winner, silver medal and bronze medal.

Chrysanthemum Society of America prize for ten blooms of any one variety, silver cup.

H. W. Buckbee prize, twelve blooms, twelve varieties, American seedling, silver cup.

J. C. Vaughan prize, for private gardeners only, specimen bush plant, silver cup.

Stumpp & Walter prize, for ten blooms Miriam Hankey, silver cup.

W. Wells & Co. prize, for six blooms Peckett's Crimson, gold, silver and bronze medals.

W. Wells & Co. prize, twelve sprays assorted single varieties, silver and bronze medals.

F. R. Pierson Co. prize for private gardeners only, twelve blooms in four varieties, 21-inch stems, $10.

Peter Henderson & Co. prize, for twelve vases Ostrich Plume chrysanthemum, twelve varieties, three blooms to a vase, $10 and $5.

Elmer D. Smith & Co. prize, twelve vases anemone varieties, one variety to a vase, six of which are to be introductions of 1900, $15 and $10.

Charles H. Totty prize, six blooms any introduction of 1900, $15 and $10.

Skidelsky & Irwin Co. prize, twelve rays pompons, twelve varieties, $1.

Foley Mfg. Co. prize, best undissected seedling, $10.

Traendly & Schenck prize, twelve blooms Appleton, $6 and $4.

William Duckham prize, twelve blooms, twelve varieties, 12-inch stems, $10 and $5.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Business has been good. There have been quite a number of large funerals and every florist has had orders for flowers. Stock, although quite plentiful, has been kept well cleaned up. American Beauties were used in profusion at some of the funerals, also many Richmond roses, casket covers, etc. Carnations are scarce but they are looking fine in the greenhouses. There are few chrysanthemums in this market and the demand is high for the prices are high. Pink and dahlias are not plentiful but the sale is good. Green is plentiful. Large quantities of wild smilax were used in decorating the electric light poles on our principal business streets this week, it was the week for our fall festivities. The weather was excellent and our city crowded with visitors.

Missouri Valley Fair.

The Fair and Exposition under the auspices of the Missouri Valley Agricultural and Horticultural Society was in Electric park October 2 to 10. The park is in the southern part of the city and was an appropriate place to hold the fair. The grounds and buildings were decorated in profusion with corn, sorghum and various kinds of grain and grasses. This gave the appearance of old-fashioned fair-grounds. The large pavilion was made into a horticultural Results bring advertising.

THE REVIEW brings results.

SKIMMIA JAPONICA is a berried plant which deserves more attention as a hard-wooded Christmas subject. Although of slow growth, it possesses great durability.

SOME people, who are in a position to know, say that the sale for palms is not what it was a few years ago; that the retailers' need for kentias of the medium and large sizes is for use in rented decorations rather than for sale to his customers. Be that as it may, there is no surplus of good stock of fair size; the big plants are hard to find.

UNSOLICITED.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time.

Inclosed find $1 to pay my subscription for another year. The Review is a good paper, full of good advertising and with plenty of practical advice relative to growing plants. I have had many times its cost from each year's subscription. I am only a small country florist, but I find the paper a welcome visitor.—A. H. Faxon, Southbridge, Mass., October 5, 1909.

We could not get along without the Review; our adv. in it brings us orders from all parts of the country.—Addams, Morgan & Co., Paxton, Ill., October 4, 1909.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Thomas Franks.

Mrs. Thomas Franks, wife of the well-known florist at Champaign, Ill., died October 8, the funeral being held Monday, October 11. Mr. Franks and a son, George, who is well known in the trade throughout Illinois, survive and have the sympathy of the trade.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

Section C of the Premium List.

A few words regarding the new section (Section C) added to our premium list may not be out of place, inasmuch as it may not be altogether clear to all of the REVIEW's readers.

In section B there are separate classes for each of the leading varieties, so that no variety is obliged to compete with other varieties. None of the new-comers was included in this list, for obvious reasons, and if one of them was allowed to compete, it had to compete in the classes provided for any variety in its color, not named in the list. This put the new varieties in exactly the position which was considered unjust to the older standbys.

Now, there is no denying the fact that the new varieties are the most interesting part of the whole exhibition, and they should be encouraged in every way possible. The only relief from the above conditions was for the disseminator to offer a special prize for his variety, which was frequently done, though not always. So now, in order to bring the matter down to more of a system, and to give the new varieties the prominence they deserve, we have made a separate section for them, and a separate class for each variety.

The premiums will be uniform $6 for first, $4 for second, fifty blooms to be shown, as in Section B. It is stipulated, however, that the disseminator must pay for the two premiums, and he must agree to do so before his variety is included in the list. This seems to us to be perfectly just, because any man who disseminates a variety ought to be willing to back it up to that extent the first year it is on the market. If the variety makes good it is put into Section B the next year.

Several of the novelties of last season have already been put into this list, and it is hoped that all those who sent out varieties last year will come forward and stick in their pets.

Registration of Canna.

Public notice is hereby given that Vaughan's Seed Store, 84 Randolph street, Chicago, Ill., offers for registration the plant described below. Any person objecting to the registration or to the use of the proposed name is requested to communicate with the undersigned at once. Failing to receive objections to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Description—Seedling; deep velvety green foliage; very free and robust grower, extra free bloomer, carrying three and four perfect flower spikes at one time; color, bright vermilion, with narrow golden yellow border; four feet. Name—Multiflora.

The Great Central Market.

The weather has been the controlling factor in the market since last report. The latter part of last week was unseasonably warm, and it caused a decided weakening in the market. Cuts were accelerated to the point where roses became almost a glut, and there was a sufficiency in practically all lines. Some houses found themselves short of chrysanthemums, and more had their troubles to supply white carnations, but others had a sufficiency of both these items. Sunday was not a pleasant day, and this always has an effect on Monday's business, the city buyers who stock up for Sunday failing to clear out. Following the storm of Sunday night the temperature went down as far below normal as it was above that mark last week. The result was a checking of both production and demand, the latter fully as much as the former, but the general feeling is that the cooler weather is greatly to be preferred to a temperature of 76 degrees, such as was recorded October 9. While the business was inactive at the beginning of this week, the sentiment is of continued cold weather will bring an early revival, which will put things back on the extremely satisfactory basis of two weeks ago.

While the change in weather has checked production all along the line, there is yet no shortage of roses. Beauties are not as abundant as they were, but the arrival of chrysanthemums in quantity has had its usual effect upon the call for long Beauties, and these are slower sale than the medium and short grades. Richmond in all lengths has been slower sale than other roses, but it is

The supply is increasing every day and quality is steadily improving—stems longer and flowers larger. Demand is strong for these.

Violets

We are receiving regular daily shipments—the Cream of the Hudson River doubles. Also the fragrant home-grown singles have commenced to come in. We never saw better violets at this time of the year and ask a trial order, feeling sure you can use these regularly.

Smilax Strings

expected that it will again come into favor with the advent of cold weather and will realize prices equal to those of other sorts. There are splendid Richmond on the market, also Killarney, My Maryland and other roses that leave nothing to be desired so far as quality goes. While Killarney is the best selling variety, white roses have commanded a little better prices, especially in the short lengths, than have other colors; due to pink being so much more abundant than white.

The chrysanthemum has become one of the chief factors in the market, due to increased production. The supply has not yet become unwieldy, but it is figured that next week the midseason sorts will begin coming in heavily; already prices have taken a drop. The quality of the stock is excellent. More yellow than white are seen, and only a few pink have arrived to date. The mum season thus far has been satisfactory, but many of the largest growers have hardly begun to cut, among them some big vegetable growers north of town.

There are more carnations on the market than has been the case, for the growers now are all firing, and it is bringing along the stock. White is not so plentiful as other colors. There still is a great difference in the quality of the goods; carnations are to be had with stems two feet long, but for every bunch of this grade there are quantities with stems not six inches long. Where the special grade has brought 4 cents, occasionally 5 cents, and been worth the money comparatively speaking, the general run of goods has sold from $1.50 to $3 per hundred, with a little extra price for all grades of white. The average price of carnations, it is thought, is not up to last year.

Violets are becoming more of a factor each day. The New York stock is better than it ever was at this date, and is coming in more heavily than usual at this season. During the warm weather of last week prices were much below those realized last year, but there begins now to be some improvement. Local singles are of pretty fair quality, but not yet arriving in much quantity, though each commission house receives a few each day.

Up to October 12 there were receipts of dahlias and gladioli, though both were of poor quality. But asters passed off the scene before frost arrived. Cosmos has been good, and fair sale. Except for a few unimportant lots, outdoor stock is now out of the market. Valley is abundant and selling well.

but there is now no special shortage on anything, as supplies are being drawn to this market from all over the country.

Club Meeting.

There was an attendance of fifty members at the meeting of the Florists' Club October 7, the principal business being the discussion of arrangements for the approaching flower show. The executive committee of the Horticultural Society of Chicago was present and reported that the Coliseum has been engaged for a show to open Tuesday, November 2, and close Sunday evening, November 7. E. F. Winterson, for the Florists' Club's committee, reported that arrangements had been made to give the club certain concessions in return for its assistance, and that the program will state that the show is given "with the coöperation of the Chicago Florists' Club."

August F. Poehlmann was among several called upon to give ideas as to what the prospects are. He said he could see no reason why the show should not be in every way as successful as any show preceding the National Flower Show. He said that he considered stock generally to be in better shape than it ever before has been at this date, and predicted an artistic, as well as a financial success. Speaking of business conditions, Mr. Poehlmann said that he thinks real prosperity is here, and looks for as good a business year as in the boom year of 1906. Other expressions of opinion were along the same line.

Ed Enders, chairman of the club's committee on entertainment, suggested that, instead of giving the annual banquet, a stag party be given in the annex to the Coliseum, for the visiting men, while the ladies be entertained the same evening at a theater party. The committee was instructed to formulate more

E. F. Winterson, for the club's transportation committee, reported on the Cincinnati expedition.

O. J. Friedman, C. M. Dickinson, E. Lynch, Clifford Pruner and H. Y. Garland were elected to membership.

Proposals for membership were C. N. Johnson, Morgan Park, Ill., and Wm. Homburg, who is with the J. B. Deamond Co.

The club voted to hold a special meeting each Friday evening from now until show time.

Poehlmann's Addition.

August Poehlmann states that if the greenhouses built this year by the Poehlmann Bros. Co. had been put up end to end instead of side by side they would have made a greenhouse 27x7,500—a greenhouse almost a mile and a half long. It is believed that this is the largest amount of glass ever put up in one year by any greenhouse concern in America. The glass used was 16x24 throughout.

Part of these houses were added to plant B, but most of them were at plant A where a new boiler-shed was put up, with a capacity of taking care of a million feet of glass. The structure is 200 and thirty feet high, built of brick. It will eventually contain twelve boilers, equipped with traveling grates.

Various Notes.

It is interesting to note that at the Springfield flower show last week there was no entry in any of the three classes provided for cut blooms of Chatenay, although $12 was offered as a premium for fifty blooms. Evidently this old and once largely grown variety has had its day.

It is suggested that if wholesalers would adopt uniform names for the different grades of roses, as long ago was done for Beauties, it would be a great convenience for out-of-town buyers, and also for the order clerks.

E. C. Amling has a number of growers at Maywood whose specialty at this season is a crop of Halliday mums. He says that one grower is ahead of last season with them, but that the others seem to be later than usual in starting to cut.

Peter Reinberg's political friends will not let him rest. Now he is being urged to run for sheriff of Cook county at the next election.

Eli H. Doud, president of the Acorn Brass Mfg. Co., on West Randolph street, is a goldfish fancier and owner of the Auburndale Goldfish Co., of which K. N. Cooper is manager. In addition to raising goldfish for the wholesale trade, the concern handles a full line of supplies and reports that florists are all the time becoming better customers, for goldfish are one of the best side lines that florists handle.

Hoerber Bros. are planning to plant about an acre of peonies for cut flowers at their establishment at Des Plaines.

Miss Grace Kennicott, daughter of the late Flint Kennicott, has recently achieved much success in light opera. She now is the prima donna in "A Stubborn Cinderella."

Miss Evert returned to the Flower Growers' Market October 13 to sell the chrysanthemums of her brother, Mat Evert, which are now being cut.

Growers' Market since the opening of that institution, January 1, 1903. She began selling the consignments of her brother, Walter L. Tonner, and gradually added to her business each year.

As late as Tuesday, October 12, E. S. Thompson, at Benton Harbor, Mich., was sending Vaughan & Sperry fine dahlias, and the firm says they have sold better than ever before, showing that at last the dahlia is making some progress in this market.

The Glencoe violets are again arriving at E. H. Hunt's, though still in limited quantity.

Theodore Kalis, of the White House Floral Co., decorated an elaborate float for the Columbus parade October 12.

Mrs. A. L. Randall is still confined to her bed at the summer home in Michigan. Mrs. Webb Randall is with her.

It is not generally known, but C. H. Fisk has been a grandpa for more than a fortnight.

E. C. Moore has closed his store at Sixty-third and Halsted streets, the competition of a flower section in a neighboring department store, and of a Greek salesman nearby, having proved enough to destroy his profit. He also has disposed of the store on Fifty-fifth street.

Percy Jones is reported as making fine progress. He is expected to be able to be downtown before many days.

The De Kalb Greenhouses, De Kalb, Ill., have been shipping large quantities of dahlias to Kyle & Foerster.

A recent addition to the force of the Kennicott Bros. Co. is Fred Lieberman, whose mother conducts the Ogden Floral Co. It will be recalled that at the Florists' Club's picnic Mr. Lieberman pitched for the retailers against the wholesalers, and the result justifies the view that Mr. Lieberman's acquisition is a distinct gain for the wholesalers.

Wietor Bros. are now cutting from so large a proportion of their place that they resumed sending in two wagons a day October 11.

Flower show headquarters have been opened at room 416 in the Atlas block, telephone Randolph 1958. Joe Beaver is on duty there.

C. W. McKellar says cattleyas, dendrobiums and oncidiums all are in fair supply and good demand. The supply of orchids is steadily increasing in this market. Poehlmann Bros. Co. and George Reinberg are cutting a few cattleyas and E. F. Winterson Co. receives consignments from Cincinnati.

E. C. Amling celebrated his forty-first birthday anniversary October 10.

Edward Amerpohl, of Janesville, Wis., was in town October 11. He is consigning roses and carnations to the J. B. Deamud Co.

Fred Zaphe, who formerly was employed in the J. A. Budlong greenhouses, died October 10. His son, Charles Zaphe, is in the Budlong city store, and one of the best liked young men in the market.

Bassett & Washburn are cutting Rhea Reid roses with stems two to three feet long, and say they find they make an excellent substitute for medium and short Beauties.

Mr. and Mrs. William L. Kroeschell have made announcement of the engagement of their daughter, Ida, to Ernst Von Ammond. Mrs. Kroeschell and her daughter have just returned from Europe.

Bassett & Washburn's greenhouse employees have united in an expression of thanks to C. L. Washburn for the interest he has taken in their baseball team, Mr. Washburn having accompanied the team to nearly every game and having borne its expenses. The last game of the season will be played October 17 at Hinsdale, the team representing the Albert F. Amling Co., Maywood, being the visitors.

Mrs. Miller, of Abilene, Kan., passed through Chicago October 11 on her way home from a visit in New York. She is the mother of the Miller brothers, whose place at Abilene recently was destroyed by fire and is now being rebuilt.

Another visitor was Milo Crozer, bringing plants and supplies. He says his father, J. G. Crozer, of Cedar Rapids, Ia., who recently suffered partial paralysis, is improving steadily. Henry B. the Peoria carnation grower, also was in town October 11, as was Mrs. G. Stampner, of Argos, Ind.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

For the last week, including Saturday, we have had ideal growing weather, with warm days and moderately cool nights, and this increased the supply of stock considerably. As the demand was equal to the supply, satisfaction reigned all around. The only thing that might have been more plentiful was white carnations.

Club Meeting.

One of the best attended club meetings for some time was held October 7. Theo. Boettcher and Henry Marquardt were elected to membership.

The main topic of the evening was the fall flower show, to be held November 11 to 14. Gust Roesch, who is a man of original ideas, proposed to have one or more forenoons given over to school children, who, accompanied by their teachers, would view the show free of charge. After a lengthy discussion, in which some stated that it might hinder those who arranged exhibits in certain cut flower classes, the matter was left to the executive committee. The standing entertainment committee was instructed to work out the social end for the visiting florists.

A Visit to H. W. Koerner's.

After a little shower Sunday morning, which laid the dust, the writer decided to call on H. W. Koerner, at Wauwatosa, and was well repaid for the long walk.

About seven years ago Mr. Koerner, who up to that time conducted a retail store on the south side, purchased a tract of land on the Burleigh road and confined his time to growing dahlias, gladioli, hardy phlox and shrubbery. During these seven years he did a good deal of hybridizing, and today he has some of the best seedlings of dahlias, phlox and gladioli in the country. In fact, in the dahlias, of which he has 400 varieties, he has some which look as if they might, when disseminated, put all of the Twentieth Century dahlia varieties in the background. The writer saw some that were seven inches in diameter. In fact, the acres of single, semi-double and double varieties in all imaginable shades were a sight never to be forgotten.

This year he grew about 2,000,000 gladioli. In this, too, he has several promising varieties, as yet unnamed. In the hardy phlox line he has seventy-five varieties.

Another plant of interest is his improved strain of gaillardia, which he has grown for several seasons. It is named Gaillardia Koerneri. Mr. Koerner said that before he brought his gaillardia to the Milwaukee market these flowers were of little importance, but today there is a good demand for his improved strain. Up to date Mr. Koerner has had no greenhouse, but he now intends to erect one, 38x300, mainly for the propagation of dahlias. He says that the boundaries of the shipping territory for the last named are the Pacific coast, the Gulf of Mexico and the Atlantic ocean. He now has under construction a concrete building, 18x100, which will be used as a warehouse, packing and shipping room and potting shed, with a fine cellar for storing bulbs and roots.

Various Notes.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. reports the arrival of a carload of azaleas October 9.

Walter Hummel, Wauwatosa, who until recently gave most of his time to landscape gardening and only had one greenhouse, 20x100, added two more, each 25x150, this summer. These he has planted with carnations of the following varieties: Enchantress, White Perfection, White Enchantress, Beacon and a few small lots of several other kinds.

Fred Holton and Nic Zweifel returned Sunday morning from their six days' trip to Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minn. They have only words of praise of what they saw. In fact, they were surprised to see such high-grade cut flowers and pot plants, and what was more pleasant was the hospitality accorded them from all sides. "Why, we were treated like kings," is the way they expressed themselves. Mr. Zweifel was also well impressed with the beautiful scenery, including the many lakes, and spoke much of the good roads, which he stated were ahead of those in the Badger State.

Walter M. Maas, formerly connected with the Currie Bros. Co. and the McKenny Co., and Miss Jean M. Sheriffs, who also was formerly connected with the latter concern, have opened a new florists' establishment under the name of Walter M. Maas & Co., at 128 Oneida street, in the Cary building. Mr. Maas had charge of the outside decorating work of the McKenny Co. and also did all the buying for that concern.

One of the events of the week was the arrival of a pair of fine twin girls at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Pollworth. The father is doing well, the mother and daughters are progressing splendidly and

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Centennial week brought considerable work to those in the trade who do decorating; but the cut flower trade was not helped much by the great crowds that gathered here last week. The leaders in the trade say that outside of funeral work, a few dinners and small weddings, it was rather dull at times. The Veiled Prophet's ball did not cut any special figure in the trade, as it did in former years; few flowers were worn by the ladies present.

The market, however, was at all times during the week well supplied with all seasonable stock, and there seems to be plenty of it, except carnations, and they are in good demand. Roses are most plentiful. Of these, Beauties sell better than any of the other varieties at present. Chrysanthemums are selling up clean, but there are not a great many of them coming in yet. Cosmos is now coming in quite heavily. California violets are more plentiful. A few good asters are still coming in. A fine lot of dahlias are being sent in by local growers. Everything in greens is plentiful, except good smilax.

Various Notes.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., with his family, was in the city last week for the Veiled Prophet's parade and the lecture of Dr. Cook, the north pole discoverer.

Mrs. M. S. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind., spent Centennial week in the city and was the guest of Miss T. Meinhardt.

Max Rotter, the North Broadway florist, has returned from Europe, where he spent the last four months.

F. H. Meinhardt and O. G. Koenig spent a few days at the Springfield fair as judges of the cut flower exhibits. They returned in time for the dedication of Fairground park.

The following florists had floats in the business men's parade last week: A. Brix, Bentzen Floral Co., H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co. and Grimm & Gortley. The floats were handsome and at-that with all the extras, the order will amount to $2,500. This is one of the largest orders in recent years.

M. S. Myers, who opened a store recently at 921 North Kingshighway, says that she has had a splendid trade since her opening.

W. Wors is now employed with the Kelley Floral Co., on Sixth street, which is a pretty store near a busy corner.

Alter Retzer, manager for Grimm & Co. at their new Washington avenue store, says they were never so busy as this week. They are making attractive window displays.

Ellison Floral Co., at Taylor and Grand avenue, had an attractive centennial window display last week, showing the difference between the florist of a hundred years ago and now.

Go Gross, W. J. Pilcher and a number of other Kirkwood florists are sending to this market some extra good California violets, which are handled by the W. J. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. The Kelley Floral Co., at Eighteenth and Olive streets, has the field to itself now, as its competitor, Joseph Goldbach, who opened across the way several months ago, sold his stock and fixtures to the Kelley Floral Co. Another case of going into the florists' business without any experience.

Judge W. J. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind., spent Monday, October 11, with friends in the trade here.

The decorated power boat in the river parade last week attracted a lot of attention. The Eleanor, decorated by Ostertag Bros., won the first prize for the best decorated boat.

The posters for the flower show of the St. Louis Horticultural Society are out and among the retailers for window displays. F. W. Brockman, chairman of the executive board, says it will be the largest show ever held in the city, and a big financial success is looked for.

The florists' bowlers have scattered and all are bowling on a different team and league, C. A. Kuehn with the Comp-ton league, Carl Beyer with the Westerns, E. W. Guy with Belleville, A. Y. Ellison with the City league and J. J. Beneke with the Knights of Pythias league, and all with good averages.

The Market.

We are enjoying a second summer; shade temperatures of 75 to 80 degrees and cloudless skies have been our lot for the last ten days. A week ago something of a shortage developed and cut flower prices advanced sharply, following a protracted rain. Now all is changed once more. While there is no market glut as yet, supplies are steadily increasing, thanks to the semi-tropical weather prevailing, and prices show a drooping tendency all around. Chrysanthemums are much more plentiful, but still move pretty well. Polly Rose, Glory of Pacific and Monrovia are mostly in evidence. Carnations are in oversupply. The heat has brought in a heavy crop, and as stems are in the main rather short, the demand is only moderate. Roses are in the same predicament and are a much slower sale, short-stemmed stock being difficult to dispose of. A continuation of warm weather will aggravate existing conditions.

Violets are mostly coming from outdoors and are quite abundant for so early in the season, singles predominating. Valley sells well. Liliun longiflorum is rather more plentiful. The clear weather has caused a coming again of outdoor supplies, such as asters, gladioli, cosmos, dahlias, celosias, etc., which only a sharp frost will put an end to. This cannot be long deferred. There is a good call for adiantum and asparagus and more of an inquiry for hardy ferns and smilax.

Various Notes.

We have been enjoying for ten days most magnificent weather, with cloudless skies. Never were the autumn tints on trees and shrubs more beautiful and seldom has there been such a wealth of fruit on crataegus, Cornus florida, euonymus and many other shrubs. The parkways and arboretum have been the Mecca for hosts of visitors of late. Rain October 11 ended one of the finest spells of fall weather we ever experienced.

At the November meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, Miss L. L. Hetzer, of the Ladies' School of Horticulture, Groton, Mass., will speak on "Jottings on a Journey Abroad." Miss Hetzer is a member of the club and an enthusiastic floriculturist. There will be no meeting October 19, owing to the New England fruit show occupying the halls, but J. K. M. L. Farquhar's stereopticon bulb lecture will be given October 26.

The members of the Boston Coöperative Flower Market were apportioned their stalls October 9. Of the 127 stalls, all but a small number are taken, and Park Street Market No. 2, as the newest market is being commonly called, starts off with brilliant prospects. There was a large attendance of growers at the market October 9 and a general spirit of optimism prevailed.

At the Brockton fair, New England's leading outdoor carnival, which closed October 8, there was the usual large attendance, 158,000 paid admissions being the record for the four days. Dahlias were, as usual, the leading floral feature, large displays being made by F. L. Tinkham, Craff & Symonds, J. K. Alexander, George H. Walker, Mrs. H. A. Jahn, W. F. Turner & Co., W. D. Hathaway, W. P. Lothrop, W. H. Richardson and others. R. & J. Farquhar & Co. in their special exhibit constructed a model of Bunker Hill monument, ten feet high, of white dahlias.

William A. Walke, of Salem, at Park Street Market No. 2, has an extra fine lot of longiflorum lilies and excellent pink antirrhinums. Mr. Walke is one of the best growers of pot plants and cut flowers for the Boston market.

For the New England fruit show, to be held at Horticultural hall, Boston, October 19 to 24, entries for 500 boxes and barrels and 2,000 plates of apples are already to hand. Everything points to the show being a grand success.

Owing to the warm weather, violet specialists are later than usual in housing their stock of singles this season. William Sim, who is the largest local grower, with about 100,000 plants, is just commencing to plant.

The present corporation of the older Park Street Market will probably be dissolved and a new one formed. Definite action will probably be taken in a few days. The annual banquet at Young's hotel will occur October 23.

N. F. Comley is already in the market with a good crop of indoor grown sweet peas, of which he makes quite a specialty.

Albert Batley, of Maynard, secured the Republican nomination as representative from his district at the recent caucus, and is now devoting as much time to

The Market.

The last week has been a glorious one as far as weather is concerned. Business, too, took a decided brace and with the addition of stock such as chrysanthemums, carnations, etc., the week was a lively one.

The reports for September business show the month a little slow with nearly everybody.

Various Notes.

Several additions have happened in the Buffalo market the last few days, among them being a baby boy in the Kasting family.

S. A. Anderson has opened a branch store in an elaborate fashion at 509 Elmwood avenue, which is the heart of a good residence section. The place, with the well established downtown store and the greenhouses at its back, should be a decided success.

Another addition worthy of note is the latest move at the Lenox Flower Shop. Mr. Cloudsley, founder of the firm, has taken Ed. H. Aitman into the business. Mr. Aitman is a resident of Buffalo who is desirous of entering the flower business. Although a new departure on his part, he is possessed of that which is bound to bring success. The firm is now incorporated under the same name and opened under the new head October 1.

The Buffalo industrial exhibition opened last week and gave the florists plenty of work decorating the booths.

We were all sorry to hear of the sad death of Wm. Kirschhoff's grandson. Mr. Kirschhoff is the gladiolus specialist of Pembroke, N. Y. The child opened a purse and found strychnine tablets and ate them for candy. His death followed in a few moments.

Lively interest still holds in the bowling club, for each week a happy gathering turns out. R. A. S.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Business conditions for this market are all that can be expected for this time of the year. Funeral work for the last week has been steady and has cleaned up all the first-class flowers daily. Roses and carnations are improving and mums are becoming more plentiful. Dahlias are still to be had, but are not coming in large quantities. Some violets are being shipped in, but are not in heavy demand.

Various Notes.

Invitations have been issued for the marriage of Alfred Pahud, Jr., and Miss Lauer. The wedding will take place October 27.

Carl Sonnenschmidt has returned from a three months' visit in Germany.

A. F. J. Baur, secretary of the American Carnation Society, is busy working on the premium list, and anyone desiring advertising space should communicate with Mr. Baur immediately.

George Wiegand has returned from a visit in Cleveland, where he attended the opening of the Jones-Russell Co.

E. T. Barnes, of Spencer, and M. A. Barrick, of Seymour, were visitors last week, attending the meeting of the State Florists' Association while here.

The A. A. Warner Co., which had a flower store at College avenue and Sixteenth street, and greenhouses in Broad Ripple, has made an assignment.

E. A. Nelson has a fine lot of seedlings of kentias and phoenix. Mr. Nelson is also cutting some fine smilax.

C. W. Nims, of the A. H. Hews Pottery Co., paid us a visit this week.

John Bertermann is to have another wedding at his house this month. This is the third daughter Mr. Bertermann has lost in the last eighteen months.

The regular meeting of the State Florists' Association was held last week in the horticultural rooms at the State House. The question of the spring show came up and was referred to the executive committee, with full power to act. William Langstaff, the first president of the association, was elected an honorary member. E. T. Barnes, the dahlia king of Spencer, Ind., exhibited a large collection of dahlias. Among the collection, about 1,000 in number, were some new varieties which Mr. Barnes recently imported from abroad. Owing to the recent heavy frosts, he was unable to show some of his best varieties, but as it was he had a fine collection and the members were much interested.

The Pahud Floral Co. recently added a new horse to its equipment.

H. L. W.

PASCOAG, R. I. — William Doel, the Broad street florist, has purchased the Walter Slade greenhouses in Franklin, Mass. Mr. Doel has been engaged in business for several years and has been quite successful. For the winter he will put a manager in charge of the greenhouses at Franklin and next summer may go to Franklin to take charge of the business himself.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Indian summer has increased the production of cut flowers far beyond the demands of the market. Dahlias are in oversupply, despite the fact that the retailers have taken hold with a will and are displaying the finest varieties in their windows and showing them to their customers at every opportunity. The demand for dahlias has been large, the general public taking an unusual interest, but it would require something phenomenal to consume all the fine flowers produced with the thermometer at mid-summer point.

Chrysanthemums, pink, white and yellow, have increased rapidly. Having to compete with dahlias of such splendid quality, the price has fallen, despite the fact that the quality of chrysanthemums is much finer than it was a week ago. Extremely early blooms required for show purposes in the shop windows or for a wedding usually command absurd prices, which as rapidly decline as the dozen becomes hundreds. The price today is excellent, considering conditions—an immense quantity of all kinds of stock and the finest dahlias the market has ever seen.

Further comments on the market may be summed up briefly as follows: Carnations are more plentiful; white is the only color that is still scarce, commanding unusual prices. The demand for colors is larger, clearing up most of the stock offered at excellent prices. There is an immense quantity of poor, small roses. There is no especial demand for Beauties; the good flowers on the medium and short stems are more popular than fancy stock. The aster season has been surprisingly lengthened; heavy shipments, mainly of the ordinary grade of stock, seem to indicate the last cut of the specialists; these flowers have helped tide over the shortage in carnations. Orchids are becoming more plentiful in good season for the weddings and coming-out teas; the price on cattleyas is falling, while on the other varieties it remains firm. The first shipments of double violets have arrived; the singles have not increased much yet. Some early sweet peas from the indoor stock have appeared, pink of good flower and stem. The supply of valley is about equal to the demand. Easter lilies continue popular. Gardenias can be had in larger numbers. Pansies are plentiful. Greens are rather dull.

The D. & C. Expansion.

One of the brightest of the many bright travelers for the seed houses assured me one day that Heller Bros., of New Castle, Ind., sent ever so many packages through the mail. I forget how many packages it was, but he said it so earnestly that I knew it must be true. Fancy, then, the pleasure with which it was noted that the Dingee & Conard Co. had purchased the mailing plant establishment and business of Heller Bros., thereby increasing their business about one-third, Edward Parker tells me, with something in his manner that seems to say that P. Joseph Lynch has set his heart on increasing the output of both plants without worrying much about which has the three and which has the one. Mr. Parker describes the New Castle plant as in fine condition, well stocked, fortified with a soil that is unsurpassed. Describing New Castle's cultural methods, Mr. Parker said that 3,500 loads of soil were composted with manure in the proportion of three to one. Eight weeks after the young stock was planted in this rich compost four inches more cow manure were added by way of top dressing. The plants grown in this fertile land flourish exceedingly. Speaking of varieties, Mr. Parker said he would have to raise enough additional stock of 300 or 400 varieties of roses to bring the number at New Castle up to that at West Grove. The Dingee & Conard Co. proposes to carry on the New Castle business under the name of Heller Bros., it being distinctly agreed that the name, an important asset in the mailing trade, should be continued, the thousands of western customers being given to the name to which they have become attached.

Mushrooms are the latest addition at Dingee & Conard's. A plant 100x100, erected last season, yielded splendid results. Mr. Parker was closely questioned as to the market for mushrooms, but the theory that the ladies who order D. & C. roses for their garden also ordered D. & C. mushrooms for their dinners could not be confirmed.

The Vintage of Autumn.

The sun had just dipped behind the Art Club when the screen over the window on the opposite side of Broad street was removed, disclosing an effective scene. On the left was a barrel marked "Autumn"; from it streamed vari-colored flowers of the Japanese hydrangea as though they had overflowed from the barrel. In the central background a champagne basket filled with white grapes, on the left a beautiful bunch of wine-colored dahlias, with ribbon to match. There were other autumnal touches, but this is enough to give an idea of an effect that was charming. When asked for a few ideas about flowers Charles Henry Fox said: "We feature dahlias. They are of fine quality and give satisfaction to our customers. You see, the American people love a change; they become enthusiastic about each flower in its season. It is far better to begin with dahlias, follow with chrysanthemums, violets and roses, than to spread any one or all of them over too long a period." When asked how many varieties he would suggest growing for the cut flower market, Mr. Fox said he thought ten would be sufficient. He expressed his belief that the time had arrived when the dahlia should be graded like the rose. The dahlias now coming into the market were so badly mixed that barely forty per cent were of first quality, even among the finest varieties.

A Dahlia Show.

Philip Freud met a countryman in front of 1018. It is pleasant to see a Market street merchant greet a friend from the field in front of his warehouse. He does it with an earnestness, a cordiality, that impresses the bystander. "I have news for you," Mr. Freud said; "what do you think of a two-days' dahlia show with 5,000 dahlias and 2,000 other dahlias to be given away to the visitors right here in the store?" "What will become of the seeds?" the countryman asked. "What seeds?" said Mr. Freud. "Why, Michell's seeds, of course."

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

Trade conditions here for the last two weeks have been excellent and the indications are that a general revival in business is at hand. The demand for cut flowers is active and large quantities have been used for the many weddings and other social functions that are taking place. Two or three weeks of dark weather had the effect of shortening up the supply and prices have been stronger than has been experienced here for some time. Chrysanthemums have been much in demand, especially yellow, which it has been almost impossible to get hold of.

Carnations have also been much sought for, the supply being short, owing to the dark weather prevailing. Violets are coming in regularly and improving in quality daily, and up to the present time have cleaned up regularly.

handling the surplus. It was hard all day, October 11, to induce the stores even to pay over 25 cents per hundred for the fresh arrivals.

The Hudson-Fulton celebration is now a memory. It brought many decorations for the battleships and for the banquets, but apart from these and the usual Beauty baskets to the stars at the theater openings, there has been nothing of great moment to inspire the retail trade. Now society is fast returning; many brilliant weddings are announced. The horse show is only a few weeks away, and the outlook is bright for the fall and winter season.

There was an attendance of nearly 100 at the club meeting October 11 and one were proposed. President-elect Pierson, of the S. A. F., spoke against close corporations and in favor of Patrick O'Mara's suggestions. The experiences of the last twenty years and the many changes in the method of nominations were cited, and finally Henry Weston's amendment was agreed upon and assented to by the others and carried by a large majority, only six voting against it. The new rule makes necessary the endorsement by not less than seven members in good standing for anyone nominated in the open meeting in November, and the acceptance of the nomination by each candidate before his name goes on the official printed ballot. C. B. Weathered's motion to lay the matter on the table was defeated. R. E. Berry and A. R. Kennedy also took part in the discussion.

The secretary read a letter from George W. Sykes, requesting the acceptance of his resignation from the club, because of his removal to Chicago, where he is in charge of Lord & Burnham's western office.

Robert Berry read a resolution, setting forth the poor pay given competent gardeners in the city parks, as compared with other labor, and suggesting that the Florists' Club send a request to the city to raise the wages from $75 to $90 a month. The matter was referred to the legislative committee with power to act.

A committee to draw up resolutions on the death of the sister of J. K. Allen was appointed, consisting of Mr. Rickards, A. J. Guttman and J. Austin Shaw, and on the death of the son of J. B. Nugent, Jr., F. H. Traendly, J. H. Pepper and A. L. Miller.

Harry A. Barnard, of London, England, was present and made an interesting address. He thinks America a land of great possibilities for the florist, and regretted he was not a younger man, that he might come to this country and grow up with it in its inevitable advancement. Mr. Brown, of Virginia, was also a visitor and is a guest of John Donaldson, of Elmhurst, L. I.

The great flower show of November 3 is the club's next interesting feature.

The most interesting gatherings of the year. President Harry Turner was in the city. The exhibits were light in number but excellent in quality. Henry Boudieu exhibited a single flower of a red seedling dahlia, of which the committee requested a further and larger display. C. H. Totty showed two vases of marigolds, all of great size and beauty, for each of which cultural certificates were granted.

A. L. Miller reported progress for the next market committee. The transportation committee reported on the trip to Cincinnati and was discharged. The outgoing committee reported a surplus of $61.97 on the club's summer outing, which amount was added to the club's healthful bank account. Chairman Bunyard and his committee received a standing vote of thanks.

A. Ordonez, J. B. McArdle and David McKenzie were elected to membership. Of the new members of late, Mr. Meiklejohn was introduced to the club by H. A. Bunyard and Mr. McArdle by Joseph Fenrich. Both gentlemen expressed their pride in the honor of election and their willingness to serve the club to the best of their ability. M. C. Ebel, H. C. Merritt, S. A. Leuba, George Scott, William Kessler and Sydney Wertheimer were proposed for membership.

Mr. Marshall read his proposed amendments to the by-laws. The first one was not accepted; on the second a long discussion resulted, participated in by Mr. Marshall, C. H. Totty, Charles Lenker, R. M. Schultz, Henry Weston, W. J. Elliott, A. J. Guttman, Patrick O'Mara and C. B. Weathered. Several amendments and amendments to amendments

Various Notes.

The completion of the Harriman estate at Arden will be of much benefit to nurserymen in this vicinity.

Greenhouse building is progressing in all directions on a gigantic scale. Every builder of reputation has more bookings than ever before known at this time. Jacobs & Sons say an increase to their factory size and facilities is an absolute necessity.

The estate of John Scott, at Flatbush, with over 60,000 square feet of glass, shows marked advance and prosperity. Every popular palm, fern and decorative plant for retail florists is here in quantity. A force of over twenty men is constantly employed under the management of David McKenzie, with George Scott as foreman. Scottii ferns in all sizes are the leading specialty. Many houses of gardenias are in bloom. The trial of the murderer of the lamented John Scott began Wednesday, October 13, in Brooklyn.

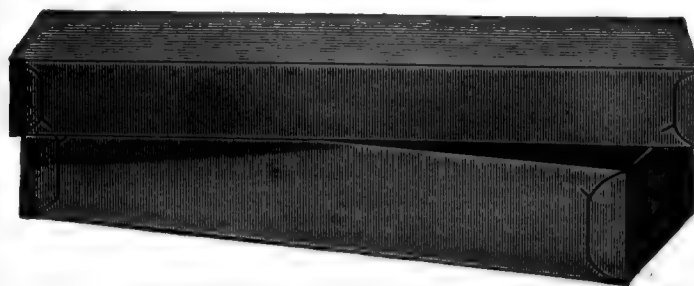

Close to the Scott establishment is the model plant of Peter Wagner, where some 30,000 square feet are devoted to ferns, palms and decorative plants. One of the new houses, as an exhibition section, is as neatly maintained as the best retail conservatory on a fashionable New York avenue.

Alfred Zeller, on Clarkson street, Flatbush, has his usual fall display of plants. The Otaheite orange is, as usual, one of his specialties. This is his last year in this section of his holdings, he having sold the property to Louis Schmutz, who will take possession in the spring. Its value is $25,000.

The auction sales continue every Tuesday and Friday. Retail florists have been recent visitors, much to the gratification of the persuasive auctioneers. With three sources of supply and some excellent decorative stock, local and imported, the retailer has his innings.

Among the novelties this fall another new fern, the Giatrasii, is making a bid for patronage. It looks like a cross between Boston and Scottii, and is a wonderfully strong and compact grower, and even in the bench develops into a plant of shapeliness and beauty.

H. C. Steinhoff, of West Hoboken, finds the city encroaching fast on his property, running a new street through its center and pushing him out to his country farm up the state, where he has just built another new greenhouse and where he has ample room for a big, modern plant, which will come to completion rapidly. But a portion of the present glass area and the office building and old homestead will be retained. Some with John J. Coan reelected as manager. A satisfactory dividend was declared. The same store and force of employees are retained, and several new members have joined the association since the last report.

The New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association met at Dreyer's, Tuesday morning, October 12, and proceeded by auto to visit the greenhouses of all the society's members on Long Island. The organization grows steadily in size and importance. Harmony prevails and competition is conducted on broad and mutually helpful lines. A banquet is planned for the winter and a surprise is in store for the members shortly, that includes an enjoyable reunion under the auspices of the wives of the members.

F. R. Pierson is already sending to the New York market over 75,000 pink and White Killarney roses weekly.

Bowling.

The bowling club has changed its night of meeting to Wednesday. Captain Berry will notify all who intend to bowl to be present Wednesday, October 20, for the opening of the winter season.

Saturday, October 16, W. H. Siebrecht has invited the Astoria Bowling Club to visit him at his new home in Chappaqua, via the big touring car from the Siebrecht greenhouses at Astoria. The last club night furnished some scores that indicate a hard battle when the New York club challenges Astoria in December.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

We live in an inventive as well as a strenuous age, something new bobbing up all the time. The latest, and by far the most original idea in the form of a roller skating rink is being carried out by our fellow craftsman, John W. Grupe, of Schenectady, N. Y., who is putting up a building that will be unique in construction and completeness of arrangement. Having a frontage of twenty-seven feet, the rink proper is 80x128 feet. On the left-hand side and running the entire length is an office and show house, with a workroom in the rear and a private office on the second floor. As it is located in the best section of the city and adjoining the greenhouse plant, Mr. Grupe is assured of a high class patronage, which has been his good fortune for many years, enabling him to make what is admitted to be the only thing of its kind hereabouts. Everything conducive to the comfort and pleasure of his patrons has been considered by the enterprising owner, who thinks that the name, the Bellevue Floral Rink, suggested by his son and daughter, who will assist him in the management, is most appropriate. All visitors, including the ever welcome knight of the grip, can always be sure of a skate, and a roller skate at that.

Henry Schrade, of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., has the new carnation, Canary Bird, in fine shape. It is most appropriately named and should take well. In habit and growth it is fully equal to Enchantress. It has been widely distributed and will, no doubt, make good wherever grown. A temperature of 45 degrees suits it best.

T. J. Totten, of Saratoga Springs, has a scarlet carnation that will create a sensation in the near future. T. J., Jr., is a conservative chap and when he says he has something good it may be depended upon.

Christian Dehn, of Saratoga Springs, has rebuilt his plant and has everything modern, including concrete walls, trussed roofs, etc.

Fred Goldring, of Slingerlands, N. Y., dries off his rose stock in summer, plants them in boxes, brings them in late and gets a growth that is remarkable. He keeps on full air at night and has no mildew. His Bride, Bridesmaid and Killarney are fine. Maryland is good, but is a cropper. T. J. Totten thinks well of this rose and is giving it some space, but his grand Beauties are his pride and were the joy of the Trojans, who at the time of my visit were just finishing up the Hudson-Fulton celebration. Sambrook Bros. and J. G. Barrett, of Troy, had their share of floral work for this celebration, while Fred A. Danker had all he could attend to at the Albany end. Poughkeepsie was well represented by the Saltford Flower Shop and by Murphy & Schaumburg, who both had the Half Moon set up in fine shape in their store windows—elegant works of art. The full moon on the sidewalk needed no decoration. M.

E. HAENTZE, Fond du Lac, Wis., sends word that everything was snowed under there on the morning of October 12.

It is likely to be a few weeks yet before the bean growers can tell how things in that line will be. Reports indicate a very short crop.

DELIVERIES of California seed crops so far invoiced are up to estimates, consequently no complaint can be registered against the coast brotherhood.

THE sweet corn growers should now be able to size up the situation, as reports indicate that the weather can do no more for the crop than it has done.

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture has issued a bulletin, No. 372, on soy beans, which will be of interest to seedsmen. It is by C. V. Piper and H. T. Nielsen.

CUCUMBER and vine seeds of all kinds are getting scarcer right along. The estimates of a few weeks ago, although then thought to be conservative, are found to be much too high.

PEA deliveries will not be any better this year than they were last on early sorts, and in the case of the later varieties it looks as though they will not pan out anything like as well as they did last year.

D'ALCORNs, the bulb growers at Portsmouth, Va., have recently established warehouses four miles outside Washington, D. C., and report having trouble because the railroads will not accept freight unless the charges are prepaid.

A REGULAR meeting of the New York Horticultural Importers' Protective Association was held Thursday, October 7, at the Astor House, New York, a full attendance being present. This organization was formed about two years ago, primarily for the purpose of regulating credits of buyers of plants, seeds, bulbs,

Four of the Finest Superb New Spencer Sweet Peas

Marie Corelli Senator Spencer
Miriam Beaver W. T. Hutchins

With the exception of our King Edward Spencer, Aurora and Othello Spencers, we regard these four new Spencers—after careful inspection of the crops in California—as probably the TRUEST TO TYPE at time of introduction of any new Spencers that have originated in America, and unsurpassed in fixity of character by any English novelties yet obtained. We feel sure that they will give complete satisfaction to amateurs and Sweet Pea specialists, both in England and America.

Marie Corelli In trials both in England and at Fordhook, was pronounced by Sweet Pea experts as being in the fore rank of distinct Spencer novelties. The large flowers are brilliant rose-carmine or red and uniformly of true Spencer form. The wings are a pure, rich rose-crimson while the standard shows a tint of cherry-red. The whole effect is that of a brilliant crimson—clear, distinct and most beautiful. The standard is large, round and wavy; the wings are full and inclined to remain boldly outright instead of drooping. The long, strong stems usually bear four flowers each. The plant is of strong growth and very free flowering.

Miriam Beaver In form, size, graceful arrangement on the stem, free blooming and seedless nature, is in all respects similar to the original Countess Spencer. Its novelty is its color—a glowing but soft apricot, tinted shaded and suffused with lemon. It shows a little variation perhaps with a tint of salmon, deeper by a trifle on the back of standard, but is practically a self color. It is a color difficult to describe and might be said to approach a terra cotta tint, especially so as it harmonizes so beautifully with golden brown.

Senator Spencer A varying combination of deep claret and chocolate, striped and flaked on a ground of light heliotrope. It shows up wonderfully well, as the dainty, detailed markings are most attractive. SENATOR SPENCER is of the true Spencer form—wavy edges on both standard and wings—large, round, fluffy standard long drooping wings. The stems are long and there are usually four good, large, finely formed flowers on each stem. It comes absolutely true from seed and the vines are a perfect mass of bloom throughout the season.

W. T. Hutchins A fine, bold, true Spencer of most perfect form and coloring. The buds show a decided buff color. The fully expanded flower has the appearance of light apricot (distinctly lemon at the throat), overlaid with a beautiful blush pink. As the season advances, the blush pink shading becomes rather more pronounced. Both standard and wings are wavy, ruffled and crinkled, of the most advanced Spencer type.

Each of the above New Spencers men who know crops and market conditions and who are qualified to draw deductions from such information.

As a general proposition, seeds should go up in price. Isn't the price of practically every product of the soil at top level?

E. L. MILLER, who for some time was in the seed business at Marysville, Kan., died suddenly of heart disease at Kansas City October 6. He was 55 years of age.

C. A. KING & Co., Toledo, say that "clover seed prices continue to fluctuate with the speculative demand. They will for some weeks. The demand for shipment may be limited until after the holidays. Prices are so much above last season that conservative buyers may wait until they need the seed. Receipts are much smaller than last season, but larger than from the short crop of two years ago. This is partly due to the surplus of old seed. Michigan, the third largest producer, appears to have a fair crop; so have Missouri and some of the smaller producers. Ohio and Indiana are very short, but have some old seed."

THE SITUATION IN SEEDS.

In general, trade reports show a healthy condition of things. The pea growers are busy milling, hand picking and shipping. If any one has a surplus of anything in seeds he may be considered to be on the right side of the fence. It seems to be easier right now to get orders than it is to be certain about filling them. There may be a few exceptions, but so few as to make the general proposition safe. It is always a question of price, however, no matter how short anything may be. The trouble always is that the prospective buyer has quoted to sell lower than he ought, and must buy the scarce article at the price that prevails when it is plentiful. This is one of the things that no one can help, but, even at that, the fact remains that the outlook is good and there is a chance for a profitable trade all along the line.

the first day of the present week reminds the growers that out of doors is not the best place for sets. Quite a few early carload shipments have been made and others will follow as soon as the buyers can be convinced that it is cool enough to ship. The situation seems to be satisfactory and a steady advance in prices is looked for. Many of the smaller growers, who have been inclined to hold off for prices that at this time of the year are practically prohibitive, are readjusting themselves and will probably accept the fair prices that are being offered. The crop on the whole, although far below what it should have been in quantity, is of exceptionally good quality and barring whites, which show a dry rot, will be likely to hold over winter in first-class shape.

MORSE ON SWEET PEAS.

C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, have issued an appendix to their "Field Notes on Sweet Peas," in which Lester Morse says:

"It has been two years since the last issue of 'Field Notes' was published, while it was our intention to revise them this year, the multitude of sections and repetition of varieties renders it impossible to properly classify most of the recent introductions and we will wait another year before attempting a new book. After one or two more seasons the seed trade will probably decide to list but one name for a variety, and the new Sweet Pea Society of America was born in the nick of time to act as sponsor for an authorized list of names. We are willing to stand by their decision when it is given; but meantime we purpose to curtail the list by growing, for instance, only one White Spencer, and not half a dozen. In white, as in maroon and some others, we think we

GENERAL CROP CONDITIONS.

The month of September was slightly more favorable for maturing crops than is the average September. General crop conditions October 1 (including crops harvested before October 1) were 1.5 per cent lower than October 1, 1908, and 2.4 per cent lower than the ten-year average condition October 1. The lower condition than last year, however, is slightly more than counterbalanced by an increase in the amount of land under cultivation.

Crop conditions October 1, 1909, or at the time of harvest, with comparisons, follow:

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $47,050.

ALFALFA SEED CROPS.

From Fowler, Kan., comes the following: "Alfalfa seed is becoming a great crop with the farmers in southwestern Kansas. One of the richest spots for this crop is in the artesian valley of Meade county. Some large yields are reported, and the farmers are realizing a big income from their farms. The highest yield yet reported at Fowler, which is in the valley, is seven and one-half bushels an acre. The land on which this was raised was being held for sale at $75 an acre, but has now been taken off the market, as this year's crop has yielded $75 an acre on the part that was set to alfalfa. Other yields have been reported that run seven and one-half bushels an acre. One farmer threshed 223 bushels last week, and as seed of this kind is selling at $10 a bushel, it made a big income for the owner. Besides the seed crop at least two cuttings of hay are taken from the land, which adds to the profits. Another farmer came out to Fowler last spring and paid $11,000 cash

Boddington's Gigantic Cyclamen

The seed of Cyclamen is often sown too early in the year; from the middle of August to the end of October is the best time. The seedlings should be grown on to the flowering stage without any check whatever. When grown cool, the results are most satisfactory. Boddington's Gigantic Cyclamen are unequalled for size and quality of bloom. A magnificent strain of Cyclamen with flowers of extraordinary size and substance.

Gigantic White Butterfly. Pure white; immense flowers.

Gigantic Snowflake. The largest of all white Cyclamen.

Gigantic Cherry-red. Most brilliant and effective.

Gigantic Rose. Immense flowers of a pleasing shade of light rose.

Gigantic Pink. Exquisite shade of soft pink.

Gigantic Crimson. Most striking color; under artificial light appears to be almost luminous.

Gigantic Crimson and White. A magnificent flower of the largest type.

Gigantic Syringa Blue (new). A charming color.

Gigantic Lilac. A very pleasing color, lighting up well at night.

CINCINNATI

The Market.

Business last week was good and the cool weather was quite a factor in the market; consequently stock has been moving readily. Carnations are being received in fair quantity and have advanced to $2. Really good grades sell at $2.50 per hundred. Chrysanthemums are now a feature, and another week will see them more plentiful. They have been moving slowly, prices ranging from $15 to $25. Dahlias are still with us, and have never been better; they sell at $1 to $3 per hundred. Roses are better in quality than usually at this time; they fetch from $2 to $6. Violets have made their appearance, but as yet are of poor quality, selling at 35 cents per hundred.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society was held at the club rooms October 9, with President J. A. Peterson in the chair. About twenty-five members were present.

The various committees from the convention brought in their reports. The finance and souvenir book committee reported that all bills had been paid, and that there would be quite a snug little sum left for the treasury. The chair appointed George Bartlett and Ed Forter an auditing committee, to bring in a final report at the next meeting.

Mr. Peterson invited the club to hold the next regular meeting at his place, and the invitation was gladly accepted. This is to be a gala occasion, as we all enjoy a trip to the Peterson establishment. If indications point right, I may say that there will be a "full house" November 13 in Westwood. Amendments, or perhaps revision, of the by-laws will come up at the next meeting.

It seems as though the S. A. F. convention brought new life and enthusiasm into our society, and it is to be hoped that we will henceforth become more active than in the past.

Nathan Smith, Adrian, Mich., had a chrysanthemum before the judges. It was a good shade of pink and much admired, especially for its earliness.

Various Notes.

Will Murphy has returned from Michigan, where he spent his annual summer vacation. It is said that he takes much

PACIFIC COAST.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—Alfred Roedder has an adiantum that originated at his place several years ago that he says grows three feet high and sells for several times as much as Croweanum.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

There was a visible improvement in business last week, and with favorable climatic conditions we have greater expectations. Choice stock is not overplentiful, but we have hopes with the increasing mum supply. Monrovia and Queen are to be had in limited quantities and move at top prices. Arranged with autumn foliage, some elegant effects are to be had in sprays as well as window displays. Carnations are more plentiful, but not in oversupply. Roses are of better quality, but limited in quantity, with the usual daily clean-up.

President Taft being within our gates for a few days had a tendency to enliven business and to make the florists join him in that genial smile. The city was artistically decorated throughout for the occasion. Portland hotel was also decorated with palms and flowers, where the party was entertained and banqueted. Martin & Forbes had the work.

Various Notes.

Meier & Frank's department store opening gave an opportunity for the florists to reduce their surplus stock. Elegant arrangements were to be seen on every hand. Each florist had a share, but one in particular was especially favored.

Karl Gardner has returned to his former position as bookkeeper with Clarke Bros., also as assistant in the salesroom.

Martin Reukauf, of Bayersdorfer & Co., has been calling on the trade with an extensive line of samples. J. B. Teustmann, of the Pine Tree Silk Mills, also was a caller. Louis Goodfriend, of Wertheimer Bros., also was in town selling ribbon.

Mrs. L. W. McCoy, of Seattle, stopped en route home from an enjoyable eastern trip.

William H. Cornwall, of San Francisco, was a recent caller.

D. L. Thomas, of Salem, has recently taken over the range of Ben Taylor. He will enlarge the growing capacity and conduct a general retail business.

R. Kiel finds it profitable to flower cyclamen early; they fill the deficiency in blooming plants. E. R. C.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather remains rather unsettled at present, and the chances seem to be for a continuance of light showers. There has been but little sunshine the last week, and, as a consequence, indoor stock is not as plentiful as it usually is at this time. The price of carnations remains stationary, however. The best fancy stock averages from $3 to $3.50 per hundred, while the cheaper varieties cost the stores about one-half those prices. Enchantress seems to be the only sort that is at all plentiful, while pure whites are a close second.

With roses there has been little change in the last few days. Fancy stock cannot be had at any price. Fairly good Beauties cost the stores $1.50 to $2 per dozen. Bride and Maid are in better form and color, and are held by the wholesalers at from 50 cents to 75 cents per dozen. There is a fair supply of short-stemmed stock, which is in good demand for funeral designs.

Although asters are practically over for the season, a few late flowers are still seen. The chrysanthemum crop is not yet at its fullest, but the favorable weather is making it more plentiful daily. These can be bought at from $1 to $3 per hundred. Indoor grown stock is not quite equal to the demand, and the best blooms bring from $1.50 to $2.50 per dozen.

Gladioli are practically over for this year, and, from reports from some of the growers, the impression prevails that they have proven to be one of the best paying propositions handled for the San Francisco market this season. Such varieties as America, Augusta and Brenchleyensis have been in splendid demand at all times, and the chances are that they will be freely planted again for next season.

Dahlias have not sold as well as they should, judging by the quality and the low prices they could be bought for. The general public seems to have an idea that dahlias are not just the proper flowers for bouquets or house decorations. Another season, however, may find them the proper thing.

Asparagus and adiantum are plentiful at the present time, and the retailers are having no difficulty in getting plenty of long-stemmed stock. Sweet peas are completely off the list. Violets are getting more plentiful than they were, although it will take several days of good hard rain to put the soil in proper condition for them to be really at their best.

Various Notes.

George S. May, of the May Seed Co., reports a heavy demand for some sorts of narcissi and daffodils. This firm's bulbs arrived in splendid shape from Europe.

The Goertzain Co., of Burlingame, is cutting some extra fine early mums. Pelicano, Rossi & Co. and Podesta & Baldocchi handle all this firm's stock.

George E. Lewis, late of Omaha, Neb., is on a visit to San Francisco. He will leave for southern California in a few days.

SAN FRANCISCO'S BIG SHOW.

This is the week of the big Portola celebration in San Francisco and under the auspices of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society and the California State Floral Society, the florists of the vicinity will give the largest flower show ever held on the coast. The dates are October 14 to 16 and the location is Norman hall, Hotel Fairmont. The management is in the hands of H. Plath and Dan MacRorie. There is a premium list offering liberal rewards for first-class entries and including a large variety of stock. Not only have local florists and business firms contributed trophies, but big eastern florists also are represented on the premium list. There are a dozen or more silver cups and cut glass vases for the professionals. There also will be classes for amateurs and for school children, also a department of the exhibition for fruits.

UNDER the heading of Chrysanthemums in this issue is a paper by B. H. Thorne, widely known as a successful forcer of vegetables at Wooster, O., who discusses the num as a catch crop in the vegetable houses.

VEGETABLE GROWERS MEET.

The Greenhouse Vegetable Growers' Association of America is holding its second annual meeting this week at Ashtabula, O., and the meeting, together with the opportunity of inspecting the many vegetable growing establishments there, which are among the largest, most modern and most successfully conducted in the middle west, has drawn a good attendance of the vegetable growers of that section, and the representatives of the allied trades. Through the efforts of J. H. Rice there also is a considerable display of wares by the manufacturers of greenhouse materials and heating ap-

JOLIET, ILL.—C. W. Shepherd, for years a landscape planter in this city, and son of William Shepherd, manager of the Joliet Nurseries, has taken charge of the retail store of the Chicago Carnation Co., at the corner of Cass street and Casseday avenue. He will conduct the store in connection with his regular business. He plans many improvements.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.—Carl C. Reck has remodeled and redecorated the interior of his store, on Main street, and has made such alterations as will provide much more floor and window space. The work is Flemish oak, and the furniture and fittings throughout are finished in harmonizing shades of green. He celebrated the completion of the improvements by placing some unusually fine displays in the window. The stock comes from his own greenhouses.

THERE is a fine call for phloxes this fall, but what the trade wants is the best named varieties, not mixed sorts.

THE Bay State Nurseries, of North Abington, Mass., have recently placed several acres of additional area under cultivation. Land that was formerly swampy or waste has been transformed into valuable nursery grounds.

THE will of the late Edward O. Graham, head of the Graham Nursery Co., of Rochester, N. Y., was filed in probate court September 30. The estate, said to be valued at $10,000, is left to his wife. There are three daughters, all minors, none of whom is mentioned in the will.

J. H. PROST, city forester at Chicago, is doing good work. In the few months since the office was created he has done much to awaken public interest in trees, issuing several bulletins written with special reference to the conditions on city streets. Pamphlet No. 4, just out, is entitled "Trees; What, When and How to Plant," and gives full details with pictures.

THE H. L. Frost & Bartlett Co., Stamford, Conn., which recently was incorporated, states that its business is not that of a general nursery, although that was one of the items which were covered in the incorporation papers. "We are principally incorporated for the carrying on of landscape work and commercial entomology; that is, for the care of trees. At the present we have no nursery, and probably will not have one for several years, and possibly not at all."

PICEA NIGRA PUMILA.

Picea nigra pumila is an effective, low growing evergreen. The one illustrated measures twenty-seven feet in circumference and is three feet in height. It was planted twenty years ago on the grounds of Arthur Whittin, Whitinsville, Mass., where Thomas Howden is manager. It was transplanted in August, 1903, as it was getting too large for the space allotted to it originally.

BURR'S MANCHESTER NURSERIES

C. R. Burr, Manchester, Conn., is putting up a concrete storage building for nursery stock. The construction of the building is going on under the supervision of an expert in this particular line, from Rochester. The house will be 50x100 feet and will stand fourteen feet high. It will, of course, contain no side windows, but will be covered with a low pitched roof containing skylights and ventilators. The walls will be made of solid concrete a foot thick.

Mr. Burr has been in the nursery business for ten years, starting first as a sales agent. In the decade he has built up a large business and is now operating three nurseries. The Oakland street nursery covers about fifty acres of land. The one in Buckland contains nearly as many acres, and there is another in Durham of about forty acres. At the present time he is employing about forty men, and these are being kept busy preparing stock for shipment. In one patch on the Oakland street place he has 15,000 apple trees which must be shipped this fall. He has a bigger demand for apple than can be filled. Recently he had 130,000 peach trees budded. Besides fruit trees, Mr. Burr grows many varieties of hardy shrubs, roses and flowering plants. He has also under cultivation a large amount of ornamental stock, trees and shrubs.

The Preservation of Historic Trees

This is a matter which is attracting attention of thoughtful people everywhere. Historical societies and village-improvement associations are interesting themselves in the preservation of trees, many of which are century-old landmarks.

I have been particularly successful in doing this sort of work as evidenced by examples to be found among the historic trees of Mt. Vernon, notably the restoration of the Holly planted by George Washington, which had been so severely injured by wind storms and decay that its restoration was considered hopeless. The top of the tree was crowned and the weakened branches bolted to a reinforcing rod, and the tree now has a new lease of life.

Another example was the restoration of the famous Liberty Tree at Annapolis, Md. Probably more cement and reinforcing material was used in this tree than on any similar job in the country but the tree is now as solid as a rock and is likely to withstand the wear and tear of several centuries.

The art of tree surgery is comparatively new, but it is based on scientific principles of plant growth and the knowledge of the source of disease and decay. After decay has been arrested and all the dead and useless limbs removed I give special attention to new growth and the proper feeding of the tree, in order that it may have fresh vigor.

I will give personal attention to any inquiries which the readers of the Florists' Review may send me regarding any trees which for sentimental or other reasons they would like preserved for generations to come.

I undertake the management of orchards as well as all kinds of ornamental plantations, grading, surveying, making of flower gardens and herbaceous borders, and give professional advice on estate management

THERE is a fine call for phloxes this fall, but what the trade wants is the best named varieties, not mixed sorts.

THE Bay State Nurseries, of North Abington, Mass., have recently placed several acres of additional area under cultivation. Land that was formerly swampy or waste has been transformed into valuable nursery grounds.

THE will of the late Edward O. Graham, head of the Graham Nursery Co., of Rochester, N. Y., was filed in probate court September 30. The estate, said to be valued at $10,000, is left to his wife. There are three daughters, all minors, none of whom is mentioned in the will.

J. H. PROST, city forester at Chicago, is doing good work. In the few months since the office was created he has done much to awaken public interest in trees, issuing several bulletins written with special reference to the conditions on city streets. Pamphlet No. 4, just out, is entitled "Trees; What, When and How to Plant," and gives full details with pictures.

which the S. A. F. visited at the time of its convention at Asheville, in North Carolina, is remarkable. The forests, which cover 130,000 acres, are made profitable by the production of various forms of material.

Four million feet of lumber, 5,000 cords of tannic-acid wood and fuel, 1,000 cords of tan bark and several hundred cords of pulp wood are cut every year. At the same time the forest, through wise management, is bettered and is steadily increasing in value. Workmen employed along the boundaries of the forest do duty as fire guards. Thus fire protection is secured, at least throughout all the accessible parts of the tract.

In connection with all lumbering operations permanent logging roads are built. These minimize the present cost of transportation, and will greatly reduce the cost of marketing future crops. Thus the extension of the roads is steadily adding to the investment value of the forest. Moreover, they serve also as a network of fire lines. Forest planting is practiced where fire will not threaten its success.

The experimental work in silviculture which is done at Biltmore is certain to make important additions to the science and practice of forestry.

LENOX, MASS.

The regular meeting of the Lenox Horticultural Society was held Saturday, October 2, and was largely attended, President A. Jenkins occupying the chair. Charles Trethewey and Joseph Pybus were unanimously elected active members of the society.

G. Foulsham, W. Jack and A. Bond were appointed as arrangement committee for the forthcoming exhibition, which will be held in the Town hall, October 26 and 27, and promises to be one of the best the society has ever had. Special interest is centered in the group of miscellaneous plants arranged for effect, to occupy a space 8x13, for which Henry A. Dreer offers a silver cup, to be won twice before becoming the property of the exhibitor. This cup was won by E. Jenkins in 1907, and in 1908 by F. Heeremans. Some fine groups of orchids are expected, and the classes calling for individual specimens of orchids will be sharply contested. Roses, carnations and mums are promising and competition in the classes for these flowers will be keen. Vegetables, which are a conspicuous feature of our annual exhibition, will be fully up to the standard of past years, thus assuring an exhibition of the highest order.

A welcome visitor at the society's meeting was H. A. Barnard, representing Stuart Low & Co., Bush Hill Park, Middlesex, England. G. H. I.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Several days of warm, sunny weather have done little to relieve the struggle for flowers. Roses are not any too plentiful; still, if other flowers were to be had in any quantity, the rose situation would not be so bad. A few white mums made their appearance Monday and, with a little more sun, these will soon be arriving in quantity.

The whole trouble lies with the carnations. For every flower arriving at the wholesale houses there seems to be a half dozen buyers. Those florists who have some glass of their own devoted to carnations are indeed fortunate just at present. The quality of the carnations is not bad, if only the supply would increase.

The demand for house plants is good. Bostonias are more popular than ever, and many dozens are sold daily. Fancy ferns also are in good demand. Ficus pandurata is quite popular with the buyers of more expensive plants. Some of the retailers do a big business in filling fern dishes, and while it takes much of this work to run into money, still it all helps.

The baseball bugs were buzzing around on Detroit's streets Sunday and Monday, and whole swarms of them were seen on the avenue, wearing yellow mums. This special demand for yellow chrysanthemums has cleaned up the Detroit market, and out-of-town stock had to be used to fill out the gaps. J. F. Sullivan had several hundred sent from Chicago, and up to noon on Monday he reported a good sale.

Various Notes.

An automobile which is attracting much attention on the streets of Detroit is the elaborate delivery car of Breitmeyer's Sons. Seemingly the question of expense was not thought of when the car was designed. The motive power is derived from an engine of the Grabowsky type. The engine is placed away up in front, under the dash, giving easy access to it in case of trouble. Heavy solid tires do away with the cost of tire maintenance. The body is larger than the average delivery wagon. Mr. Breitmeyer is well pleased with his investment.

The Traver-Bird Co.'s store was elaborately decorated for the annual opening by B. Schroeter, who has been doing the decorating for this firm for many years.

The large dry goods store of J. L. Hudson was appropriately decorated by Breitmeyer's men for the fall opening. H. S.

SHASTA

SEEING IS BELIEVING

Therefore we ask everyone interested in Carnations to come and see our new white Carnation Shasta growing. Plants benched early in August are in full crop now, carrying from 10 to 20 buds per plant. Have been cutting good blooms since Sept. 15. As a money making carnation it has no equal. The quality is right, too. Scored 85 points at Indianapolis, April 11, 1908; 85 points, Indianapolis, Jan. 12, 1909; 89 points, A. C. S., at Indianapolis, January 27-28, 1909. Traveled to Boston, Mass., in Feb., 1909, and scored 87 points; 89 points at Springfield, Ill., in March, 1909. Never scored less than 85 points. You can see it growing at either Indianapolis or Tewksbury.

We are booking orders now for January delivery, at $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Trade conditions continue fair. There has been no special rush along any line, and stock has been more plentiful. Chrysanthemums are coming as fast as the market will take them and there are some fine violets. Carnations continue short of the demand, but no hardship will be felt from now on, as there are plenty of cheap roses and chrysanthemums.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club met Tuesday evening, October 5, in the Dutch room at the Fort Pitt hotel. The surroundings were much more handsome than the club has been accustomed to, and included a decoration of specimen plants of Pandanus Veitchii, crotons and other fine things grown by that firm.

The committee appointed for the carnation convention is working. The finance committee already has a number of subscriptions and there is no fear of the result.

Neal McCallum, who has charge of the West End park, had an exhibit of annuals and perennials grown from seed and gave an interesting talk on them.

P. S. Randolph, who occupied the chair for the evening, was requested to give some information on growing the kind of plants he exhibited. He gave quite a lengthy and interesting talk, answering all questions, and wound up by saying: "Boys, there are only two things necessary, plenty of heat and watering." Mr. Randolph also showed Chrysanthemum Yellow Polly Rose. This is a sport which they have grown for several years, a good early light yellow.

Frank Crooks showed plants of odontoglossum and Cattleya labiata, for which he was awarded a certificate of merit.

Jas. Moore, of North Side park, exhibited blooms of aristolochia, commonly known as the goose flower.

Tuesday, November 2, will be the next field day. Members will meet at Schenley conservatories at 10 a. m. and, after looking at all the good things there, will visit a number of other places, filling in the entire day. As this was a great success last year, a large crowd is expected to attend.

Various Notes.

Geo. L. Huscroft, of Steubenville, O., has just completed two houses, 30x100, with all the latest improvements.

Hoo-Hoo.

J. M. Jones has purchased nine acres of ground on Highland avenue, Summit Park, for $9,250. The property is on the Charleroi car line, about a mile beyond Castle Shannon. Part of it is woodland and the balance meadow. It is almost level and lies on a high plateau. Mr. Jones will use it for the growing of hardy decorative plants. He will also erect a handsome bungalow on the property and expects to make it one of the garden spots of the county.

Nephrolepis Elegantissima Compacta

Another New Fern Originating with us

To be introduced fall 1909

Of all the valuable introductions in ferns that we have sent out, beginning with the Pierson (Nephrolepis Piersoni) we consider the Elegantissima compacta the most valuable of all, particularly from a commercial standpoint.

While this resembles Elegantissima in a general way, it is far superior to that variety on account of its perfect habit. Yet it can hardly be compared with Elegantissima in a general way, because it occupies a place by itself and is as distinct from Elegantissima as that variety is from Piersoni—in fact, it bears the same relation to Elegantissima that Scottii does to Bostoniensis. Elegantissima compacta has an ideal habit. The fronds are considerably shorter than those of Elegantissima, and it is a more compact plant. It throws a great many more crowns naturally, making a very bushy, dwarf, compact plant. The difference between the two varieties may be seen at a glance.

Fine, strong plants, 2 1/4-in. pots, $5.00 per doz., $35.00 per 100; 4-in. pots, $7.50 per doz., $50.00 per 100; 6-in. pans, $1.50 each; 8-in. pans, $3.00 each.

We make a specialty of all kinds of Nephrolepis, carrying a large stock of all sizes at all times—Piersoni, Elegantissima, Superbissima, Bostoniensis, Scottii, Whitmani, Amerpohlii, etc., F. R. PIERSON CO., Tarrytown-on-Hudson, New York.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Business showed a slight general improvement last week. Funeral work has remained brisk and several weddings and early social functions have contributed materially. Carnations show a big improvement, both as to quantity and quality, while roses are much better. Early chrysanthemums find ready sale and violets command attention.

Various Notes.

William H. Tarbox, of East Greenwich, was at Danbury, Conn., last week, where he made a big showing of dahlias.

Someone with a strong arm picked up five rubber plants in the doorway of Joseph C. Kopelman's store October 1 and walked off with them. The loss was reported to the police.

Thomas Galvin and wife, of Newport, have sold two lots, with improvements, on Harrison avenue and also land on Bedlow avenue, Newport.

E. C. Morey, for several years with Nathan D. Pierce, at the Norwood Greenhouses, has associated himself with L. Bilsborough and has purchased the Reservoir Avenue Greenhouses, in this city, of J. Register.

T. J. Johnson & Co., Edward Brooks manager, have been busy with two large funerals and one wedding order, in addition to transient work.

The East Providence Greenhouses of G. T. McCullough report an unusually busy week on funeral work.

O. Schultz, of Westerly, was here October 8. He has just purchased the greenhouses of John M. Keena, in that town, and will take possession of them in the spring.

G. Hampton, representing Joseph G. Neidinger, Philadelphia, was in the city last week.

John Forbes, gardener for Mrs. William B. Leeds at Newport, has accepted a similar position with Perry Belmont.

Harry Budlong, son of James A. Budlong, for many years associated with J. A. Budlong & Sons Co. at Auburn, has severed his connection with that concern in order to devote his energies to other business enterprises.

Patrick F. Reynolds, gardener for Mrs. J. P. Kernochan, of Newport, is receiving the congratulations of his numerous friends on his marriage, October 5.

The Rhode Island State College, at Kingston, has received a carload of palms for its horticultural department, the gift of Mrs. William L. McKee, of Bristol. The palms are valued at $1,000.

Arthur Griffin has resigned as gardener for the E. T. Gerry estate at Newport and the vacancy has been filled by William Mackay. W. H. M.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Trade last week was far ahead of last season. Stock of all kinds was cleaned up early and the market had the appearance of the good old times of years past.

Carnations were unusually scarce, which made the demand for roses good. Dahlias were also in good demand, it being impossible to fill orders for light colors. Violets, valley and Beauties also sold well. There are not enough mums coming in to supply the demand as yet.

Various Notes.

John Kirchner had a busy week in funeral work, being a heavy buyer in the market.

Knoble Bros. report trade as improving, having had a fine run of cut flower orders Saturday.

The new firm, Jones-Russell Co., reports business as good, far above expectations for the first week.

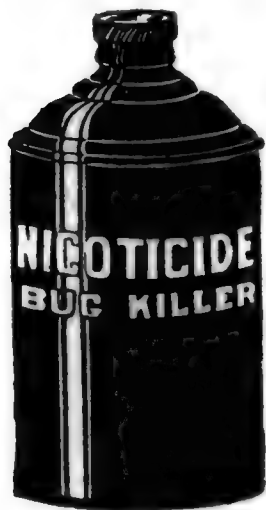

G. P. Braund is sending in a fine cut of October Frost at present.

The F. R. Williams Co. is sending in some fine Richmond. Killarney and Kaiserin.

Westman & Getz had a beautiful window last week, a country scene, with a rail fence, and the different wild flowers arranged about made it quite attractive.

Miss F. S. Evans, of the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., is spending a week with friends in Pittsburgh. B.

BELLEVILLE, ILL.—G. A. Fuchs & Son, the vegetable gardeners, have let the contract for the erection of two greenhouses, each 21x130 feet.

Facts Worth Learning

Look, brother mine! Listen to what the Philadelphia hustler, GODFREY ASCHMANN, the great foreseer, has to say. He never goes wrong. He predicts prosperity. It is now knocking at your door. Are you prepared for the rush?

TESTIMONY FROM MICHELL.

I personally visited Mr. Aschmann's greenhouses September 21, 1909, and found that the Araucarias, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, Boston, Whitmani, Scottii, Amerpohilli, Todeaoides ferns, Rubber Plants, Kentias and Arecas are indeed A No. 1. Have never seen any better plants. The Gloire de Lorraine begonias in 6-in. pots are a perfect wonder, bushy and clean. Have never seen his greenhouses filled with plants as good as they are now.

F. J. MICHELL, of the firm of Henry F. Michell Co., 1018 Market St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 7, 1909.

Mr. Godfrey Aschmann, Philadelphia, Pa.

Dear Sir: Enclosed please find check to cover the 100 Araucarias which you shipped us August 31, 1909. They came on in fine shape and we were pleased.

Respectfully,

PANSY PLANTS—Continued.

This is the way we select our seed plants. If a plant, in the field, produces a bloom three inches or more in diameter and of fine texture, form and color, we stake it and, if the second bloom equals or exceeds it, we transfer to the seed beds. We want you to try these thoroughbreds, grown from our own seed. 100 plants, 50c; 1000 plants, $4.00. Cash.

Bulbs and Tuberous Rooted Plants.

By C. L. ALLEN. A complete history, description, methods of propagation and full directions for the successful culture of bulbs in the garden, dwelling or greenhouse. The illustrations which embellish this work have been drawn from nature, and have been engraved especially for this book. Cloth. $1.50

Insects and Insecticides.

By CLARENCE M. WEED, D. SC. A practical manual concerning noxious insects and the methods of preventing their injuries. Profusely illustrated. A generally useful handbook on noxious insects. It covers the whole field of insect pests very thoroughly and is especially valuable for its complete and up-to-date methods of fighting insects. The work is intensely practical. All the important insect pests are described and remedies for them, and methods of preventing their injuries described in detail. Cloth. $1.50

Handbook of Plants and General Horticulture.

By PETER HENDERSON. This new edition comprises about 50 per cent more genera than the former one, and embraces the botanical name, derivation, natural order, etc., together with a short history of the different genera, concise instructions for their propagation and culture, and all the leading local or common English names, together with a comprehensive glossary of botanical and technical terms. Plain instructions are also given for the cultivation of the principal vegetables, fruits and flowers. Cloth. $3.00

Henderson's Picturesque Gardens and Ornamental Gardening.

By CHARLES HENDERSON. A volume containing half-tone illustrations of the prettiest and most famous gardens and parks of the world, vividly portraying the garden and landscape effects, plant groupings, decorative bedding, herbaceous garden borders, formal gardens, lawn gardens, Italian gardens and English gardens, rock gardens, wild bog gardens, subtropical gardens, sunken gardens, gardens, rosariums, hardy ferneries, arches, festoons, etc., picturesquely draped with vines as numerous other garden embellishments. Each illustration is described and explained. Cloth. $2.50

Greenhouse Management.

By PROF. L. R. TAFT, of Michigan Agricultural College. A manual for florists and flower lovers, forcing of flowers, vegetables and fruits in greenhouses and the propagation and care of house plants, and of all the plants commonly cultivated by florists, amateurs, and explains in a thorough manner the methods that have been found most successful in growing them. Particular attention is paid to the growing of cut flowers, the growing of fruits under glass, and special value will be the directions for treating plants when attacked by insects and fungi. The preparation of the soil, the use of various manures, composts, fertilizers, watering, ventilating and heating receive careful and minute attention. Cloth. 400 pages. $1.50

ERIE, PA.

The Market.

We have had no frost up to this time and the chances are good for several weeks of sunshine after a week of cold, rainy weather. Chrysanthemums have made their appearance and are in great demand. American Beauties and speciosum lilies are of choice quality. Carnations are getting longer-stemmed, and tea roses are holding their own. Violets, gardenias, orchids and valley are much in demand since the party season has opened.

Various Notes.

P. Randolph, representing the Thompson & Norris Co., of Brooklyn, was in the city on business last week.

William F. Kasting and family, who have been spending the summer months in Erie, have returned to their home in Buffalo.

Mrs. Minnie Trost, a relative of Miss Lena Trost, of Trost & Steinfurth, died last week. The funeral occurred Monday, October 4. Many beautiful floral designs were sent as tokens of the esteem in which the deceased was held.

Otto S. Loeb, representing William Scharrath, of New York, was in the city October 9.

The new Elks building, on Eighth and Peach streets, was dedicated last week. One day was set aside to welcome the public, and each guest was presented with a carnation and invited to a buffet lunch in the dining room, consisting of lemonade, punch and wafers. The floral decorations were profuse. One band was stationed in the dining room on the first floor, surrounded by palms and ferns, while another band made merry on the second floor in the auditorium. Large palms and ferns were seen all through the building, with here and there a basket of roses or other floral emblems sent in by friends of the Elks wishing them success in their undertaking. Flags and bunting were displayed on the outside of the building. The decorations were much admired. B. P.

SOUTH MANCHESTER, CONN.—All kinds of outdoor vegetables were still being gathered in this section as late as October 9, and prices were low. The growers of fancy vegetables under glass are looking for frost.

Greenhouse Heating.

If subscribers will state clearly the details of their heating problems, the REVIEW will give in this column the opinion of a man thoroughly familiar with the practical side of greenhouse heating.

CAPACITY OF BOILER.

What is the heating capacity in square feet of glass of a wrought iron boiler five feet long over all, thirty inches in diameter, with sixty-five 1½-inch flues? It is a bricked-in boiler, with a grate surface of about twenty-five inches square. Can this boiler be economically used as a hot water boiler if there are two openings tapped for 2-inch pipe? The boiler has no dome.
A. B. R.

The boiler you describe is not built according to standard dimensions, but it will carry 1,600 feet of 2-inch pipe for hot water heating. A boiler of this type is neither economical for hot water or steam, but can be used if the coal bill is no object. Two 2½-inch flows and two 2½-inch returns will be the proper size of openings.

A COLORADO RANGE.

I would like to have your information as to the best way for laying the heating pipes in our greenhouses. We have two greenhouses 25x100 each and want to heat them with hot water. The boiler that we have is a twenty-five horse-power locomotive type steam boiler and we have changed it to hot water and tapped its 4-inch flows and returns. Each house has four benches. From the boiler we want to use 4-inch flow and return, and 1½-inch returns from the 4-inch. Now, what size flows do we want to use from the 4-inch from the boiler, to come back with 1½-inch returns? How many flows should we use under each bench? And how many returns under each bench? What rise should the flow pipe have, and what fall on the return? We want to heat the houses at about 45 to 55 degrees when the weather is at zero.
S. S. N.

To maintain 55 degrees at zero each house 25x100 will require four 2-inch flows and twelve 1½-inch returns. A simple arrangement would be to place one 2-inch flow and three 1½-inch returns under each of the four benches of each house. Slant all pipes up from the boiler one inch in every ten feet and place an air vent at the high point of each coil. The 4-inch main flow will carry both houses, but it should be reduced to a 3-inch main after the first house is taken off. This also applies to the main return.

PIPING LETTUCE HOUSE.

I wish to make the following inquiry through your paper and trust it is not asking too much to insert it: We wish to pipe an even-span house 50x130 with 2-inch pipe for hot water. Please tell us how to place the pipe, and how many runs of pipe are necessary to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees during the day, with a minimum outdoor temperature of 30 degrees below zero. The house will be used for lettuce and other vegetables and has no raised benches, although, if possible, we should like to arrange the piping so that raised benches could be installed later if necessary without altering the piping. Would it be advisable to run the main overhead to the far end of the house and then drop it down and branch into the coils? What size of main would you suggest?
C. H.

To maintain a temperature of 60 degrees under the severe conditions named it will be well to use a square foot of radiating surface for every two and one-half feet of glass. Just how much glass there is in the house in question cannot be told very accurately from the data given, but supposing that there are more than three feet of glass in the walls and that the roof has about the usual slope, four 4-inch flows and six 2-inch returns should give the temperature desired. However, it would probably be rather more satisfactory to lessen the number of the returns by increasing the size, and twenty-seven 2½-inch returns would give about the same results.

Rather more than one-half of the pipes should be placed upon the side walls. One flow could be upon each plate and the others could be just under the pur-lins. The returns, other than those upon the walls, could be in vertical coils along GENTLEMEN:—Yours of the 11th at hand. The Wilks heater bought from you last fall has done finely. We burned coke and it has done just fine. By filling up the magazine about 9 or 10 o'clock and closing it up all around, we found a good fire in it by 7 a. m. The grate is one of the best arrangements we ever saw for an ordinary sized plant. The Market.

There has been quite an increase in the cuttings into the market the last week, but the demand has been better, so that the supply was not greatly exceeded, except perhaps in red roses, which have been particularly plentiful and greatly in excess of the demand. American Beauties are plentiful, but sell well and are generally of good quality in any desired. While Killarney is a popular rose, and while Brides are getting better every day, the White Killarney seems to have the call. Killarney also is a better seller than Maid. Carnations are not yet any too plentiful; the supply coming in hardly meets the demand. Some good White Enchantress and Enchantress are seen.

All outdoor flowers received their death blow October 8, when a hard frost put them out of the running for another year.

Chrysanthemums are now on the market in somewhat limited quantities. The demand is good and has kept up the price. Some houses are showing some good pot plants, which move fairly well.

Violets are now in season and a limited number are being picked, and are good. Take it all in all, business has improved since the coming of cool weather.

Various Notes.

The Colorado Florists' Club meets Thursday, October 14, at the store of the Wholesale Florists' Co. Nominations of officers will take place. It is also to be a social gathering, with refreshments and a good time generally.

T. Loken has opened a flower stand at the Grand grocery, on Fifteenth street.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

Roses! This was a city of roses last week; roses of any variety and any grade, cheap in the cheapest sense of the word. And, owing to the unseasonably warm weather, there was no demand for them. Carnations are scarcer than ever and promise to be so for some weeks to come. Dahlias are fine this fall, with great, large, toppy blooms. Other stock continues in good profusion and chrysanthemums are coming to the market in all colors now, with first-class blooms and foliage.

Various Notes.

Carl Lindskoog is thoroughly satisfied with his extra store on Cedar avenue. Business is good at both places, the demand in the southern part of the city being good.

Wm. Desmond is back at the store, feeling much benefited by the northern climate.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. has some primroses coming into bloom, and is also showing a fine stock of table ferns.

Henry Kusik & Co. opened for business October 7 and are surprised at the good start, and the way orders came in.

R. A. Latham had a good wedding decoration last week, using for the most part outdoor flowers.

Wm. Topel and Mr. Giebel have opened a retail flower store on the east side, in the neighborhood of University avenue. There appears to be a good field for a store in this locality.

DAYTON, OHIO.

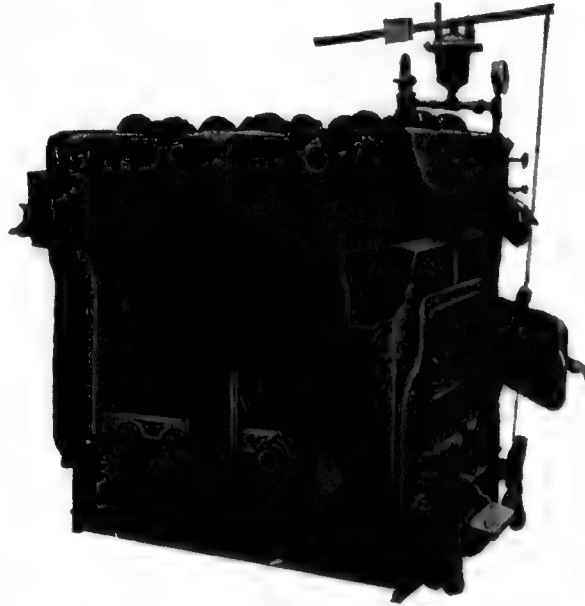

The Market.

Business in the last two weeks has been booming, an extraordinary demand for funeral designing being chiefly responsible for the spurt. While it is nice to have a rushing business, still it is not quite so nice when it is a difficult matter to get the stock you need. Everything has been in good crop, and seemingly as plentiful this season as in corresponding seasons, but there has been so great a demand that it has been an impossibility to compete with it. We find that these conditions are not only true in Dayton, but in surrounding cities, which depend chiefly upon Dayton for stock when their own limited supply runs out. It has been no easy task for the wholesaler to take his orders, and a harder task for him to fill them; and likewise the retailer has had his trouble, for he never knew until his order arrived how much he would be short, or what he would get as a substitute for that which he had ordered. With such conditions prevailing, both wholesaler and retailer had no trouble in clearing up on everything resembling a flower.

White and Enchantress carnations have been in great demand, for red and cerise pink have been more abundant. There has been a good supply of Beauties of fine quality, sufficient to fill all orders. Pink roses, such as My Maryland, Bridesmaid and Killarney, have been more plentiful than Brides. Perles have also been in good crop. The quality of roses in general has been excellent. The sudden change in the weather, from hot to cold, has so checked the giganteum lilies that in the last two weeks there have been few of them. There was a limited quantity of valley, for which a good market was found. Up to the present time there are few chrysanthemums to be had.

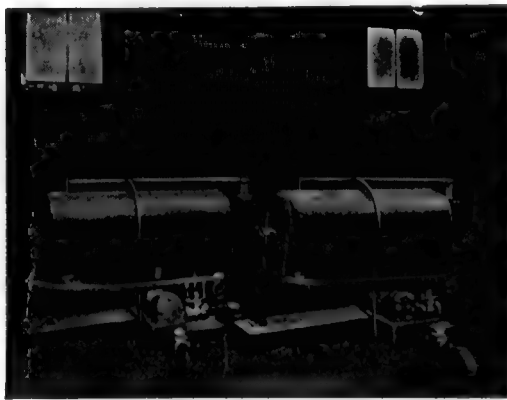

The first rain in about five or six weeks came October 10 and it surely was most welcome. Since the rain the atmosphere has steadily become cooler.

Various Notes.

The Miami Floral Co. has been cutting some excellent Beauties. The concern also is cutting some fine carnations.

Miss Ruby Bartholomew spent a few days in Newport, Ky., this week.

Mrs. Elizabeth Young reports last week's business to have been satisfactory in every respect and states that the outlook for trade in the coming season is most encouraging.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Bartholomew spent October 6 at Richmond, where they attended the fall festival and were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Evans.

"Everything is progressing nicely, business is exceptionally good and we have everything pretty well housed for winter," is the report of the Dayton Floral Co.

Five of the employees of the Dayton Floral Co. spent October 10 at Columbus, where they visited several growers' establishments. Their report is that while stock looked first-class in Columbus, it does not look any better than that in Dayton.

Wm. C. Hood, who for the last six months has been employed by the Miami Floral Co., left October 11 for Richmond, Ind., where he remained until October 13. From there he went to Chicago and the latter part of the week will leave Chicago for Los Angeles, Cal., where he will make his home with his only son, whom he has George Bartholomew has assumed a new title, that of grandpa. Although the title may sound ancient, he assures his friends that he is still a young man. October 1 a son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Ray Bartholomew.

PALMER, MASS.

At the present date, October 5, we have not had any frost and everything in the plant line is dying a natural death.

Here at the State hospital, this year, we are growing 1,200 mums in benches. We had a few Golden Glow, which are just coming in, and they are extra fine. The rest of the mums are looking well. We have mums nearly six feet tall and Major Bonnaffons nearly as tall. We have one house containing 1,400 carnation plants, which were housed in August and are in fine shape to give a good crop of blooms. We also have a new house for cucumbers.

This year we tried growing geraniums in pots for fall and winter flowering and they are a success. They were grown in coldframes, the pots plunged into the soil and sashes over them, with air on. Where they were repotted from 4-inch to 6-inch pots, we kept some inside of the greenhouses, but they did so poorly that we removed them to the frames again.

Our ferns did extra well this year. They also were grown in coldframes. The sashes were shaded with cheesecloth. We grow them in rotted manure and straw. The varieties grown were Boston, Amerpohlii and Whitmani. The Amerpohlii made the best plants and gave the most runners.

We are also growing 700 Easter lilies and 8,000 bulbs for forcing.

IN MICHIGAN.

G. Van Bochove & Bro., Kalamazoo, plan to build six large greenhouses in the spring. Each house will be 30x300 feet, and the firm's present glass area of 125,000 feet will be increased to 180,000 feet when the additions are made. This year's improvements on the firm's Portage avenue property include a new house 30x300 for violets and sweet peas.

Shore & Haigh are enlarging and improving their greenhouses at Evart.

A. J. Tozer is rebuilding his greenhouses at Otsego, making the walls of cement.

Eugene Griggs is starting a greenhouse plant at Tecumseh. He has completed one house.

J. H. Grohe, florist of Benton Harbor, is convalescent after a long illness with typhoid fever.

The Market.

Business continues to be satisfactory and flowers are a little more plentiful, although at no time last week was there an oversupply. Roses were the best sellers, and prices were good. Some of the best brought $2.50 per dozen. Other grades sold as low as 75 cents, but not many of this grade were sold, buyers preferring the better grades. Carnations are more plentiful, but the call was mostly for roses, so carnations were slow sellers, though the quality for this season of the year was never better.

Some fine Beauties are coming in and are selling nicely at from $2.50 to $6 per dozen. Some extra good Killarney and My Maryland are being shipped in from Chicago, and are commanding top prices. My Maryland is making good here, and is the best seller.

Mums are moving as fast as could be expected, as there are not many calls for them until after a good killing frost. Dahlias are good and are selling well. Cosmos, cosmos and more cosmos, and they are having good calls; the blooms are fine. Some good lilies are in the market. Green goods are in good supply.

This is horse show week, and some good orders are booked. All the stores are having their share. Several good window displays are to be seen in the flower shops.

Various Notes.

Anders Rasmussen has several houses of Brides and Maids in full crop, and they are a sight to behold. The quality is good and the color of the Maids is hard to beat. Carnations and other roses here are looking fine.

Nanz & Neuner have a display for the horse show which is attracting much attention. They are cutting quantities of dahlias, cosmos and other field stock at their nursery in St. Matthews.

Henry Fuchs has a nice window display for the horse show.

John Bettman, the carnation grower at New Albany, Ind., has some good carnations. He has built a new house this summer, and will grow some sweet peas and carnations in it. Mr. Bettman has a neat and up-to-date place, and grows good stock, most of which is disposed of in this market.

PORT ARTHUR, TEXAS.

C. H. Crawford, who came here from Excelsior, Minn., where he formerly conducted the Endeavor Greenhouse, has established the Port Arthur Greenhouses, on Galveston avenue near Procter street, and among his other activities conducts a column devoted to horticulture in the Port Arthur News. The purpose of this column is to give to growers of flowers and vegetables every week in the simplest form just the information they need in order to make their gardening operations successful. In addition to being of much interest and value to the people of the town, Mr. Crawford's cultural directions are extremely good advertising for his new business.

WHEELING, W. VA.—Frank C. Seibert has added two greenhouses, besides making extensive general improvements.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

Twenty-four members of the Springfield Florists' Club went via trolley line to Urbana Monday evening, October 11, upon invitation of Roger H. Murphey, president-elect of the club. Owing to a lack of power, due to the cutting of certain feed wires to permit of moving a house across the tracks, the car was an hour late in arriving, but this only served to whet the appetites of the florists for the bountiful repast in store for them. In the spacious packing sheds attached to the greenhouses inviting tables had been spread, and no time was lost in seating the guests, who were promptly served by a corps of waiters headed by the sons of the host. A course supper, including scalloped oysters, baked beans, salads, pickles, boiled ham, sandwiches, ice cream, cake and coffee, was disposed of with a keen relish, after which cigars were enjoyed.

Lanterns were then provided, and a number of inspection parties went through the two ranges of houses fully stocked with well advanced crops of roses, which showed that R. H. Murphey's Sons are well prepared for the anticipated heavy demand for rose plants.

A cold storm of rain and sleet having come up, the contemplated business session was dispensed with and the installation of officers deferred until the November meeting, the guests deeming it advisable to make a dash for the ten o'clock homeward car. Hasty congratulations were extended to the host for his hospitality, which will doubtless be more formally and decorously recognized at the next monthly meeting. GE DALE.

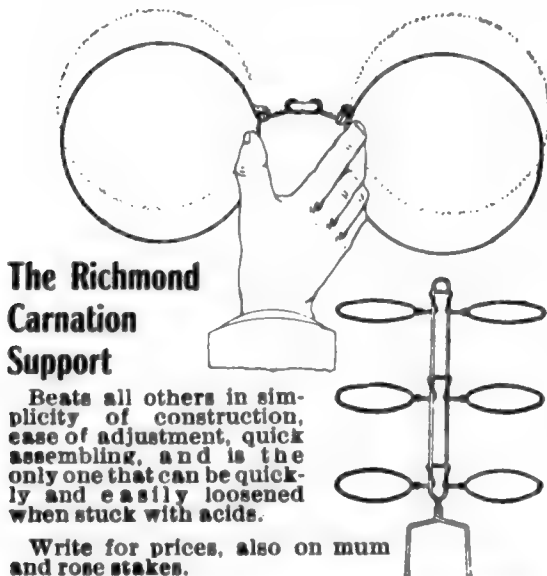

NEW BRITAIN, CONN.

The prospects are bright for a good business here this winter, as the factories are nearly all running on full time.

Carl Lorenzen, the Church street florist, has just returned from Germany, where he spent several months.

Business is booming at Clinton Street Gardens & Greenhouses. They are about through marketing their large tomato crop and the greenhouses are now nearly all planted to carnations, which look fine. R. B. V.

A Greenhouse Fact of Importance

Greenhouse designing and building is a business by itself. It is no more possible for a general builder to give you a practical, satisfactory greenhouse than it is for the local blacksmith to make an automobile.

If you want a greenhouse designed harmoniously, artistically—a house that will yield the greatest amount of plants and flowers with least trouble—one that is built to withstand the destructive conditions that must exist in every greenhouse, then go to a professional greenhouse builder. We are that kind of builders. We build a distinctly different kind of house from any one else—no one else can build it, the patent is ours.

It has an all steel, all galvanized frame of unusual strength but extreme lightness. It is, in fact, the lightest greenhouse built, and the lighter your house, the more and better your flowers will be.

Our catalogue tells interestingly and illustrates plainly just why U-Bar greenhouses are the best houses for you. Let us send you this catalogue.

Our Way of Building a Palm House and Wings

We use a strong but light, flat steel rafter construction in place of the usual heavy, shade casting rafters and supports. This construction has no match for endurance. The curvilinear roof allows extra headroom for the growing of the taller plants on the side benches. The whole combination makes a house unequalled for pleasure, giving durability and profitable growing. This house is one of many attractive ones we have erected which are shown in our circular. Shall we send you the circular?

The same number of hands can handle twice the number of plants—Because you don't have to cover Sunlight Sash

The results under the Sunlight are so remarkable compared with single glass sash, that truck gardeners double their beds. The present company is 18 times as large as when it started 2 years ago, solely because the sash makes good. It helps you beat the other man to market.

Sunlight Sash do not have to be covered even in zero weather. Children can prop them open for airing. $\frac{3}{4}$ of your work is done away with.

Sun light comes through the glass raising the temperature of bed on coldest days to a good growing warmth. Little of the warmth leaves it at night because the dry air between the two layers of glass is the best non-conductor there is, better than mats or boards and cost less.

Sunlight Sash lets in all the light there is. You can get "lettuce heads that will fill a 4 qt. measure and as tender as you could possibly have them" — "young tomatoes when your neighbors' haven't bloomed yet" — plants 2 and 3 inches when in the next bed under the single glass sash, the plants are not through.

One truck gardener near Louisville tested single and double sash side by side. He now has 144 Double Glass Sash and couldn't be induced to go back to the old single glass sash. The Sunlight is too profitable.

QUAINT DAY

OF FLOWERS

ALL SAINTS' FLORAL FESTIVAL.

Great Day in New Orleans.

In the crescent city of New Orleans, quaint town of Old World customs, All Saints' day is to the public, and to the florists what Memorial day is in the north—the one day of all the year when every sepulcher must needs bear its flowers of remembrance.

All Saints' day is as broad as the Roman Catholic church, a festival introduced because of the impossibility of keeping a separate day for every saint. First regularly instituted by Gregory IV., in 835, and appointed to be celebrated November 1, it has been observed for more than a thousand years, but nowhere in the New World so universally or so beautifully as in New Orleans. There it is the day of universal decoration of graves, of paying homage to the dead, and the cemeteries, themselves unlike any others in all the land, are thronged from morning until night. None is so humble that his last resting place is left unadorned by those who hold his memory dear; the grave of the laborer and the tomb of the city's bravest are equally remembered; women in silks and satins and women in garments attesting lives of toil and sacrifice kneel together with their flowers and offer prayers for the souls of the dead.

Real Cities of the Dead.

To the visitor from afar nothing about this old city of the south, with its quaint French quarter of wide renown, is of deeper interest than its cemeteries—veritable cities of the dead, for there the nature of the ground is such that all that is mortal must be entombed at the surface, not buried under it as has been the almost universal practice of mankind since the world began. The originality that in other cities goes into the designing of impressive monuments, is here employed upon the sepulchers themselves. Rich marbles and rugged granite are worked with rare art into these resting places of the men of yesterday. People of other cities come to marvel and admire, but New Orleans herself—she comes to mourn.

At the gate of each great cemetery of the group, on All Saints' day sits a patient, sweet-faced Sister with her orphan charge, not seeking alms, but by the very fact of their presence asking that those who bring their flowers remember the living as well as the dead.

As is so largely the case with Memorial day at the north, the original purpose of All Saints' day has been lost. Almost every grave is decorated with its flowers, but after the visit to the family plot or vault, the great crowds of people spend their day walking, walking, walking, up and down the avenues of the cemeteries. It is in a way like the Easter parades of northern cities, except that these are not the fashionable crowds of Fifth avenue—they are the plain people.

How the Custom Came.

The custom of decorating the graves on All Saints' day is peculiar to New Orleans and those near-by places that, like the Crescent City, were largely peopled by the French, or which have been influenced by the custom in New Orleans. In France, whence came the idea, the practice is to observe All Souls' day, November 2, which is set apart for prayers and almsgiving to alleviate the sufferings of the souls in purgatory. There is a measure of decoration on All Saints' day in France, but the real observance is on the day following, just the reverse of the custom in New Orleans, where the decoration of graves on All Souls' day, while practiced to some extent, is nothing at all comparable to the universal use of flowers on the day preceding.

How the observance came to be changed in date is unknown, but it may be that November 1 was taken, many, many years ago, by those who came from Paris and were in reality transplanting to their new home La Fete des Mortes, when everyone visits the cemeteries and when that strange custom is practiced, the living leaving calling cards at the tombs of the dead. Fresh flowers then adorn every grave; the streets are filled with flower stands and those who have

All Saints' day is as broad as the Catholic church, a festival introduced because of the impossibility of a separate day for every saint. First instituted by Gregory IV. in 835, and appointed to be celebrated November 1, it has been observed more than a thousand years, but here in the New World so unique and so beautifully as in New Orleans. There it is the day of universal decoration of graves, of paying homage to the dead, and the cemeteries, themselves unlike any others in all the land, are thronged from morning until night. None so humble that his last resting place is left unadorned by those who hold his memory dear; the grave of the laborer and the tomb of the city's bravest are equally remembered; women in silks and satins and women in garments attesting lives of toil and sacrifice kneel together with their flowers and offer prayers for the souls of the dead.

Real Cities of the Dead.

To the visitor from afar nothing about this old city of the south, with its quaint French quarter of wide renown, is of deeper interest than its cemeteries—veritable cities of the dead, for there the nature of the ground is such that all that is mortal must be entombed at the surface, not buried under it as has been the almost universal practice of mankind since the world began. The originality that in other cities goes into the designing of impressive monuments, is here employed upon the sepulchers themselves. Rich marbles and rugged granite are worked with rare art into these resting places of the men of yesterday. People of other cities come to marvel and admire, but New Orleans herself—she comes to mourn.

At the gate of each great cemetery of the group, on All Saints' day sits a patient, sweet-faced Sister with her orphan charge, not seeking alms, but by the very fact of their presence asking that those who bring their flowers remember the living as well as the dead.

As is so largely the case with Memorial day at the north, the original purpose of All Saints' day has been lost. Almost every grave is decorated with its flowers, but after the visit to the family plot or vault, the great crowds of people spend their day walking, walking, walking, up and down the avenues of the cemeteries. It is in a way like the Easter parades of northern cities, except that these are not the fashionable crowds of Fifth avenue—they are the plain people.

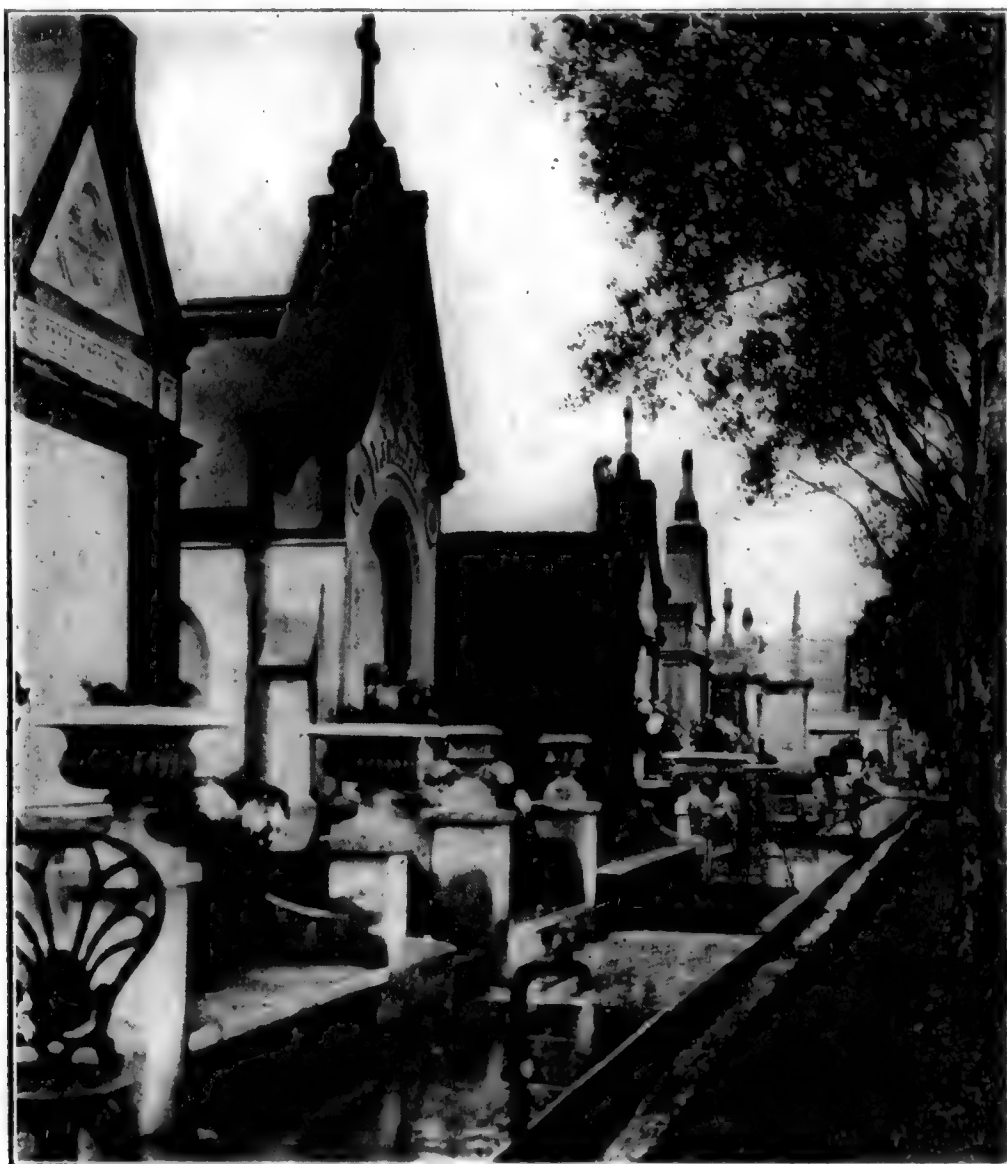

How the Custom Came.

The custom of decorating the graves on All Saints' day is peculiar to New Orleans and those nearby places that, like the Crescent City, were largely peopled by the French, or which have been influenced by the custom in New Orleans. In France, whence came the idea, the practice is to observe All Souls' day, November 2, which is set apart for prayers and almsgiving to alleviate the sufferings of the souls in purgatory. There is a measure of decoration on All Saints' day in France, but the real observance is on the day following, just the reverse of the custom in New Orleans, where the decoration of graves on All Souls' day, while practiced to some extent, is nothing at all comparable to the universal use of flowers on the day preceding.

How the observance came to be changed in date is unknown, but it may be that November 1 was taken, many, many years ago, by those who came from Paris and were in reality transplanting to their new home La Fete des Morts, when everyone visits the cemeteries and when that strange custom is practiced, the living leaving calling cards at the tombs of the dead. Fresh flowers then adorn every grave; the streets are filled with flower stands and those who have no relatives in the cemeteries take flowers just the same, placing them on some neglected grave or on the tomb of some leader of men. Special services for the dead are held in the churches, business virtually ceases, the streets become veritable flower gardens, and everyone, whether or not a mourner, takes part in the beautiful observance. So it is that day in New Orleans.

What it Means to Florists.

To the florists of New Orleans All Saints' day is the big day of the year, leaving Christmas and Easter far behind in the quantity of flowers required; indeed, the quantity used probably is greater than is needed on any one day in the year in any city of equal size anywhere in the world. All the crops are timed for All Saints' day, and on their readiness depends the florist's hope of profit for his season's work. The chrysanthemum is the principal All Saints' day flower and, grown without glass, the weather is one of the greatest factors in determining the extent of the local supply—a storm may cause great loss, even as the crop is finishing.

The All Saints' day special demand for flowers is felt far outside the local area—a thousand miles away, in Chicago, the needs of the New Orleans trade are a controlling factor in the wholesale market the last days of October. Great quantities of roses, carnations and especially of chrysanthemums are shipped to meet the special call, usually leaving Chicago on the night of October 29, so as to reach New Orleans the night of October 30 and be on sale in the flower stores October 31 and November 1. The shipments frequently are so heavy an extra express car must be carried on the 6 p. m. train on the Illinois Central October 29 for their accommodation, and in years when bad storms have ruined the local mums two cars have been needed to carry the supplies in response to the C. Q. D. call on Chicago.

Last year, when the photographs reproduced with this story were made, All Saints' day fell on a pleasant Sabbath and the observance was so general as to attract special attention, even in New Orleans, where everyone is familiar with it. This year November 1 is Monday, and a two days All Saints' day observance is counted upon to bring the florists a great demand, some people taking their flowers to the cemeteries on the Sabbath and others on Monday.

TULIPS FOR LARGE POTS.

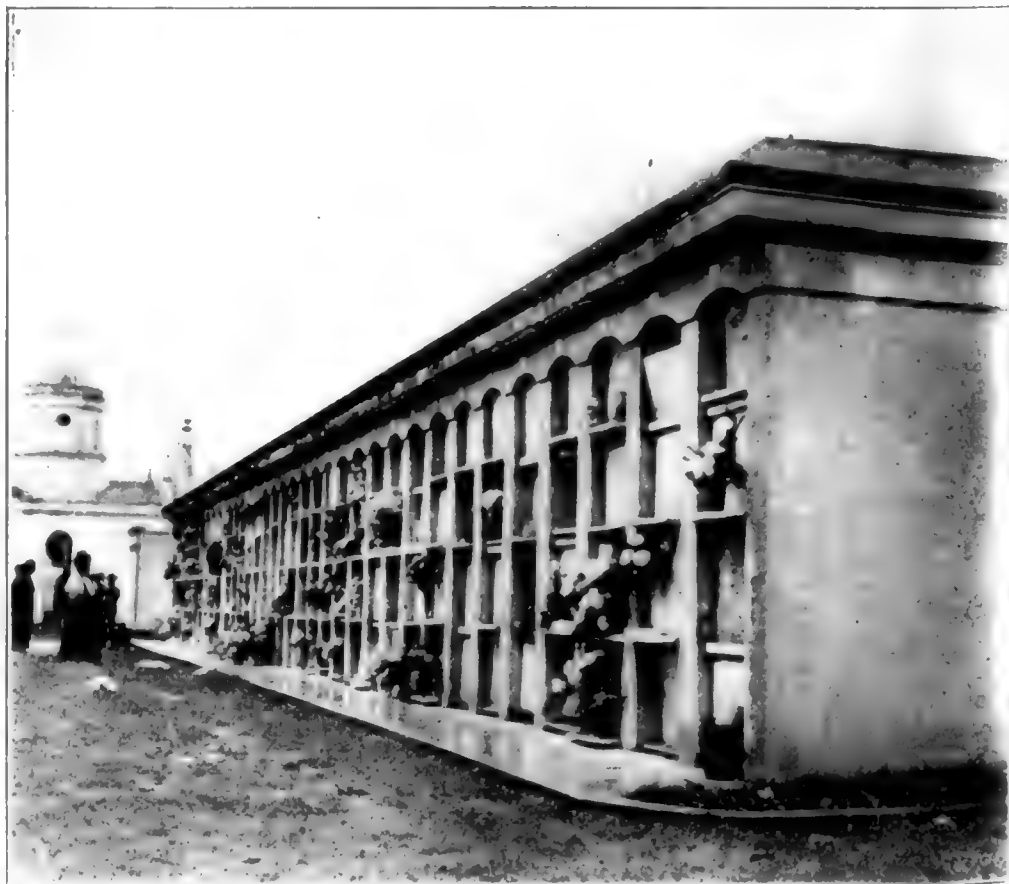

I have three large pots to fill with tulips, two 24-inch pots and one 30-inch pot. Could you give me two or three colors of tulips that would bloom about the same time? I want them in bloom for about the middle of April. Would you pot them in small pots, or would you put them in the big pots? I am afraid they would freeze and break the big pots in the winter. H. T. B.

I would suggest planting the tulips in smaller sized pans or boxes, transplanting them into the large pots before they come into flower. The size of the pots you name is entirely too large to grow tulips properly in. Tulips will stand transplanting and will not mind the root disturbance at all. It will not do to leave any of the pots or pans out during the winter, unless they are well covered with ashes or loam and then further protected with straw or leaves. You will do much better by keeping them in a cold cellar, where there is no fire heat.

Good varieties to use, which flower simultaneously, are: Joost von Vondel; white; Chrysolora, golden yellow, and Couleur Cardinal, crimson scarlet. If you like striped varieties, Keizerkroon, red and yellow, is showy. W. N. C.

setts? What is the general method practiced by those who grow on a large scale for spring sales? F. E. C.

If you are only growing a few hundred plants, it will be better, in your latitude, to carry them over winter in a coldframe. Where choice strains are grown, it is the best plan in these more northerly states to keep them in coldframes with glass protection. As the ground in the beds freezes solid, cover the plants with perfectly dry leaves or pine needles; then place the sashes over them and leave them closed, except during mild weather. Remove the covering about the third week in March.

Most of the large growers keep their plants outdoors all winter, planting them in beds about four feet wide and allowing about three inches each way between the plants. Others run the rows a foot apart to allow of cultivation. Ground with a good slope should be chosen. On level land, where water would stand, many of the plants would die. I have found a slope to the north winters them just as well as one to the south. Any transplanting should be completed at once. Do not give any winter protection until the ground is firmly frozen; then scatter straw, hay, leaves or some other light material over the plants, keeping it in position by laying corn stalks or brush over it. In your locality, where pine needles are abundant, these are one of the best of protectors for pansies and many other plants. Do not be in a hurry about removing the winter mulch with the first burst of warmth in late winter. Your beds should not be uncovered before April, and it is best to do it gradually.

Be sure to cover the plants lightly and never use any wet, heavy material, like rotted manure. If you put on just sufficient to cover the plants and the ground remains frozen all winter and is entirely thawed out before any uncovering is done, you should have only a small percentage of loss. A number of the plants in spring may need firming, the frost having a tendency to heave them up to some extent. C. W.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

THE URN AND BEAUTIES.

The accompanying illustration shows the largest design which was used at the funeral of the late Governor Johnson, of Minnesota. It is a piece quite commonly called for, not only for funeral purposes, but for presentations, for store openings and for many other purposes, usually where a collection has been taken up among a number of persons and where something large and showy must be supplied. The urn, of course, is a wire frame filled in the usual manner and made solid, in this case with asters, though frequently white carnations are used. Holm & Olson, who made this arrangement, added a garland running from top to bottom of the urn, in which they used cattleyas, valley and adiantum, with a few selected roses, and which added largely to the appearance of the piece. Of course, nothing but long-stemmed Beauties will suffice for the filling of the urn.

HALLOWE'EN WINDOWS.

The Spirit of Mischief.

Hallowe'en is the evening of October 31, the eve or vigil of All Hallows, or All Saints' day, and the latter part of next week those retail florists who attempt to take advantage of special occasions through appropriate window decorations will display unique arrangements of autumn material.

The more the window partakes of the boisterous and care-free nature, the more it typifies the spirit of Hallowe'en. Robert Burns thus wrote:

Some merry, friendly country folks
Together did convene,
To burn their nits and bou their stocks,
An' haud their Halloween.

Hallowe'en is an occasion of popular superstitions and observances in many Christian countries, fairies, witches and imps of all kinds being supposed to be then especially active. In juvenile America it is the occasion for tearing down the neighbor's fence and stacking it up against his front door. In Scotland, as related by Burns, the evening is frequently celebrated by meetings of young people when various mystical or playful ceremonies are performed, with the view of revealing the future husbands and wives.

So when the florist decorates his window for Hallowe'en, mischief rather than art should be typified.

The illustration on page 9 is reproduced from a photograph of the Hallowe'en window last season at the store of Jacob Schulz, Louisville, Ky. The only flowers used were chrysanthemums, and these were not the big, fancy, exhibition blooms, but the smaller and rougher grades of stock, as fitting in better with highly colored oak leaves, corn stalks, pumpkins and dried grasses. A window along similar lines can be worked out by any retail florist, and where such a one has a window on a main traveled street, a Hallowe'en decoration will prove an attractive thing, especially if the window usually is decorated in the commonplace way.

Bell's Spooky Window.

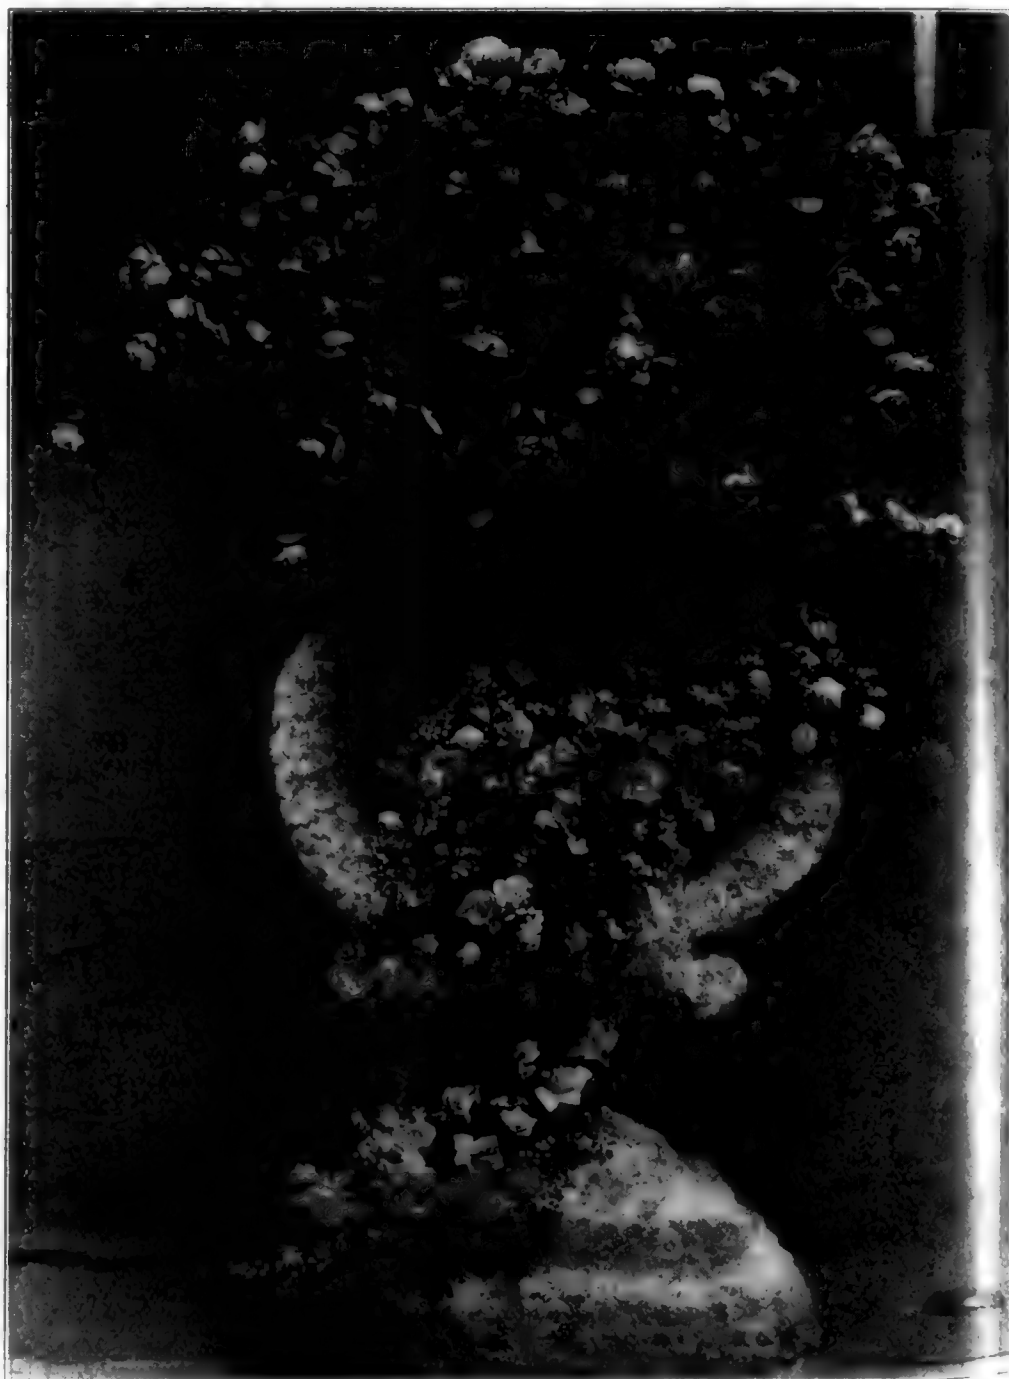

A recent Hallowe'en window display at the store of the Bell Floral Co., in Franklin, Pa., was skillfully designed and strikingly realistic. The decoration represented a corner of a corn field, with corn shocks, a tipped basket of ears of corn, and a number of pumpkin jack-o'-lanterns. Each of the lanterns contained an electric light. Inside the face openings of the lanterns were placed pieces of orange-colored crepe paper, and the window lights were also shaded with the orange paper. This illumination gave the window at night a yellow, deep moonlight glow that was quite "spooky." The edge was finished with sheet moss, ferns, etc. For a background there was an old-fashioned rail fence, the corners of which were filled in with ferns, smilax, and huckleberry bushes with frosted red leaves. Climbing over the fence and around the edges of the window was the beautiful bittersweet, Celastrus scandens.

DECORATING VEHICLES.

A source of considerable business for florists this summer has been the decoration of vehicles for industrial parades. The day was when these parades called for no other decorations than those of flags, bunting or tissue paper, but now natural flowers are used to a greater or less extent in practically every such display. It is a movement which the florists well may encourage, because these affairs almost always come in the season of the year when the flower business is dull, when stock is cheapest and the florist most anxious to turn an honest penny.

The illustration on page 11 is from a photograph of an outfit decorated by the Fifth Avenue Floral Co., Columbus, O. In this city the Retail Growers' Association gives an annual parade and picnic and this year offered a prize of $50 for the most artistically decorated wagon in the parade. The illustration shows the winner, out of more than 400 decorated vehicles, the parade requiring nearly two hours to pass a given point. The florist used smilax and carnations principally in his work, and his success in defeating those who did not use cut flower decorations will do much to bring this class of business to the florists in the future.

THE BARGAIN SALE.

[A paper by W. A. Adams, read before the Buffalo Florists' Club, October 12, 1909.]

When I was asked to read a paper before this club, and on a subject of such importance as "Bargain or Slaughter Sales," I thought the club had erred in the selection of a writer. However, I proposed to do my best and in as few words as possible.

The bargain sale, to the florist of today, is a very serious question, and all Florists cannot answer as possibly we do in Buffalo as to the effect it has on the business at other times.

Bargain Sales Approved.

Do bargain sales injure the business? I do not think they do, if conducted as they should be. They are in many cases beneficial, if the goods offered are fresh, of good quality, and at a price lower than the ordinary price, so that the person who has any idea of value knows that he is getting a bargain. In this way you encourage the sale of flowers, educate the people to the fact that flowers are always appreciated and a tone of refinement to the home or wherever sent, and enable new people to enjoy one of God's greatest gifts to the world.

What are the reasons for bargain sales? They are many, but the most important thing is to force business in a quiet time; to get rid of a surplus stock, in many instances, and to get the people to come to your place of business, as when buying bargain flowers they often see something else that they want, which you sell at a good profit.

I do not say that in every case you sell the surplus you have in your store; nor do I say that the man who grows his own stock can sell it at all times at a low price, because he has a large supply, for if he is running his place systematically, as no doubt every grower does or should do, he has to charge the store with what the greenhouse sends in, and in many instances, with coal at $6 per ton and wages at the prevailing scale, he would find that one place or the other had a leak somewhere.

Bargain sales are not always run by stores that have greenhouses of their own, but in more instances are conducted by those who are patrons of "the necessary evil," as he is sometimes called, the wholesale dealer, who, in his suave and tempting way, inveigles you into buying his surplus stock.

Keep Out the Street Vender.

But remember, when you are selling this same stock in your store, you have several things in your favor:

First, you know who has it.

Second, you know what price you want to sell it at.

Third, should you get a big order for funeral or other work, you have the goods and the sale can cease.

Fourth, when you are selling at a bargain in your store, you have the satisfaction of knowing that a good, reputable store is back of the sale and not a systematic delegation of street sellers, who go to the same wholesaler, buy the goods and walk back and forward in front of your place, selling the selfsame perishable article that you could have done had you wanted to. One thing in favor of the special sale in Buffalo is that we have kept the street vender away.

Remember, when I speak of the good effects of a bargain sale on the proprietor, I have not forgotten the salesman, who has many sarcastic remarks thrust at him by some buyers, regarding the quality, freshness, etc., of the flowers, doubting his veracity, when in his amiable way (as all employed in Buffalo are amiable) he says that the flowers are strictly fresh and as good as any sold any day at double the price or more, as the case may be. They then ask to have them in a box and delivered, or arranged in a bunch, and they are sometimes much offended if you do not agree with any or all of their remarks. These same people will get up early in the morning, chase down to a dry goods store, crowd in and wait their turn to get a tie, pair of shoes, sweater, or some other articles at a reduction of 4 cents, with a big newspaper ad saying: "No Charging, No Approval, No C. O. D. or Telephone orders, but will Deliver." And they have had their tempers ruffled far more than they ever did in a flower store, and still get the flowers at less than half price. This is where the salesman's patience and temper are tried. Although by W. A. Adams, read before the Florists' Club, October 12, 1909.

I was asked to read a paper before this club, and on a subject of importance as "Bargain or Slaughter." I thought the club had erred in the selection of a writer. However, I tried to do my best and in as few words as possible.

A bargain sale, to the florist of to-day, is a very serious question, and all must answer as possibly we do to the effect it has on the business at other times.

Bargain Sales Approved.

Bargain sales injure the business? I think they do, if conducted as they often are. They are in many cases a waste of goods, if the goods offered are fresh, of good quality, and at a price lower than they are ordinarily sold at, so that the person who has any idea of value knows that he is getting a bargain. In this way you encourage the sale of inferior goods, educate the people to the effect that flowers are always appreciated at a low price, and enable new customers to enjoy one of God's greatest gifts to the world.

There are the reasons for bargain sales. They are many, but the most important thing is to force business in a quiet time; to get rid of a surplus stock, in many instances, and to get the people to come to your place of business, as when buying bargain flowers they often see something else that they want, which you sell at a good profit.

This is where the salesman's patience and temper are tried. Although it is hard, I do not think many people have reason to complain of inattention, when the number of customers is taken into consideration. Salesmen in flower shops are far above the average.

In conclusion, I am of the opinion, as stated in my opening remarks, that, when stock is plentiful, quality good and prices right, a bargain sale along these lines will be a benefit to the public and to the florist, as an educator in the way of getting more people to love flowers, and at the same time bring business to your store.

ZIMMERMANN'S WAGON.

The illustration on page 11 shows the delivery outfit of William C. Zimmermann, the well known Milwaukee florist, decorated for the parade which was a feature of the celebration of homecoming week at Milwaukee. The wheels were covered with asters, which also were used on the harness and to outline the mirrors of the wagon. The top of the wagon was filled solidly with gladioli in bright colors, and there were large bunches of gladioli at the whip sockets. These, with chiffon, made the vehicle one of the most attractive in the parade.

more moisture can be afforded them. Young plants from late summer cuttings will probably need a pinch and larger sized pots. When housing them, be sure to let them have a cool, airy house; 40 degrees at night will suit them far better than 10 degrees higher.

Poinsettias.

The bracts will be starting to show on the poinsettias now, and to assist these to their fullest development judicious feeding will be necessary. Poinsettias, if well rooted in their pots or pans, enjoy waterings with liquid cow or horse manure once a week. Use every precaution in watering, in order to hold the foliage as green as possible. An overabundant or insufficient water supply will speedily cause a heavy loss of foliage, and without leaves poinsettias are a hard proposition to sell. A temperature of 60 degrees at night, now that the bracts are forming, will be found about right. In a colder house the foliage is more difficult to keep dark green in color. Avoid heavy fumigations where poinsettias are growing. Smoke from tobacco stems, especially, will cause a heavy loss of foliage.

Poinsettias, while comparatively free from pests, are occasionally found infested with mealy bug, thrips and green aphid. The latter is easily overcome by light fumigations or spraying with a nicotine solution. Thrips will sometimes attack the bract just as it forms, and are hard to kill. Nicotine sprayings are the best remedy. Persist in them until the pests are put out of commission. Use a spray nozzle and cold water to blow off the mealy bug. Keep pans recently made up close to the glass, in order to get as stocky plants as possible. If there are still any plants in small pots, make them up into pans, using small Primulas.

If your primulas are still in frames, they will require much more careful watering. Anything approaching soggy at the roots will quickly cause yellowing foliage. The plants, if space permits, had better now be moved to a cool, airy house. On hot days a little shade will be necessary, particularly for the Chinese section. Obconica and Kewensis will stand stronger sunlight. Plants of P. Sinensis are good sellers at Christmas and the New Year, especially the scarlet and crimson shades. To have these in nice bloom, stand a batch of them in a carnation temperature, 50 to 52 degrees at night. To keep the foliage dark green, use some weak soot or nitrate of soda water once a week. Do not crowd the plants; let them stand so that their foliage will just clear each other. P. Kewensis is a much stronger grower than the other winter-blooming primulas and should not be flowered in less than 6-inch pots; fine specimens can be grown in 7-inch and 8-inch pots. This variety requires twice as much water as P. Sinensis and more frequent feeding.

Azaleas.

The bulk of the Indian azaleas are now to hand and potted. It is time to start any plants wanted for Christmas blooming. There are only a few varieties which it pays to force thus early. The best seller of all is Apollo, orange scarlet in color. All bright shades are in special demand at the holidays. Deutsche Perle is the earliest white, and can be had in excellent flower for Christmas; also Simon Mardner, silvery rose, Mme. Petrick, bright rose, and Vervaneana, double white with salmon center. The small flowered varieties have become extremely popular of late years. Hexe, or Firefly, reddish crimson, and Charles Encke, pink, make beautiful little pot plants; Hexe especially is a fine Christmas seller.

Plants for early forcing should have a house with a night temperature of 60 to 65 degrees and should be sprayed twice a day during bright weather. Rub out any growths which may start in advance of the flowers. There are now only two months left until Christmas is here, and remember that solar heat is steadily declining and daylight lessening; therefore it behooves us to push the plants now, rather than a month later.

Pelargoniums.

The show pelargoniums can stay in coldframes for a few weeks yet if the greenhouses are crowded. If potted over when recommended, they will now be rooted nicely around the pots. Keep them aired freely during the day and only close the sashes on frosty nights. Scratch over the surface soil. Remove dead or moldy foliage. Fumigate once in eight or ten days for aphid and run the plants somewhat on the dry side until they go into the greenhouses, when cyperus, Asparagus plumosus or ferns among them.

Freesias.

It is now getting late to plant freesias. Of course, bulbs can be started as late as January and still give flowers. It will, however, be noticed always that the earliest bulbs in the soil give the strongest flower stalks. The earliest pans and flats are now full of roots and a weak dose of manure water once a week will keep them toned up. Freesias want an abundant water supply and are benefited by feeding. Strong manure water is often the cause of the browning of the ends of the leaves. A heavy fumigation will also injure the foliage.

Let the plants wanted in flower at Christmas or New Year's have a genial warmth—52 to 55 degrees at night is ample—and support the flower stems before they fall over and become bent.

Fuchsias.

There seems to be something of a coming-again of the old-time favorites, fuchsias, and it is cheering to find renewed interest in them in so many diverse quarters. The flowering season is now almost over and the plants should be kept outdoors until they get a light freezing, just sufficient to remove the leaves, when they can be stood in any cellar, frame or pit which is frost-proof and dry, and here they can remain until time for forcing again arrives. Any stock place suitable for hydrangeas will be ideal for fuchsias. The plants must not be allowed to get too dust-dry over winter. A light watering once in two or three weeks will keep the wood plump.

Bay Trees.

While we are still enjoying comparatively balmy weather, we can never tell how soon these conditions will change. As a rule, it is not safe to leave tubs of bay trees out in the northern states after the first week in November. A few degrees of frost will not harm them, but a drop to 15 degrees above zero, accompanied by heavy snow, such as we occasionally get in early November, is harmful to them. Tubs containing boxwood, hollies, Araucaria imbricata, Portulacal laurels and other evergreens can stay out a little later than the bays, but are better in winter quarters by the middle of November.

Camellias.

It is pleasing to note a return to popularity of the camellias. Any which have arrived with azaleas should, after potting, be placed in a house where they will have a genial but not forcing atmosphere; 50 degrees at night should not be exceeded, or a loss of flower buds will inevitably result. The only time camellias enjoy a warm, moist heat is while making their growth. Any attempt to force them like azaleas will end in disaster. At Christmas an increasing call for these plants is noted at the better class stores, and plants in 6-inch to 7-inch pots, with three or four flowers expanded, have sold well during the last two or three seasons.

Cyclamens.

The flower spikes are coming up nicely on the earliest cyclamen plants and these promise to be in capital bloom for the holidays. As Christmas is the best selling season for these popular plants, efforts should be made to get in as many as possible for that date. Space the plants so that the foliage cannot crowd. The better shaped and more perfectly formed our stock is, the better it will sell. Weak manure water, alternated with pinches of Clay's fertilizer, will keep the foliage vigorous and dark green and strengthen the flower stems. If spraying with nicotine or fumigation is attended to, there should be no trouble with thrips or other pests.

The little seedlings intended for blooming a year hence will soon want transplanting or potting. Keep the soil stirred about them and the flats well up to the light, to render the plants as sturdy as possible. We prefer to transplant into shallow flats, two inches apart each way, rather than pot while the seedlings are small. A compost of loam and leaf-mold in equal parts and plenty of sand answers well for them.

Fancy Caladiums.

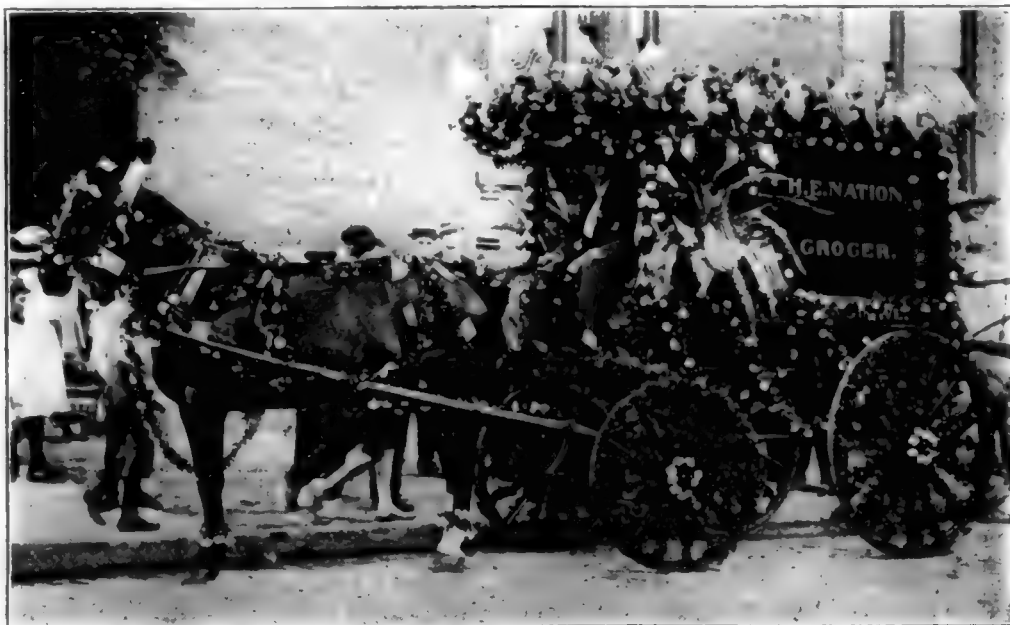

Gradually reduce the water supply on the fancy caladiums, as the foliage begins to decay. Any sudden withdrawal of moisture will destroy the tubers. Yet we often see growers who ought to know better throw plants on their sides to rest with the first signs of ripening or decaying of foliage. The same holds true of gesneras, tydeas, gloxinias, achimenes and tuberous begonias. In every case withhold water gradually. This will insure the proper ripening of the bulbs or corms. All such plants, while being ripened off, want a sunny location, and the poorest place to lay them when dried off is under the greenhouse benches, where sow bugs, roaches and other vermin can prey upon them. A heated shed or cellar, kept at 45 to 50 degrees, will keep the aforementioned roots nicely, with the exception of fancy caladiums and gesneras, which should be rested in 10 degrees more heat.

FREESIA PURITY.

When should Freesia Purity be planted to bloom in February? J. G.

Purity freesia if planted in flats now will be in flower in February. The flats can be kept in a coldframe until November, and if given an average night temperature of 50 degrees after then, will flower at the date named. C. W.

it is hard, I do not think many people have reason to complain of inattention, when the number of customers is taken into consideration. Salesmen in flower shops are far above the average.

In conclusion, I am of the opinion, as stated in my opening remarks, that, when stock is plentiful, quality good and prices right, a bargain sale along these lines will be a benefit to the public and to the florist, as an educator in the way of getting more people to love flowers, and at the same time bring business to your store.

Geraniums

GERANIUMS IN HOTBEDS.

Can geraniums be grown successfully in hotbeds in the state of Ohio? If so, how early should the rooted cuttings or 2-inch plants be put in to make blooming plants by May 20? Are some varieties more suitable for this method of growing than others? If so, what varieties would you recommend? Can they be grown as stocky as in the greenhouse? Can Vinea variegata also be grown in the hotbed?

E. S.

Yes, geraniums can be successfully grown in hotbeds in spring. In your state it would be unwise to place the plants in the frame before the first half of April. Mix up some horse manure and leaves and tramp it well. Over this place a layer of some loose plunging material, such as ashes, cocoanut fiber or half decayed leaves. The geranium pots can be plunged in this, and plants with this genial warmth at the roots will grow faster and make better and stockier plants than in the greenhouses. The plunging prevents the soil from drying out, and much greener and healthier looking plants are the result. Your plants should be in their flowering pots, 3½-inch or 4-inch, before being placed in the hotbeds. To secure strong plants at that time, cuttings should be put in now if you have not yet inserted any. Any of the regular bedding geraniums will succeed in a hotbed.

Variegated vincas and many other bedding plants will grow in a hotbed. The vincas, however, owing to their drooping habit of growth, are better grown along the edge of a greenhouse bench. Coleus, iresines, cannas, alternantheras, heliotropes and many other bedding plants grow faster in hotbeds than in the greenhouse, it being easy to bottle up a moist growing heat for them. Of course, hotbeds have fallen into disuse in many places and are even classed as old foggy and out of date, but, as the late William Scott often wrote, they are splendidly adapted for the culture of many bedding plants in spring.

C. W.

WINTER GERANIUMS.

The demand for winter geraniums is showing a steady increase. Well grown plants of the best varieties, in bloom, will take a purchaser's eye more quickly than a chrysanthemum. They are not yet common. They are plants anyone can grow, even in the humblest home, but there is room for ten plants where one is being grown now. The public sees only the useful but omnipresent bedding varieties, such as Ricard, Nutt, Grant and Poitevine. We must educate them to the beauties of the winter-flowering section and they will eagerly buy them. Either at Thanksgiving or Christmas well flowered geraniums are yet something of a novelty. Those who have been growing along plants for the coming season should see to it that their plants are seen in the store windows and at the fall shows, thus stimulating interest and demand.

Discontinue pinching the shoots on all plants wanted for Christmas flowering and for Thanksgiving. The flower trusses can after this date be allowed to remain. In feeding avoid constant doses of liquid manure. This promotes a soft and sappy growth. Surface dressings of some highly concentrated and reliable fertilizer are preferable, as they keep the wood shorter jointed and harder and promote floriferousness. A dry atmosphere, plenty of fresh air and a little fire heat at night will now benefit geraniums. As the flowers open, a night temperature of 50 to 55 degrees will be found about right for them.

HEAVY RAINS SPOIL PALMS.

Last year I bought a large quantity of seeds of Kentia Belmoreana, K. Forsteriana, Phoenix Canariensis, P. reclinata, Latania Borbonica, washingtonia, etc. During the spring and summer months, when heavy rains are scarce in Florida, they grew to perfection, free from disease, pests and fungus. Several weeks ago heavy rains became more frequent and would often last two or three days without any interruption. The palms began to show signs of rust and black spots, especially on Phoenix Canariensis and P. reclinata. Some Kentia Belmoreana leaves also got badly spotted, and K. Forsteriana got a little rust. I believe it is caused by excess of rain, as the water would often remain in the pots for a certain length of time and sour the soil and disease the roots. It was even worse with the ferns, as it would often break some of the leaves and render them almost useless. Now I am almost convinced it is a hard problem to grow ferns and palms here to perfection, especially in their young stage, without glass houses. I contemplate building a glass house in the spring. Of course, all that is necessary is roof protection; the sides can be screened to keep out moths and butterflies and other pests. Give me your opinion as to this. Would it be advisable to spray my palms with Bordeaux mixture or blue stone and in what quantity?

L. M.

Spraying with either solution of blue stone, or the Bordeaux mixture itself, is of rather doubtful value for rust upon palms, and has the added objection that such a spraying would leave a deposit upon the leaves that would disfigure them badly. I would suggest spraying with solution of sulphide of potassium, commonly known as liver of sulphur, using one ounce of the sulphide of potassium to two gallons of water, and to repeat the dose at intervals of one week. The trouble is doubtless caused by stagnant water at the roots of the plants, and if the plants are allowed to be exposed to such heavy and continuous rains as those described, I fear the spraying will not help very much.

Chrysanthemums

GLORIA AND OTHER NEW SORTS

The remarks made by Mr. Totty on Gloria, in the REVIEW of October 14, will undoubtedly be indorsed by all who have made a trial of this variety. The color took well in our market; that Enchantress shade of pink has never yet lost its drawing power. The habit of the plant is excellent. It does not seem to make any great difference whether only one or three flowers are grown on a plant; the flowers are all good. Those from crown buds give the most satisfaction as to color, the terminal buds being too light. The foliage is excellent. Though a seedling of October Frost, it is a great improvement on that variety, as it does not grow half as tall as October Frost and is much more double. Mr. Smith has certainly given us a good early pink in Gloria, and it is sure to be grown largely the next season.

Mr. Smith's other novelty, President Taft, is not quite open yet, but, from all we can see so far, it will not disappoint the most critical.

What Golden Glow really is, is hard to tell. If it was grown largely this season, there is no question that at least three times as many will be grown next season. It is a chrysanthemum for everybody.

It can be had in bloom at almost any time, from spring till November, and the flowers are always good.

J. L. SCHILLER.

MUMS IN A COLDFRAME.

I have a number of plants of the new Wells single chrysanthemum, grown from seed and planted in the open ground the same as asters. Owing to an unfavorable season and rather late planting, I do not think they will bloom outside and I cannot give them greenhouse space. Would they winter over in a coldframe, well protected? I am located in Michigan.

H. H.

There is no reason why H. H.'s plants of singles will not winter over in a coldframe, and if he will dig the floor out deep enough he can lift the plants and set them close together in the frame and flower them in a very satisfactory manner, even though they may be too late to flower outside. The type at present is not well fixed; that is to say, all the seedlings do not show the extra early flowering habit. Some of my plants have been in flower two weeks and others are only now swelling their buds, but from now on a batch of these plants will furnish abundant material for cutting and will brighten up many a dreary border after the tender stock has been cut down by frost. The habit of all the seedlings is good and the color of the whites and yellows is very clean now that the sun is declining in power. C. H. T.

CROP TO FOLLOW MUMS.

Would you kindly inform me what would make a good, profitable crop to plant in mum benches after the mums are thrown out. A. H. M.

There are several crops that can be used to fill in a house after the mums are gone, but local conditions must suggest to A. H. M. which would be most profitable for him. Many growers use the houses for their bedding stock, and where there is a demand for such stock there is good money in it. A grower of my acquaintance uses his houses for lettuce, merely taking out the plants and turning up the soil to give it a chance to sweeten for a few days before planting the young lettuce.

Most growers today use the houses for sweet peas, sowing the seed in pots five or six weeks before the mums are cut out, and saving that much time on the crop. The sweet peas can be sown at the rate of four seeds or so in a 4-inch pot and the pots set out a foot apart in the rows, of course removing the pot afterward and setting the ball in the bench. This effects a saving of at least a month over waiting and sowing the seed directly in the bench. C. H. TOTTY.

THE CELERY FLY ON MUMS.

We found on our chrysanthemum leaves spots which looked as if they had been burnt by the sun. Upon investigation we discovered that small maggots had started at the edge of the leaf, burrowing toward the center and lifting the top skin off the leaf, but making no opening. At this date they are about one-fourth inch long. As we cannot get at them with edible poison, and as they are protected against fumigating, we have been picking off the infested leaves.

This is the first time we have ever been troubled with it. What kind of insect is it and what are the proper remedies? A. F. C.

The insect is the larva of Tephritis oenopodinis, I believe. It is the same pest that causes lots of trouble to the celery grower and is occasionally met with on other fleshy leaved plants, such as cinerarias. The egg is deposited in the leaf, between the two layers or skins, and as soon as the larvae are hatched they eat away all the tissue between the upper and lower skin of the leaf, skeletonizing the leaf if left alone. Poisons do not touch them, because they do not eat the outer skin, and if a strong dose of insecticide is used, while it will kill the grub, it will also render the leaf useless.

The only safe cure is to pick off and burn the infested leaves, though one can by squeezing the leaf between the thumb and finger kill the grub if the leaf is only slightly marked, and thus retain any foliage that may be necessary. I have not heard of any preparation that can be safely used in combating this pest, because of necessity any insecticide powerful enough to penetrate the skin

AUTUMN PLANTING.

The business of the George Wittbold Co., Chicago, has been growing at a rapid rate the last few years, but in no one of the many departments into which the business is divided has there been more rapid increase than in the garden work. There are not many firms in their city that are equipped to take care of any order that may come along, an order for a single load of soil, or an order for a complete landscape plan and its execution; nor are there many firms which advertise as persistently as do the Wittbolds.

For many years the Wittbold establishment has done a big business in spring planting—bedding out, as it usually is called—and even with the increased facilities provided by the Edgebrook nursery, and the increased staff, the spring trade is all that can be handled in the limited time. It early was apparent that the greatest opportunity for development of the outdoor work lay in pushing the fall planting, and each year the amount of hardy stock and bulbs planted in autumn has increased rapidly. In addition to newspaper advertising, the Wittbold Co. has a list of addresses of customers and possible customers, to whom a letter or circular is sent once a month, sometimes advertising one department of the business and sometimes advertising another. The accompanying illustration is a reproduction of a circular sent out early in October in the interest of the fall planting.

The circular was 10x12, printed in three colors, and was prepared by C. S. Richardson, the advertising designer in the Marquette building, Chicago, who works up these drawings for the Wittbolds. The circular was made to enclose itself by tucking two folds together, so that no envelope was required. On that part which then became the front of the circular, in the upper left-hand corner, was a neat card reading "Plant now for spring," and in the lower corner, with the firm's name and address, was a notice to the postmaster to notify in case of nondelivery, so that return postage could be sent. By this method and at the expense of only a penny for each dead name the mailing list is kept revised to date.

NAME OF FUCHSIA.

I am sending you a sample of a fuchsia flower. Please give me the name of the variety. I have been growing it for eight or nine years and find it the best single fuchsia. L. P. F.

The name of this variety of fuchsia is Black Prince. C.

BRIDGETON, N. J.—Theodore E. Edwards, the Irving avenue florist, will open a store on East Commerce street.

WILLOUGHBY, O.—The H. R. Carlton greenhouses and residence property have been purchased by James B. Knight and Archie B. Wilson, of Mentor, O.

BLOOMS FAIL TO OPEN.

Enclosed I am sending you a specimen carnation bud. Can you tell me what the trouble is? Last year we had the same pest and had to throw our carnations out in January, as only one per cent of the blooms ever opened. The plants at present are large and healthy, showing numerous flower stalks. Can the cause be thrips, or a little white ant in the soil? I have sprayed weekly with Nicotinic acid and am now using bisulphide of carbon in the soil, according to directions given in the REVIEW.

We have a small house, 12x30 and nine feet to the ridge, filled with Enchantress. Can you state the quantity of ingredients to use for hydrocyanic acid gas for such a house? I have never used it, but read an article some years ago on it in the REVIEW. J. L.

The buds forwarded were too young to show the cause of your trouble; in fact, they looked quite normal, except for being wilted. I can say positively, however, that it is not thrips that is bothering you. They do not prevent development of the blooms, but merely cause white or brown spots to show on the petals, usually along the edges. Your trouble might be caused by the carnation mite, but to be certain I would have to know how far the bud will develop before it withers. As I said before, the specimens forwarded did not disclose any source of trouble.

For information about hydrocyanic acid gas I would suggest that you send to U. S. Department of Agriculture for Bulletin No. 27, prepared by F. H. Chittenden. In this bulletin you will find the subject treated from beginning to end, and much better than I could do it in these columns. A. F. J. B.

The F. Dorner & Sons Co., La Fayette, Ind., registers new carnation, Scarlet Glow, from seedling crosses; color, bright scarlet; size, three inches; good, free growing; makes well shaped plants; transplants easily; early and free flowering, on long stems; keeping qualities, exceptionally good.

PAPER WHITES AND ROMANS.

I placed my order for Paper Whites and Romans with a Holland agent last spring. They arrived about a month ago. I thought it was too early and did not know what to do with them, so I boxed them up and put them in a coldframe and covered them with ashes three or four inches deep. I examined them the other day and found they had sprouted about one and one-half inches through the ashes. I do not know anything about handling bulbs, but am sure this ought not to be. Will you please tell me what I should have done to retard their growth? I want them to bring in at intervals through the winter. D. W. D.

The Paper Whites should not have been covered with ashes at all, but the Romans, which are slower in starting, are all the better for it. Remove all of them to a cool cellar or pit. This will retard them considerably. Bring in a few boxes as you want them. The earliest if housed about November 1 will give you flowers for Thanksgiving. Those for Christmas can be placed in a temperature of 55 degrees early in December. As the flowers open stand them in a cold house. Another season do not place all your bulbs in the soil at once. Wait a month with part of them. Keep the bulbs in any cool, dry season spread out thinly. C. W.

THE NEW YORK SHOW.

The Horticultural Society of New York has embarked this year upon the broadest exhibition project in its career. The show is to be held in the American Museum of Natural History, at Central Park West and Seventy-seventh street, November 3 to 7. The exhibition will be open on the evening of the first day, Wednesday, especially for the members of the society, the museum and affiliated organizations. On the three following days it will be open to the public from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m., and from 7 p. m. to 10 p. m., and on Sunday from 1 p. m. to 5 p. m. No admission fee will be charged, but a long list of liberal premiums has been offered and a fine show is anticipated.

The executive committee in charge of the arrangements consists of: F. R. Pierson, chairman; Geo. V. Nash, secretary; J. E. Lager, F. H. Traendly, P. O' Mara, John Young, Peter Duff, Leonard Barron and J. A. Manda, the latter to be manager of the show.

Along with Samuel Thorne, Spencer Trask and T. A. Havemeyer, P. O' Mara and G. T. Powell are vice-presidents of the society. The treasurer is F. R. Newbold, formerly president of the American Rose Society. The elected members of the council are: N. L. Britton, chairman; F. L. Atkins, Leonard Barron, F. W. Bruggerhof, J. W. Cromwell, C. F. Dieterich, Henry Hicks, John E. Lager, J. A. Manda, E. S. Miller, Clement Moore, W. Nilsson, F. R. Pierson, E. H. Roehrs, Julius Roehrs, H. A. Siebrecht, E. B. Southwick, J. H. Troy, Samuel Untermyer, C. W. Ward, C. B. Weathered and A. L. Willis.

A NEW ORLEANS PLACE.

Henry Cook, trading as M. Cook's Son, is now proprietor of the business formerly conducted by M. Cook & Son and later by H. Cook and R. Cook, as M. Cook's Sons, at New Orleans. Mr. Cook has a city store at 143 Baronne street and greenhouses and nursery at Pearl and Lowerline streets, where the photographs were made from which the accompanying illustrations were prepared.

New Orleans is an excellent flower town, in spite of the fact that during a large part of the year the gardens are full of flowers. Mr. Cook's specialties are roses and palms, but he grows a general line of pot plants in his range of glass, and in the nursery grounds has quite a line of shrubbery and perennials. In the parking along both streets there is a row of camphor trees that inspire many customers to call for such stock to be planted on their home grounds.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The market has undergone a marked change in conditions since last week. The cold weather and heavy frosts on Tuesday and Wednesday played havoc with dahlias and Cochet roses. Cosmos, which is usually plentiful at this time, has suffered to such an extent that little is arriving. In other lines the weather has had a contrary effect. Roses are much better in quality, and the quantity has increased so much that prices have materially declined and cleaning up is far from easy, particularly in the lower grades. Many growers who two weeks ago made shipments that were quite small for the size of their establishments, have doubled and in some cases more than trebled their shipments, and this condition meets with a demand which is not at all proportionate. The street merchant is an appreciated factor just now, and stands between legitimate business and the ash barrel.

Carnations are fairly steady, and in supply are on the short side. They continue to improve in quality and some really fine stock is available, especially in white. Chrysanthemums are a feature of the market just now and bring fair prices, but an avalanche of them is in sight and they are likely to become a troublesome problem any day. The early varieties, such as Monrovia, Polly Rose, Glory of Pacific, Omega and Golden Glow, are still about the only varieties available, the yellow being most limited in supply.

Various Notes.

George M. Cook, of Arlington, has finished a new boiler-room and changed all of his heating system.

Charles Seybold, of Carroll park, will have a large mum show in several weeks, which is expected to surpass all of his previous shows.

J. Bolgiano & Son sold over 2,500 ferns on Friday and Saturday.

H. J. Quick has installed a new Furnum boiler, to heat two large houses.

Charles H. Cook has started to erect two large houses on his new place at Cottonville. Q.

NAME OF PLANT.

I am sending, under separate cover, a leaf and blossom of a plant and should like to know the name of it. J. D.

Justicia carnea is the name of the plant. It is also called Jacobinia carnea. C.

FAIRMONT, W. VA.—Miss Elizabeth Wallace has taken over the establishment of H. Glenn Fleming.

HINSDALE, MASS.—L. B. Brague & Son have about 15,000,000 ferns in cold storage. They are now buying spruce boughs, which are used largely to cover graves in cemeteries.

CINCINNATI

The Market.

The market has changed considerably since last week, with a marked increase in shipments of cut flowers. There has been a good demand for roses, with specials selling out in advance. American Beauty, My Maryland and Killarney are fast getting into winter form. Bride flower is on the order of Willowbrook, but it has a better stem and larger flower. It lacks only in foliage.

Lily of the valley, Harrisii and violets are in fair demand but short supply. Outdoor flowers, dahlias, cosmos, etc., are like the last rose of summer; they have faded and gone.

Various Notes.

J. M. McCullough Son's Co. received a certificate for the Paragon sprayer from the S. A. F.; also certificate for President Taft rose, exhibited at the convention.

Mrs. Fannie Kyrk Sanderson, sister of Miss Edith Kyrk and Louis Kyrk, died at the family residence October 16 and was laid to rest October 18. She was well known and quite a number of the craft attended the funeral. The floral offerings were many and beautiful.

Sunday afternoon the writer spent a few hours on College Hill and made a hasty call on our old friend, George Corbett. I found, as usual, a lot of well grown stock. A house of poinsettias was in prime condition. Chrysanthemums never looked better; he grows mostly Chadwick. Two houses of violets are promising a fine winter crop. The carnations on this place are not large, but show a clean and vigorous growth. Eighty sashes of pansies are just planted. A lot of rebuilding has been done, owing to the heavy hail storm of last spring. My next call was to see Max Rudolph's place. This is keeping up its reputation in growing stock. One house 30x200 in roses never looked better. Five houses of carnations are flowering nicely, especially Aristocrat and Enchantress; they were all pot grown. Chrysanthemums are fine and he was earliest in this section. Three varieties are being cut, Estelle, October Frost and Golden Glow. One thing about this place is its neatness, which never fails to impress visitors.

H. SCHWARZ.

Park Superintendent Rodgers, William Salway, of the Spring Grove cemetery, and Ben George, the florist, recently made their fourth trip through Hyde Park to view the lawns of that suburb, for the purpose of determining who are entitled to prizes for the best kept and prettiest lawns. This was the final trip for the season.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick,
Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg, Pa.

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

THE man who does not give credit freely enough loses business, but it is not a common fault in the florists' trade.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the REVIEW $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

THE scientific committee of the Royal Horticultural Society of England, at its meeting August 21, and the fruit and vegetable committee of the same society
September 14, pronounced the Burbank Wonderberry and Solanum nigrum one and the same thing.

M. RICE & Co., Philadelphia, have celebrated their twenty-fifth anniversary by issuing the handsomest catalogue of their quarter century in the florists' supply business. A comparison of the book with early editions serves to show the wonderful advance in the variety and artistic quality that has been made in retailers' requisites in the last few years.

W. H. TAPLIN contributes an interesting article to a recent issue of the Rural New-Yorker on "Carnations as a Greenhouse Crop." Readers of the REVIEW will recall that after spending many years growing palms and ferns and becoming an authority on those plants,
Mr. Taplin turned his attention to carnations, taking the position of foreman for Dailedouze Bros., Flatbush, N. Y.

IT DOES THE WORK WELL.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time.

I am entirely sold out of the stock advertised in the Review. This was my first experience in advertising and I am glad to find your paper does the work.

No reason why anyone should let surplus stock go to waste; an advertisement in the REVIEW's classified department hardly ever fails to find a ready purchaser.

OBITUARY.

Andrew Ferguson.

Andrew Ferguson, of Detroit, Mich., died on Sunday, October 17, at Grace hospital, in that city. He had not been in the best of health for some time. He was one of the charter members of the Detroit Florists' Club and was well and favorably known in the trade.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

Kindly announce in the REVIEW the work of the examining committee, as follows: Cincinnati, October 9, Anaka, pink Japanese, scored 83 points; exhibited by Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich.

Also please announce that at the meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society to be held in New York, November 10, papers will be presented by I. L. Powell, Mil-brook, N. Y.; David Fraser, Pittsburg, Pa., and Edwin Jenkins, Lenox, Mass.

CHAS. W. JOHNSON, Sec'y.

CLIMBING KILLARNEY.

About two years ago George Reinberg, of Chicago, sold quite a quantity of Climbing Killarney through an advertisement in the trade journals, and the same is being grown in this locality (Urbana, O.), and quite a stock has been worked up. Now I notice that a lead-

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Department of Registration.

Peter Henderson & Co., of 35 Cortlandt street, New York, N. Y., offer for registration the following roses:

Name—Priscilla. Description—A seedling from Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, crossed with Frau Karl Druschki; color, clear white; double flowers; shows unmistakable evidences of its parentage in flower, stem and foliage, but distinct from each; very free blooming, moderate growth, good stem and foliage.

Name—Abundance. Description—A cross between Clothilde Soupert and Souvenir du Pres. Carnot; flowers, pink, produced in great abundance; habit, dwarf and compact, branching freely;
good foliage.

These applications for registration having been submitted to the American Rose Society, and having been approved and accepted by them, the registration is completed under the rules of this society.

Public notice is hereby given that Alfred Roedder, of Shorb, Cal., offers for registration the plant described below.
Any person objecting to the registration or to the use of the proposed name is requested to communicate with the undersigned at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Description—Fronds thirty to thirty-six inches long, erect, eight to twelve inches broad, with strong stems; pin-nules, one-half inch; a strong, easy grower of the cuneatum type; originated with me four years ago. Name—Adian-tum Roedderii.

The Great Central Market.

It took several days last week for the business to recover from the setback reported last issue, but by the end of the week there was a radical change in the situation. The dark, cool weather, which had then been of some six days' duration, brought down the supply of stock, and after a time the flower buyers began to take hold again. At the first of the week there was little social activity and the demand was cut down even more sharply than the supply, but by the end of the week there was a good demand for every purpose for which flowers are used. Some

TOUSET and HALLIDAY

Best White and Yellow Mums of the Mid-season

We are shipping these two splendid Mid-season Mums by the thousands—can fill orders of any size on short notice. Don't be content to have the early kinds put on your orders while these fine later sorts are to be had for the ordering. Both Touset and Halliday are splendid shippers.

Medium, $15.00 per 100; large and fancy, $20.00 per 100

We also have large supplies of all other white, yellow and pink varieties that are in season.

Killarney

We have a new crop of Killarney just coming on, even better stock than that we have been shipping. Every buyer should try some of these. One order we feel certain will lead to others, for Killarney is the best seller there is in retail flower stores and there could be no more satisfactory stock than that we ship.

Beauties

Our Beauty supply is as steady as a clock—we always have them and the quality never is anything but the best. Don't wait until someone else fails to fill your order satisfactorily, but order of us in the first place.

Violets

The Violet season is again fully open—you can sell them steadily if you have them always in stock. We handle the cream of the Hudson River doubles and the fragrant home-grown singles. Place an order for daily shipment, or call on us for special quantities when needed.

Carnations

Carnations have been scarce, but we are again filling orders in good shape. Quality improves daily and supply is again on the increase.

Smilax Strings

Use Smilax in your decorations. We can supply it by the hundred or thousand. Plenty of Asparagus bunches.

wholesalers say there never was a time in their experience when the market was so tight in October as was the case Friday and Saturday of last week, and Monday of the present one, while on Sunday there was hardly any stock to be had at any price. It must not be considered, however, that the shortening of supply and the increase in the demand has resulted in any startling advance in prices. The fact is that prices now are not much higher than they were after first frost last year, when stock was being cut in considerably larger quantity by the average grower. Chrysanthemums undoubtedly are bringing a little better money, and quality for quality, carnations are higher than they were a year ago, but in general the rates previously quoted for the shipping grades still hold. Growers, however, will find that the reduction in supply has produced some improvement in the average prices, because on a tight market the buyers are not nearly so particular in the matter of quality, and short stock that would be rejected in times of liberal supply can be sold as of a grade higher than it really merits.

About the only real shortage the market has experienced has been of carnations. Of these there have not been enough to go around, but the pressure has not been extraordinary; the retailers simply have sold their customers something else wherever possible and have declined to bid against each other for the limited amount of stock which has been available. In the last year or two prices have not gone up nearly so easily as they have come down, and no matter how scarce stock may be, there is a distinct limit on prices. Indeed, the average house does not try to force prices beyond certain limits, knowing that more harm than good will result.

There are some growers who say all they need is a few days of warm weather to bring in plenty of carnations, but others assert that the plants were too small when housed and predict that it will be some time before the market is heavily supplied with stock. The situation is somewhat uncertain, but the prospects point to some increase in supply by the end of the week.

The chrysanthemum has become the leading flower in the market. Receipts are largely increased, but the stock is selling excellently, the shipping demand appearing to be heavier than it was at this time last year, and the local buyers are taking hold in good shape. There is enough stock so everyone can get what he wants, but prices are holding satisfactorily. The midseason sorts, such as Halliday and Touset, are now on in full force and the stock is fine.

With one or two houses the Beauty crop has increased, but others are cutting less than a week ago. The demand easily takes up the supply. While the crops of other roses have been reduced, there still are plenty of roses to be had, especially of the longest grades. The My Maryland never were better and can be had in quantity with stems two to three feet long. Splendid Killarney also are in good supply and fine long Richmond are sufficiently abundant for the present call. Mrs. Jardine is good with the few growers who have it in quantity. Maid has fallen distinctly in the rear, but Bride is keeping up the pace with other roses, because the supply of white is less than the supply of pink. White Killarney is a better rose than Bride, so far as size of flower and length of stem are concerned, but it is not quite as white as it might be. Kaiserin is approaching the end of its season.

The receipts of eastern violets are largely increased, the real shipping season having opened last week. There also are larger supplies of the locally grown singles. Considering the size of the supply, violets are selling well, probably better than they are in New York or not so many would reach this market.

One wholesale house received outdoor gladioli October 18, and a few dahlias and asters still are seen, but the market now has little else than the staples. Easter lilies still have to be cut green, but valley is equal to the requirements.

There is an adequate supply of all green goods, even asparagus strings, and smilax is plentiful. It is reported that boxwood is not selling the way the handlers would like.

city authorities that there is a considerable traffic in second-hand floral designs, which are sold by cemeteries outside the city limits to florists in the city. The wire frames and moss on these set pieces are used over and over again, and it is deleterious to the health of the community to have these pieces, which frequently have been in close proximity to the bodies of persons who died of contagious diseases, going back into other homes."

Club Meeting.

Members of the Chicago Florists' Club appear to like weekly meetings, which are in order during flower show preparations, for the first of the special weekly meetings, at the Union, October 15, brought out a large attendance. C. W. Johnson, who is in charge of the greenhouses at W. N. Rudd's Mt. Greenwood cemetery, and William Homburg, who is with the J. B. Deamud Co., were elected to membership. New names proposed were those of George Woodward, who is just starting in business for himself at Fiftieth street and Lake avenue; H. P. Gerhardt, grower at Wilmette; George Fisher, who is with Bassett & Washburn; Julius Shattls, the resident agent of Lion & Co.

It was stated that all members in good standing will receive a season ticket to the flower show, but that those who are in arrears for dues will miss the courtesies. The treasurer is Frank M. Johnson, 19 Randolph street.

The club will this year give a stag party during the flower show, instead of the annual banquet, a motion to that effect by H. N. Bruns being carried unanimously. Ed Enders is chairman of the club's standing committee on entertainment, which will have charge.

The club will conduct the cafe in the basement of the Coliseum show week.

H. E. Philpott, T. E. Waters and one other yet to be named will have charge. The booth for the sale of flowers also will be run by the club, with E. F. Winterson in charge of the finances, Frank Ayers, J. C. Bruckner, Ed Enders, E. Maers, Herman Schiller, Reinhold Schiller, John Poehlmann, Frank Pasternick, T. M. Vogel, N. J. Wietor, A. Zech, Ben Zalinger, William Homburg.

Report was made of the serious illness of the wife of a valued member, C. Frauenfelder, and on motion of E. F. Winterson a basket of fruit was sent as a message of sympathy.

Flower show matters are progressing splendidly. The plan of arrangement has been decided upon. The retailers promise to exhibit on a larger scale than usual, and this will go far with the public. Various Notes.

Miss Bell Story, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Story, of Story & Clark, the well known piano people, and Edgar B. Washburn, son of C. L. Washburn, were married Wednesday evening, October 20, in St. Paul's Episcopal church at Riverside. A reception followed, at the residence of the bride's parents. The affair was one of the largest of the season at the fashionable suburb. Mr. and Mrs. Washburn have gone to Colorado, and may continue their journey to California, returning about Thanksgiving. They then will reside at Hinsdale, in the new residence built by the groom's grandfather, O. P. Bassett, who will himself spend the winter in California.

Laurids Neilson, rose grower for Peter Reinberg, has invented a paraffin sulphur lozenge and burner that are said to be effective as a remedy for mildew, and is now placing them on the market. The lozenges burn slowly in the specially devised burner and each lozenge fumigates 3,000 feet of glass. They are said to have met with much success wherever tried.

The debutante season opened October 15 at Lake Forest with three large affairs. Frank Pasternick went out with three wagon-loads of bouquets for the E. Wienhoeber Co., and Samuelson and Fleischman each sent men, while several others had good orders.

J. C. Enders, secretary of the Wholesale Florists' Employees' Club, says the way the tickets are selling for the fourth annual reception and ball, to be given at Columbia hall, on the evening of October 27, indicates the most successful affair the club ever has given. Being assured of a large attendance, the club is leaving nothing undone which will add to the pleasures of its guests.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. has just bought fifteen additional acres adjoining Plant B, at Morton Grove. On the property is a large farmhouse, which it is intended to turn into a boarding-house for the employees. The company is planning to build some 800-foot houses next season.

Weiland & Risch are showing at the store a few blooms of a seedling rose raised on their place. It is white tinted pink and is a marvel for size and fullness of flower. They now have only two plants but will work up some stock.

Peter Reinberg and Mrs. Reinberg went to Dubuque, Ia., October 13, to attend a silver wedding anniversary of some friends. They returned October 18. Henry Kransz, the banker, and Mrs. Kransz accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Reinberg.

Henry Van Gelder states that Percy Jones, who suffered an attack of pleuropneumonia last week, is again somewhat better, but that he is not yet out of danger.

The A. L. Randall Co., having moved the order desk, has put in another telephone, the thirteenth on its private switchboard.

John Zech, who has quite a bit of trade in New Orleans and was down there last year, says that it really is All Souls' day that calls for flowers there, although All Saints' day gets the credit.

Norby & Hoffe, at Des Plaines, have two houses of Bonnaffon mums that are reported as specially fine.

Willie Abrahamson is at present in Denver.

Dendrobium Phalaenopsis is the latest addition to the list of orchids in season. C. W. McKellar says that while the cattleya still is the only orchid many buyers know, the sale for the others is steadily increasing.

Arthur Blome, of Paul Blome & Co., 554 North Clark street, has recovered from the indisposition caused by a severe cold.

F. Stielow, at Niles Center, is sending Kennicott Bros. Co. Mrs. George S. Kalb chrysanthemums. E. E. Pieser says this is his favorite variety, partly for the reason that if it wilts down through too much heat or bad air, cutting off the stems and setting away in a cool place will cause it to come back and look as fresh as ever.

F. F. Benthey is serving on jury in Judge Brentano's court, beginning October 18.

Frank Schramm, at Arlington Heights, who is well known for the big crop of fine Bonnaffon mums he has cut year after year, says he has none of that variety this season. In its place he has the small mums for cutting in sprays. The varieties are Klondyke, Baby and Diana, yellow, bronze and white.

Albert T. Hey, who now has the Hills place at Maywood, is sending roses, carnations and mums to Vaughan & Sperry.

is the case.

BOSTON.

The Market.

We are now getting clear and cooler weather. Frosts have cut off outdoor flowers, except in sheltered localities, and outdoor flowers, outside of a few dahlias and cosmos, are over. The supply of greenhouse stock has steadily grown and clearances are less satisfactory than a week ago. Chrysanthemums are not yet a drug and are selling out tolerably well, but are somewhat reduced in prices. Pacific, Pacific Supreme, Willowbrook, October Frost, Polly Rose, Ivory, Halliday and Monrovia are the varieties mostly seen. Pacific Supreme, which comes in season later than Glory of the Pacific, is of a decidedly better shade of pink and should prove valuable as an early pink.

Roses are abundant and not selling so well. The varieties moving the best are Beauties and Killarney, both white and pink. Richmond is not yet of good quality, while the supply of Kaiserin is steadily lessening. Carnations are now reaching the market in large numbers and are less easily disposed of. The various Enchantresses, Winona, Beacon, Fair Maid, Winsor and Queen are largely in evidence. Violets are now of good quality, and although singles predominate, a good many doubles are also seen. Lilies sell out well, also lily of the valley. Some good antirrhinum is coming in. Gladioli are getting scarce, but quite a few tuberoses and bunches of candytuft arrive. Cattleyas are getting quite abundant and there is now a good assortment of seasonable orchids. Gardenias are somewhat scarce. There is a

Various Notes.

William H. Elliott is handling an excellent line of chrysanthemum plants grown at his Brighton establishment. They are nice, bushy plants and sell well.

W. B. Goodenow, of Stoughton, is again on hand with some of the finest double violets yet seen. He grows many thousands of these and with great success.

The New England fruit show, which opened in Horticultural hall, October 19, is the most ambitious and finest exhibition of the kind ever held in the east. All the New England states are well mens, begonias, cinerarias, Dutch bulbous plants of all kinds, orchids, etc.

SUBJECT TO MARKET CHANGE.

Jackson Dawson, on his late western trip, collected and sent home to the Arnold Arboretum several tons' weight of hardy ferns.

An immense quantity of roses is handled daily at Park Street market by the salesmen for the J. A. Budlong & Sons Co., of Auburn, R. I. Killarney and Richmond are their leaders.

Edgar Bros., of Waverley, who are mum and sweet pea specialists, are cutting some extra fine mums at present. They have a nice lot of the best Englishingles.

Backer & Co., of Billerica, who are noted carnation specialists, have a scarlet seedling which is showing up finely and should make a favorable impression at the coming exhibitions.

Thomas F. Galvin has some attractive orchid displays in his Tremont street store at present. Orchids are being more and more used each year in Boston.

The American Peony Society has accepted the invitation to hold its annual show in Boston next June, when a fine exhibition is assured.

H. H. Barrows & Son are having a good call for their new Nephrolepis magnifica. They disposed of several wagonloads at the recent Brockton fair.

Following the New England fruit show comes the annual chrysanthemum show at Horticultural hall. A trophy of the Chrysanthemum Society of America will be awarded to the most meritorious exhibit of chrysanthemums in the exhibition, in addition to the regular prizes in schedule.

Remember the club meeting October 26 and the stereopticon bulb lecture by J. K. M. L. Farquhar. Chrysanthemums will be a feature on the exhibition table.

The additions to the Park Street market are now completed and the extra space afforded for flower storage is welcome.

The nominating committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society has posted the following list of nominees for officers for the ensuing year: President, Gen. S. M. Weld; vice-president, Walter Hunnewell; trustees, W. N. Craig, J. K. M. L. Farquhar, A. F. Estabrook, Nathaniel T. Kidder; nominating committee, Duncan Finlayson, Dr. C. S. Minot, Harry F. Hall, H. W. Rawson, Charles H. Breck. The committee on the foregoing nominations consisted of T. J. Grey, William Thatcher, George V. Fletcher and William Sim. W. N. CRAIG.

LISBON, O.—J. W. Scott built a large brick smokestack this fall, to take the place of an iron one.

NEW LONDON, CONN.—Edward A. Smith has completed the construction of a new greenhouse, and his range now comprises five houses. He grows violets, carnations and all other stock in general use, except roses. He has a particularly fine collection of hardy phlox and disposes of them to good advantage.

IVORY HAS COME

Ivory, the most popular White Chrysanthemum for making up, is now in season. Asters are over, Dahlias have received a severe chill, White Carnations are still scarce, Ivory is most welcome.

We offer a splendid stock of this White Chrysanthemum at $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 and $2.00 a dozen, with special quotations on large quantities.

This is simply a specialty for the last week in October. Our stock of all kinds of Chrysanthemums and other flowers is unexcelled.

Our service is the best. The favor of a trial order is requested.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

John Berger predicted that last week would end the dahlia season; predicted it on a red-hot, July-like day when it took courage and energy to predict anything, least of all the rout of the army of dahlias. Jack Frost kissed the dahlias October 12 and 13 and, while there were still some flowers coming into town from high ground and sheltered spots, the dahlia has ceased to be a factor in the cut flower market.

The chrysanthemum rules the day. There are varieties and colors and grades sufficient to satisfy the most fastidious flower buyer. The whites, probably the finest section, include Early Snow, Virginia Poehlmann, White Cloud, Mlle. Margaret Desjouis, Lynnwood Hall; the pinks include Amorita, Balsley, Pacific Supreme, Rosiere and perhaps Clementine Touse; the yellows, Robert Halliday, which is especially fine this season, some belated Golden Glow, even finer than their early sisters, and a new variety of merit with disputed name. Then there is a tint of gold which may be classed as bronze. The difference in the grade of chrysanthemums is marked. The best are in rather short supply at $2.50, occasionally $3, per dozen, while the ordinary grade, represented chiefly by the Glory of Pacific family, are hard to sell at from $4 to $6 per hundred, a difference truly.

The killing frost that disposed of everything except cosmos and the few hardy white flowers did not tone up the market until this week. Roses of the lower grade sold freely at distressingly low prices. Even carnations were in oversupply for a day or two, while general conditions were far below those of a week ago. An improvement appears to have set in this week, but its continuance is somewhat problematic.

Violets since the frost have been arriving in improved condition. Hightstown is sending some excellent stock and the local singles are improving. The Hudson river shipments, discontinued pending an improvement, are expected again before these lines see print.

Cattleyas are in strong supply, the balance being represented by the scouts only. The medium grade of valley is more in demand than the fancy stock. Mignonette, daisies, bouvardia, sweet peas and pansies have made their appearance.

Beauties are in shorter supply at firmer prices. Richmond sells poorly. White carnations are not as scarce as a week ago. The whole carnation list has recovered from the hot weather setback. Greens are rather dull.

West Grove.
